Spotlight On Health & Fitness

May Is Mental Health Month

By HARRY SHULMAN

May is Mental Health Month, an annual, nationwide observance dedicated to raising awareness about mental health.

Although people spend far more time addressing their physical health than their mental health, we know that mental illness is more common than cancer, lung and heart disease combined.

Each year during Mental Health Month, South Shore Mental Health joins thousands of organizations across the country in sending the message that the wellness of the mind is as important as the physical well-being of the body.

Tips To Improve Your Mental Health

Try the following tips which can help you feel good, both physically and mentally.

• Relax. Try meditating or taking a walk in a quiet setting. Give yourself time away from a hectic schedule to collect your thoughts and re-energize.

• Make a plan. Decide what tasks you need to complete for the week and make a plan for when and how to do them.

• Surround yourself with supportive people. Make plans with family members and friends, or seek out activities at which you can meet new people, such as a club, class or support group.

• Take care of your body. Taking care of yourself physically can improve your mental health. Be sure to eat nutritious meals, avoid cigarettes, drink plenty of water, get enough sleep and exercise regularly.

• Give of yourself. Volunteer your time and energy to help someone else. You'll feel good about doing something to help someone in need.

• Broaden your horizons. Explore a new hobby, plant a garden, plan a road trip, try a new restaurant, take dance lessons.

• Value yourself. Treat yourself with kindness and respect, and avoid self criticism. Take stock of the qualities you like about yourself, your accomplishments and abilities.

If you or someone you care about could benefit from talking to a licensed mental health professional, call South Shore Mental Health at 617-847-1950 or visit its Web site (www.ssmh.org).

Shulman is president and CEO of South Shore Mental Health.

Relax, Enjoy And Restore At Christine's Electrology, Day Spa

Christine's Electrology & Day Spa, 1073 Hancock St., Suite 401, Quincy Center, is a place for busy men and women to relax, enjoy and restore, says owner Christine Sardina.

A registered electrologist, electrology instructor, licensed aesthetician, and laser technologist, Sardina and her experienced, professional staff offer a variety of services, including facials, manicures, pedicures, massage, and hair removal by waxing, electrology or laser treatments.

The spa's casual yet elegant atmosphere is a wonderful antidote to the stressors of everyday life. "We invite you to step into our world of pampering and to discover what you've been missing," says Sardina, who has been in business for 17 years. "A saying we often use here is 'relax, enjoy and restore.'"

Initially, Sardina's business was exclusively electrology, but she expanded into a full-service day spa providing a complete range of treatments for the face and body. Facials are a popular service, and Christine's provides something appropriate for each kind of skin: European-style deep cleansing facials; facials for problem skin; and hydrating facials. Christine's also provides a number of body services: peppermint sea twist, which is a body wrap; paraffin treatments; anti-fatigue foot treatments; the Parafango treatment for cellulite; and botox and collagen treatments, both of which are performed by a physician.

Sardina recommends various massages her business offers. "Massages can do so much for your well-being," she says. "Having a weekly massage may seem indulgent, but research suggests that such a routine can have major health benefits," she says. Massage reduces blood pressure and boosts the immune system, eases the inflammation associated with sprains or other injuries, and aids those who struggle with insomnia. "Of course," Sardina adds, "massage is also for those who just wish to relax, enjoy and restore."

The spa is conveniently located near the highway and the Quincy Center MBTAs Red Line station. There is also ample parking.

Gift certificates are available for individual services, half day and full day spa.

Christine's Electrology & Day Sap is open Tuesday from 3 to 8 p.m., Wednesday through Friday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

To make an appointment call 617-786-1620. For more information, visit www.atchristinesdayspa.com.

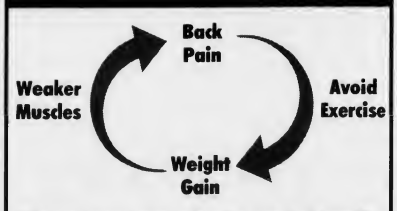
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.



A BETTER SMILE

With so many available treatment options, cosmetic dentistry virtually assures patients of better-looking smiles. If teeth are stained or discolored, there are in-office whitening procedures, as well as supervised at-home whitening systems, that safely and effectively whiten teeth. Cracked, chipped, or worn teeth can be restored to perfection with ultra-thin porcelain or composite veneers. Bonding also addresses minor tooth imperfections with the application of an enamel-like material that can be sculpted and polished to an ideal shape. And old, unsightly fillings can now be replaced with aesthetic filling materials that match tooth color. If you are dissatisfied with the look of your teeth, ask about a cosmetic procedure that can correct the problem.

We can perform many procedures to enhance your smile, your self-esteem, and your personal success. We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for experienced and comprehensive dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we provide the very best care with state-of-the-art technology. If you don't have a dentist at this time, we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Cosmetic gum surgery, or periodontal plastic surgery, can correct almost any deformity or gingival problems, from a "gummy" smile to a "long-in-the-tooth" smile.

Are you avoiding exercise because of back pain?

We can help you adopt a back-friendly lifestyle and feel great!

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

While most people do not like to think about their own death or that of a close family member, funeral pre-planning and pre-financing can ease possible problems associated with death. There are many reasons that people pre-plan their own funerals.

One of the most important is that pre-planning permits free choice. It makes one's wishes known; it eases the burden placed upon the family at a time when clear decisions may be difficult to make.

Pre-planning does away with any possible disagreement among the bereaved as to what to do and how much to spend. Pre-planning gives one a peace of mind in knowing arrangements have been made in advance.

If you have any questions concerning pre-planning, please feel free to contact us by phone or stop in for consultation. We will answer all questions honestly and frankly and in the strictest of confidence. At no obligation, of course . . .

1,500 Volunteers Team Up

Cleaner, Greener' Rids City Of 90 Debris Tons

More than 1,500 volunteers turned out last week to remove some 90 tons of debris from beaches, marshes, parks and open spaces in the interests of a Cleaner, Greener Quincy.

It was the largest number of volunteer workers in the 14-year history of the annual event.

"I am overwhelmed by the response this year," said Mayor William Phelan, who led his staff in the cleanup of the Hancock Cemetery and McIntyre Mall in Quincy Center.

"It's incredible how much of a difference that we have all made in just one day. I want to thank all those who helped make this day such a rousing success."

Phelan wound up his day cooking 'burgers and hot dogs for more than 1,000 volunteers who stuck around for the Mayor's Appreciation Barbecue at the Richard J. Koch Family Park & Recreation Complex.

Major cleanup sites included the Hough's Neck

Promises No Layoffs, Cuts In Services

Phelan Sends 'Lean' $204.5M Budget To Council

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Mayor William Phelan Monday night presented what he called a "lean, conservative" $204.5 million budget for fiscal 2004, which he claims will result in no layoffs or changes in services.

The mayor's proposed budget would be a five percent increase over his proposed $194 million blueprint for fiscal 2003.

Despite large cuts in local aid and a poor economy, Phelan said the city "made careful, reasoned, and forward thinking decisions on many tough issues that confront us all - and we are reaping the dividends of those decisions."

Phelan, displaying an optimistic view of the current fiscal situation, said: "As you will soon see, this budget is lean, conservative, and responsive to the needs and expectations of our residents. In a nutshell: no layoffs, no significant reduction in services."

Phelan's budget calls for a 5 percent boost in spending on education, as well as an increase in funds for public safety.

Under the plan:

• The school budget would increase more than $3 million, to $65.3 million. This will allow the city to pay for negotiated pay increases and keep class sizes small.

• The combined police and fire budget would amount to $34.5 million. The city would hire 22 firefighters to replace those who plan to leave. In addition, $600,000 has been allocated to overtime for the fire department.

• A $4.7 million cut in state aid, which is almost $7 million less than what was originally slated to come into the city last year.

The mayor's budget proposal increases taxes the maximum amount allowed under Proposition 2 1/2. Phelan indicated that he would not seek an override.

In addition, the city decreased its workforce by approximately 100 employees. Currently, there are approximately 872 city employees, down from 974 last year.

"We tightened our belts in a hundred unseen ways, becoming leaner and more efficient, doing more with less," he said.

During his presentation, Phelan said he wants the city to build up its stabilization fund, which he called "dangerously underfunded."

When he came into office in last year, Phelan said the city was faced with many obstacles, including unpaid bills and decreasing revenues.

Adopting the early retirement incentive, restructuring the debt associated with the former Quincy Hospital, and cutting spending helped the city weather the storm, he said.

The mayor also indicated that the city could raise an additional $800,000 in rev-

Police, DPW Pay Raises

Council Approves Funding For Employee Contracts

The city council Monday night approved a request by Mayor William Phelan to fund the pay raises of certain city workers, including police, library, and public works employees.

The appropriation - totaling more than $111,000 – will go to fund pay raises that were delayed almost six months and were retroactive to November 15, 2002.

An appropriation request must come from the mayor to fulfill the contracts.

Thomas Largey, the mayor's director of operations, called the delay an "oversight."

Council President Dan Raymondi said the mayor has known about the situation for months.

"I don't know what to call this but I wouldn't call it an oversight," he said.

The contracts include a 1 percent pay raise, or $65,308, to be paid in total for the contract of the Quincy Patrol Officers Association. Also, approximately $11,000 is to be paid to fulfill the pay raises for the city employees of the Quincy Library Staff Association.

In addition, pay raises will go out to DPW workers of the Public Employees' Local Union 1139 of the Laborers' International.

Over 70 Attend Crime Watch Meeting

Residents, Businesses Want More Police Presence In Quincy Center Area

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Both residents and business owners want more police presence in the downtown area.

That message was delivered during the inaugural meeting of the Quincy Center Crime Watch last week attended by more than 70 persons who jammed the second floor conference room at City Hall.

Sponsored by Council President Dan Raymondi, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley, the meeting gave residents the opportunity to voice their concerns over the issue of public safety in Quincy Center.

Police Chief William Falco and Crime Prevention Officer Bob Hanna attended the meeting and received an earful from those in attendance.

"We are frustrated, we are living in fear," said Quincy Center resident Tom Berry. "The last five years it's been going down something terrible."

Many in attendance voiced concerns over the number of social service agencies in the city, as well as a perceived increase in the number of vagrants.

"I remember when Quincy was a great place to shop and enjoy, but someone has to wake up and do something," said lifelong Quincy resident Florence Weeks. "Now, we have a bunch of derelicts roaming the city." She said she intends to move out of the city this summer due to public safety concerns.

Despite complaints from several residents, Falco maintained that Quincy is one of the safest cities in the country. He promised those in attendance that the department soon would take steps to increase police presence in the area.

"It is crystal clear that the people want community police officers," said Falco. "I assure you that we are going to take steps."

Many residents expressed anxiety over the latest report of an armed robbery on Coddington St. near the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Last week, police arrested an 18-year-old male, charging him with armed robbery, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, intimidation of a witness and malicious damage to property.

In April, two Quincy High School students were stabbed at the Quincy Center MBTA station. Last year, a city custodian was beaten to death near the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The mayor's office, as reported in last week's Quincy Sun, announced that the Quincy Center Task Force would make recommenda

Rejects Changes By Council

Phelan Alters Bond Proposal For Open Space Plan

In response to the city council's concerns over his original $10 million bond proposal, Mayor William Phelan has agreed to alter his plans and offer separate measures for each portion of his open space plan.

At Monday night's council meeting, the mayor proposed issuing three separate bond issues for his open space plan. The bonds include $5 million for open space, $4 million for parks and recreation and $1 million for improvements to the salt marsh wetlands at Broad Meadows.

But Councillor Frank McCauley objected to the proposals, effectively killing debate on the items until the next council meeting.

Thomas Largey, the mayor's director of operations, said Phelan was disappointed with McCauley's move.

"Certainly, it delays those bonds going into a committee," Largey said. "There is a consensus that this initiative is positive, so any delay is worrisome. But we are confident that we can reach a consensus and move the project forward in a timely

The Meanest Mother

It's been 32 years since we first came across an article entitled "The Meanest Mother."

We printed it as a Mother's Day tribute in 1971 and for many readers, it brought back fond memories of their own mother.

We don't know who wrote it. But from time to time we get requests to reprint it.

A few readers have taken issue with a part or two of the article.

But we think it is still appropriate today and a tribute to all the "mean mothers" everywhere.

A shortened version goes like this:

I had the meanest mother in the whole world.

While other kids ate candy for breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs or toast. When others had coke and candy for lunch, I had to eat a sandwich. As you guessed, my supper was different from the other kids, too.

But at least I wasn't alone in my suffering. My sister and two brothers had the same mean mother as I did.

My mother insisted upon knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on the chain gang. She had to know who our friends were and what we were doing. She insisted that if we said we'd be gone one hour that we be gone one hour or less -- not one hour and one minute.

The worst is yet to come. We had to be in bed by nine each night and up early the next morning. We couldn't sleep until noon like our friends. So, while they slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work.

We had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. I believe she laid awake nights thinking up mean things to do to us.

She always insisted upon our telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed us. It nearly did.

By the time we were teenagers, she was much wiser and our life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of a car for us to come running. She embarrassed us to no end by making our dates and friends come to the door to get us.

I forgot to mention, while my friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 18. Fifteen, that is, if you dated only to go to a school function and that was only once or twice a year.

My mother was a complete failure as a mother. None of us has ever been arrested. Each of my brothers served his time in the service of this country.

And, whom do we have to blame for this terrible way we turned out? You're right. Our mean mother.

Look at all the things that we missed. We never got to march in a protest parade, nor take part in a riot, burn draft cards, and a million and one things that our friends did. She forced us to grow into God-fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as background, I am trying to raise my three children. I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean.

Because, you see, I thank God. He gave me the meanest mother in the whole world.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of Adams Street looking west as it rises to the foot of Whitwell Street. On the right is the driveway to the old Crane estate. For 150 years this road, as part of the Boston to Plymouth Turnpike, was the only road connecting the South Shore to the city. A mile marker indicating nine miles to Boston, placed here in 1730, is still up the road on the left. Used for farmland in early years this area became home to the estates of Quincy's most successful business leaders beginning around the start of the 20th century. Some of the men who built their homes here were Henry Faxon, Theophilus King, William Dewson, Joseph Sturtevant, Perley Barbour and Percy Yerxa. It remains one of the most prestigious neighborhoods in the city.

Using Hotel Tax Money For Parks, Open Space Sound Investment

Mayor Phelan's proposal to spend monies from the hotel/motel tax for park renovation and open space acquisition is a sound investment in the future of our city.

These monies, collected from non-residents staying at Quincy's hotels, will benefit Quincy residents for generations to come. Improvements at our city's parks, especially Adams Field and Veterans' Memorial Stadium, will give our children an opportunity to play at quality fields and allow our city to draw events and increase tourism. A direct example of that is the upcoming 2003 Babe Ruth World Series that will draw thousands of people to Quincy. We cannot attract events with poor facilities.

Our City has the opportunity to make a great impression when hosting an international tournament this summer. Let's put our best foot forward and put on a great show for the thousands of people that will visit our parks and city.

The Way Up Offers Youth Church Programs On Sunday Evenings

This is the time of year when a good number of parents, Sunday School teachers and clergy become concerned at the visible loss of so many young people from church activities because the kids are involved with baseball teams which practice or play games on Sunday mornings or early afternoons.

Now at least one Quincy youth program is doing something about it.

THE WAY UP, a local youth ministry which is based at First Baptist Church of Wollaston, will offer "youth church" programs on Sunday evenings at the church so that aspiring baseball players and others will not have to miss going to church.

The services will begin Sunday, May 25, at 6:30 p.m. They will include a youth-oriented worship service and a brief Sunday School lesson, followed by recreation and refreshments. No service is planned for May 11, Mother's Day, or May 18, because many of the kids in THE WAY UP are making a day drip that day to a camp.

Parents who would like their boys or girls to participate should call the co-directors of THE WAY UP, Rev. Gene or Patti Langevin, at 617-268-6669. It is important to let the leaders of THE WAY UP know in advance if a child or a teen is planning to attend.

As with all of the programs at THE WAY UP, transportation is provided for children or teens who need it. THE WAY UP works with kids aged 7-17. If youth of quite different ages show up, two different programs will be offered so that those who attend will be with kids who are approximately their own age. Parents who would also like to attend are certainly welcome but they too should let THE WAY UP know in advance. There will be a nominal charge to help with the cost of refreshments except for those who cannot afford to pay.

A special invitation is extended to children and young people from other community churches who are also caught in this annual conflict between church and baseball.

THE WAY UP, which serves kids from throughout the city, has been providing activities for youth and their parents in the Quincy area for the past 39 years. Kids who regularly attend THE WAY UP have often been referred there by parents, churches or public agencies including the public schools.

Some of the other program offered by THE WAY UP this spring are weekday activity clubs which include wrestling, basketball, crafts and refreshments; video showings of certain films that are of special interest to youth; free guitar lessons; tutoring for kids who need help with their homework or special school projects; an afternoon art group; and various counseling groups. Summer activities will include swimming trip to public beaches.

On Sunday, May 18, some of the kids in THE WAY UP (and some of their parents) will make a day trip to Grotonwood, the American Baptist camp in Groton, to see if they would like to attend that camp this summer. Some campership aid is available for the week-long summer sessions.

All of the activities of THE WAY UP are open to youth of all religious backgrounds but, for those who are particularly interested in church-related activities, THE WAY UP also offers Sunday morning breakfast, Sunday School, church, youth choir and a Sunday afternoon lunch and youth group. Transportation is provided for all of these activities. Parents interested in any of the activities of THE WAY UP should call either of the co-directors at 617-268-6669.

New Tax Rate City's Highest

This Week
44 Years Ago

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa announced that the tax rate for 1959 will be $74, the highest in the city's history and an increase of $4.20 over the previous year.

Chief factors in the hike were budgetary increases in railroad subsidies $200,531, overlay $145,000, schools $355,000, salary increases $470,000, MDC charges $35,000, county taxes $203,000 and debt charges $146,000.

The City Council appropriated $250,000 from the excess and deficiency fund for the express purpose of holding down the tax rate increase.

PRIVATE RUBBISH COLLECTION

The City Council voted by a narrow margin of 5-4 to authorize Mayor Della Chiesa to have Quincy's rubbish collected by a private company under contract to the city.

Voting against the authorization were Councillors Joseph E. Brett, Charles L. Shea, John J. Quinn and James R. McIntyre. Shea charged that inefficient supervision was responsible for the uneconomical operation of the Sanitation Division.

"Nobody wants a survey of the division because it would show up those in charge for what they are – inefficient," said Shea.

Voting for the authorization were Councillors Carl W. Anderson, Edna B. Austin, Thomas S. Burgin, William C. Ellis and David S. McIntosh.

McIntosh suggested that the city give priority to the question of an incinerator now that the school building program and the hospital addition were completed.

SEEK BUS STRIKE END

Rep. Charles L. Shea was circulating petitions urging Gov. Foster Furcolo to invoke the Slicher Act forbidding strikes by public utilities workers in an effort to end a work stoppage at the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Col that had gone on for 143 days.

Meanwhile, the City Council moved to revoke the Eastern Mass franchise for what Councillor Ellis called "its completed disregard for the public."

Rev. Alicia Corea Bids Farewell At HN Congregational

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

She was the first women in Quincy to be ordained a minister.

Sunday, hundreds of friends and family gathered in the capacity filled Houghs Neck Congregational Church to hear her give her last sermon.

The Rev. M. Alicia Corea, who along with her late husband, Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea served for 56 years at the church. She was saying farewell on retiring as pastor. Their son, Dr. William C. Corea led the worship.

While awaiting the service to begin, Carol Lee Griffin, retired assistant superintendent for Quincy Public Schools said "She will be missed more than anyone knows."

Speaking about the measure of life, Rev. Corea said "we measure by making certain plans, watching our children grow," but added no matter what, our lives are but a "brief moment in the history of the world."

She said life is not measured by its length, things or belongings, the richest are not the happiest or greatest. She quoted Tolstoy who told a story about a man who wanted to own lots and lots of property. He kept wanting more and more until one day he just collapsed and died. They dug a seven foot grave to bury him...and that was all he needed.

Rev. Corea said "every life has a purpose and said we should turn to prayer as God's love is within all of us and our transgressions are forgiven."

She asked if anyone could remember those who won awards, Nobel and Pulitzer prizes through the years. She said applause dies, awards tarnish and achievements are forgotten."

The ones you really remember she said are the ones who made you feel special, those who inspired us, and added the real meaning of life is growth of mind, soul and building of our lives into a plan or a purpose greater than ourselves.

REV. DALE HEMPEN, minister Southeast Area Massachusetts Conference, United Church of Christ, releases Rev. Alicia Corea from her vows as pastor of Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

She thanked the parishioners and friends who since 1947 welcomed "Peter and me who were just a couple of kids in our 20's, supported my ordination, and in 1952 when our son Bill was born. And also through the illness of Peter who thought he could win the battle, but it was not God's will."

Just before the serving of communion after his mother spoke, Bill hugged her and whispered in her ear in a touching scene on the altar.

The Rev. Dale A. Hempen, Minister, Southeast Area, Massachusetts Conference United Church Christ presented the Litany Of Retirement. In recognition of the end of Rev. Corea's service to the church. She recited the vows of release.

Rev. Corea then said: "I thank the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, its members and friends for their love, the kindness, and support shown to me, my husband and my son, and all our family, through all the years of my life among you.

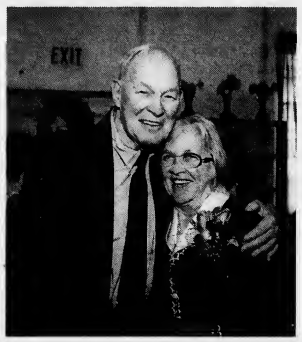
"I ask forgiveness for the mistakes I have made and express my gratitude for the ways my leadership has been accepted, especially since Thanksgiving Day, 2001 (the day the late Dr. Corea passed away.) As I leave this ministry, I carry with me all that I have learned here."

Later downstairs in the church hall, a reception was held where hundreds gathered to hear some of her friends recall their lives at the church.

Beth Little recalled the many events from baptism to weddings performed by Alicia.

Dorothy Sparks said "how do you measure 56 years in two or three minutes?" Calling Alicia a "direct route to God, she said Alicia can make you closer to God than anyone I know."

Joan Kirby said she was told to make the speeches brief and unemotional" She said "brief is easy, unemotional? I can do that". Each one who spoke always ended with the words, "we love you."



Rev. Corea was presented with a beautiful Seiko clock and thanking all of her friends for the love they displayed said facetiously, her love for them was "right back atcha," and that it had been a "shared experience."

Arden Schofield, organist for the church for many ears played one of Alica's favorite songs, Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 1 We all know it as "Full Moon and Empty Arms."

On the cover of the program book, composed by Peter Johnston, the words so apropos of Alicia were: "She speaks with wisdom and faithful instruction is on her tongue." (Taken from Proverb 3136.) The last words in the booklet were: "May God keep you in his care from this day until forever after."

REV. ALICIA COREA raises her arms in a gesture of welcome to those attending the reception after her final service. With her is her son, Dr. William Corea.

ARDEN SCHOFIELD, organist at Houghs Neck Congregational Church for many years, gives Rev. Alicia Corea a hug after playing Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 1, one of her favorite songs, during the reception.

LONGTIME FRIENDS Uncle Sam Rounseville, his wife, Jean Kenney, and Dr. Carol Lee Griffin join Rev. Alicia Corea at the reception.

Veterans' Memorial Flags Sought For Flag Day Parade

Families of deceased veterans can drop off their flags at the Keohane Funeral Home at 785 Hancock St., Wollaston. The flag will be placed on the "Quincy Salutes its Veterans" float in the Flag Day Parade.

"By displaying your loved one's flag in the parade, you can help us pay tribute to those who sacrificed to help protect our flag and the freedoms it represents. Your flag will be returned to you and will be given the utmost care while it is in the possession of the parade committee," said Ed Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership, one of the organization's sponsoring the parade.

The Flag Day Parade will be held Saturday, June 14, starting at 7 p.m. in Quincy Center and proceeding down Hancock Street before turning onto Merrymount Parkway and ending in Merrymount Park.

The parade will be followed by a flag-raising ceremony at Pageant Field with a 30-foot-by-60-foot version of Old Glory. The celebration will culminate with a 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek.

"The sacrifices of today's veterans are now being witnessed every night on television. It leads to a better sense of appreciation of those who served us before television brought home such vivid frontline images," said Tom Koch, chairman of the Quincy Flag Day Parade Committee.

"The veterans' flag display is our way of showing our appreciation for the sacrifices of the men and women who served our country that are no longer with us."

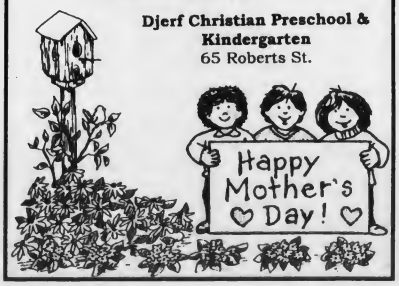
33rd Sidewalk Festival To Be Held July 17-19

Hancock Street in downtown Quincy will be closed to vehicular traffic Thursday through Saturday, July 17, 18 and 19, for the 33rd anniversary of the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association's annual Summer SideWalk Festival.

While the local vendors and crafters display their wares in the open air, each year two early evening programs will provide musical entertainment that has annually proved to be a family favorite.

Each day lunchtime strollers and visiting families will be entertained by a short musical program. Interactive games and fun for the young and old alike will continue through the three days.



Some limited space is available for crafters and non-competing vendors.

For further details about festival participation, call the QCBPA office at 617-471-2323.

Quincy is surrounded by smoke-free communities. Restaurants and bars in Boston, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton and Hingham protect their employees and patrons from the dangers of secondhand smoke while working or dining out.

Quincy workers and patrons deserve the same protection.

A recent survey of 1000 registered voters in Quincy showed that most people prefer smoke-free workplaces, including restaurants and bars.

Please show your support for smoke-free workplaces in Quincy. For more information call (617) 471-8400 x 176.

Want More Police Presence In Quincy Center Area

-tions at the meeting. The recommendations were to address crime and other problems in the downtown area.

But no recommendations were made. Falco said the group was not able to complete its work in time for the meeting.

Falco promised residents that the task force would soon make its recommendations available to the public and the city council.

Mayor William Phelan - who put together a 12-person task force six months ago to address public safety in the downtown area - did not have a representative at the meeting.

Raymondi criticized Phelan for not attending and said the high turnout demonstrates that many Quincy residents do not feel safe.

"If you don't feel safe then that is a problem this city needs to address," Raymondi told residents.

Currently, the police department uses several community police officers in the Quincy Center area on a rotating basis, Falco said. But Gutro said that policy does not go far enough. Residents should have a specific officer assigned to the downtown area because they "deserve a name and a face," he said.

Nancy Jolly, president of the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association, said she is "terribly disturbed" at the number of social service agencies in the downtown area.

"This is the heart of the city and it appears as though it is being abandoned, " she said. Jolly added that it is important for the police department to assign a community police officer to patrol the neighborhoods and sidestreets in the downtown area.

Hanna urged residents to pay attention to their surroundings and encouraged them to report any suspicious activity to the police.

"Many people feel intimidated by calling the police, but we encourage people to call the police, no matter how insignificant it may seem," said Hanna. "You folks are the eyes and ears of the community."

Hanna said Crime Watch meetings are important because they allow residents and police to share information.

"Today, we have become such a mobile society that we don't even know the people across the street," Hanna told residents.

Another Crime Watch meeting has been scheduled for May 29.

Salvation Army Extends Adult Day Health Program To Asian Seniors

About 35 seniors from the Asian community were recently introduced to the services of the Adult Day Health Program (ADHP) at the Salvation Army, 9 Baxter St.

The meeting was arranged by Kao T. Li, director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., and Frank Poo, Asian outreach employee for South Shore Elder Services.

Guests toured the facility and were introduced to the program through the aid of a translator.

Hugo Wiberg, director of ADHP, said the Salvation Army is making a concerted effort to extend its hand to the Asian community .

"This is an opportunity for the Salvation Army to serve the entire population of Quincy," said Wiberg. "We are well aware of the growing Asian population and want to make the effort to include them in our programs."

Wiberg said he will work with Li in seeking out Asian volunteers to aid seniors who want to take advantage of ADHP's services. Volunteers may serve as translators or conduits to the Asian community, he said.

Thus far, existing seniors enrolled in ADHP have been very receptive to the idea of having new Asian friends.

"I am very gratified and heartened by the response of our seniors, because sometimes change equals stress in life," said Wiberg. "But our seniors have welcomed them wholeheartedly."

For more information contact Wiberg at 617-479-3040.

ASIAN OUTREACH – Kao, T. Li (left), director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., is helping the Salvation Army to extend its services to Asian seniors. Li recently met with the Salvation Army's Major Doug Jones (2nd from left), Hugo Wiberg, director of the Adult Day Health Program and Frank Poo, Asian Outreach Worker for South Shore Elder Services.

enue from an increase in certain fees from the Clerk, Health and Inspectional Services Departments.

Those increases were not factored in to revenue projections, he said.

Council President Dan Raymondi said Phelan's budget will hurt taxpayers.

"It appears that the mayor wants to substantially increase water and sewer rates, which is not a good thing for the ratepayers," said Raymondi. "And the mayor is going to hike real estate taxes to the fullest extent of the law. In these trying fiscal times this is not what the taxpayers need. It is imperative that the finance committee do its job and scrutinize every spending measure."

Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley said he is skeptical of the mayor's budget numbers.

"I want to make sure this isn't smoke and mirrors," said Hanley. "We need to go through the budget process and make sure there is no doom and gloom behind the mayor's sunny days. But I intend to keep an open mind."

The city council will begin to review the proposed budget Saturday. The council has the authority to approve, reject or cut proposals. The body cannot add to the budget.

Gas Co. Starts Work On Squantum Streets

Key Span Energy Delivery began work Monday on the expansion of the natural gas distribution system in the Dorchester and Trevore Streets section of Squantum.

The work will be performed between the hours of 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. and will continue for five weeks.

The roads will be open to the public but parking may be limited while the work is being done. Work may require some excavation near the foundations of nearby homes.

A construction foreman will be on site to address parking needs and to notify customers of any interruption in service and make proper arrangements to relight appliances.

Any questions about the project should be addressed to Lynne M. Holton, community relations coordinator, at 781-466-5100.

SPRING CAR CARE

Warm Weather Drivers Will Have New Challenges

You've survived winter's ice-covered roads and frigid temperatures, but spring and summer bring unique driving challenges. To help motorists handle the primary seasons of auto-travel, AAA Southern New England offers the following information:

Flooded Roads:

The heavy rains of spring and summer can quickly lead to dangerous flood conditions. AAA offers the following tips for motorists dealing with such conditions.

Check traffic reports for the location of flooded roads.

Approach standing water with extreme caution. Do not attempt to drive through deep water or on bridges and roads that are heavily flooded.

Even if you are confident that your car can make it through the flooded area, it is still possible that water could be forced into your engine compartment, damaging or destroying your engine.

If there is a risk of flash flood, avoid traveling on roads that run along streams or drainage ditches.

Pothole Blues:

With spring comes baseball, flowers and potholes. A direct hit to a pothole can cause vehicle alignment to be thrown off and can damage steering components, tires and wheels. To prevent or minimize damage from potholes:

Drive slowly on pothole-filled roads.

If there is sufficient time and space, maneuver around the pothole but do not swerve wildly.

Slow down as you approach a pothole, but when directly over the hole, do not brake. Applying the brakes causes a car's weight to shift to the front wheels and can increase damage from the impact.

When driving on pothole-filled roads, hold the steering wheel firmly to avoid losing control.

Be aware that a puddle could be a pothole in disguise.

Construction Safety:

Warmer weather signals the start of many road construction projects. To safely navigate through construction zones:

Slow to a safe speed, which is usually posted through the construction area.

Obey all signs and signals.

Watch for pedestrians and work vehicles.

Change lanes with caution.

Expect sudden stops.

Heat Dangers:

Under extreme heat, the temperature inside a parked car can reach more than 190 degrees in just 30 minutes. When dealing with such dangerously high temperatures:

Don't leave children or animals unattended in a car, not even for a short period of time.

When parked, use a sun shield to cover the windshield to minimize heat build-up and to help protect the car's interior. Cover metal and plastic parts on seat belts and child safety seats to prevent burns.

Open the vehicle's doors and let the interior cool off for a few minutes before entering.

Oil Beats The Heat:

Motor oil does more than lubricate an engine's moving parts. It also plays a significant role in helping beat the summer heat. As oil coats hot engine parts, it absorbs heat caused by friction and combustion. When the oil drains to the bottom of the engine, the heat is dissipated by air flowing under the car. Maintaining a proper level of fresh oil is essential to protect a car's vital components.

Get The Most Miles Per Gallon

With today's high gas prices, there are some simple things you can do to get the most miles per gallon from your vehicle.

Lighten Up. Although you may be tempted to bring everything you own on vacation, the less you pack, the lighter your car, the better your fuel mileage. This also goes for roof racks, storage pods and bike racks. Once you arrive at your destination, removing roof top carriers and bike rack will allow you to regain lost miles per gallon.

Check your tire pressure. Under inflated tired can reduce fuel economy by .05 percent for every one pound of pressure under the manufacturer's specification.

Breathe. Clean air filters allow your car's engine to breathe more efficiently. Check and change your air filter on a regular basis. Driving with a dirty air filter can reduce engine power and fuel economy by as much as ten percent.

Plan ahead. By planning your trips and errands you can reduce the amount of fuel you use.

Watch your speed. Keeping your speed under control will maximize your fuel economy. Setting your cruise control at 62 miles per hour can improve gas mileage by as much as 15 percent compared to driving at 75 miles per hour. Using cruise control can also improve fule mileage by maintaining even pressure on the accelerator.

No sudden moves. Practice driving as if there is a raw egg between your foot and the gas pedal. Taking it easy and avoiding quick stops and starts will improve mileage and reduce wear and tear on your car.

Avoid Waiting. If you are waiting in a line of vehicles more than several minutes and aren't moving at all, shut off the engine. Restarting the engine is more fuel efficient than allowing the car to sit and idle. By the octane fuel recommended by the vehicle manufacturer. Using octane fuel higher than recommended by the manufacturer not only wastes money but can actually cause engine problems.

Surveys Rank Conway As Bay State's Largest Private Firm

Two national surveys have again ranked Jack Conway & Co. among the top 100 real estate companies in the United States, and affirmed Conway's position as the largest privately owned realty firm in Massachusetts.

Norwell-based Conway was rated 77th in both the number of sales and transactions in National Relocation and Real Estate Magazine's annual Power Broker survey, and placed 75th in sales volume and 74th in closed transactions in the Real Trends 500 Report.

Conway reported 6,441 transaction sides, and closed more than $1.35 billion in sales during 2002. In both surveys, considered the most influential in the residential real estate industry, Conway posted nearly a 10 percent improvement in national position over last year's rankings.

"Naturally, we are very pleased at the outcome of these surveys," said Chairman Jack Conway. "We all have worked very hard during 2002 to attain these results, and we are pleased to have been so recognized."

The ratings also indicated that Jack Conway & Co. is the Bay State's largest privately owned company, and the largest independent among five New England states - Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

"Most of our competitors are franchised conglomerates owned by national interests," Conway explained. "It is nice to be local, independent and successful."

In addition to residential sales offices, Conway operates a mortgage company, Conway Financial Services, full-service relocation department, commercial and business brokerage, property management division, referral registry and educational center.

Jack Conway & Co. was founded in a small storefront in Hingham Square in 1957. Today, the company has more than 650 agents in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Understanding, Simplifying The Home Mortgage Process

Bank Of Canton Offering Mortgage Seminars May 14, 17

The Bank of Canton is offering two no-charge, no-obligation information seminars on home mortgages during May.

Jeanne Roche, assistant vice president and branch manager of The Bank of Canton's Randolph office, said the seminars will be held on different dates at different bank locations.

The first seminar will be held Wednesday, May 14, at the Bank of Canton's Randolph office, 67 North Main St., from 6 to 8 p.m.

The second seminar will be held Saturday, May 17 at the Bank's Quincy Office, 275 Quincy Ave., from 2 to 4 p.m.

Attendance is free-of-charge and open to all.

"We're encouraging people to come to these seminars and find out about important topics like the role of the Realtor; the mortgage qualification process; what to expect from a closing attorney, and much more," Roche said.

"I want to stress that our guests at the seminars don't have to be Bank of Canton customers. We can help with first mortgages, as well as with refinancing ones that were originated elsewhere."

All guests will be entered in a drawing to win a $25 Bank of Canton Savings Account Certificate. In addition, The Bank is offering a $300 credit toward closing costs of any of its current mortgage programs.

Seating is limited. To reserve a space at one of the seminars, call The Bank of Canton's Randolph branch office at (781) 963-4600.

Dating from its incorporation as a mutual savings bank in 1835, The Bank of Canton has served the community for nearly 170 years. While continuing to be a source for home mortgages and commercial lending programs, The Bank of Canton also offers customers a full range of home/consumer loans, commercial services, and personal banking options, including investment services through Infinex Financial Group.

In addition to its main office at 557 Washington St. in Canton, branches are located at: 259 Turnpike Street. (Route 138) in Canton; 275 Quincy Ave., Quincy, and 67 North Main St. in Randolph.

New Research Tracks Attitudes About Energy Efficiency

A recently released survey reveals that 92 percent of consumers in the Northeast believe that energy efficiency should play a larger role in helping to reduce our nation's dependence on foreign oil.

Commissioned by the Northeast Energy Star lighting and appliance initiative, the new research tracks the attitudes about energy efficiency, alternative energy and awareness of energy saving products of more than 500 homeowners in Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York (Long Island), Rhode Island and Vermont. Research was conducted by Ulrich Research Services, Inc. of Orange Park, Fla.

"With rising energy costs making headlines there has been surprisingly little debate on the role of saving energy in addressing this important national issue," said Linda Russo, spokesperson for the Northeast Energy Star lighting and appliance initiative.

"The amazing number of people who want energy efficiency to be part of the solution to this national crisis tells an important story. It shows a willingness to adapt new behaviors and a desire to pitch in personally to make a difference."

The greatest concern to consumers in the Northeast is finding ways to conserve home heating fuel which 85 percent of all respondents ranked "very important," followed by electricity (78 percent), and then water (66 percent).

The most common energy saving practice is the tried and true practice of turning off lights that are not in use.

"The Energy Star lighting and appliance initiative uses technology to offer new ways to look at saving money on the energy costs associated with lighting," Russo said. "We promote use of compact fluorescent light bulbs (CFLs) and fixtures that use two-thirds less energy and last up to 10 times longer than incandescent models. Energy Star qualified light bulbs and fixtures make a big difference in a consumer's electric bill."

Currently, 40 percent of all survey respondents had at least one CFL bulb in their home. The combined impact of this effort is significant. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), if every U.S. household makes their next light bulb purchase a CFL, the nation would save up to $800 million on its annual energy bill and 8.4 billion kilowatt hours in electricity. That's enough to power more than 808,000 U.S. homes for one year and the reduction in air pollution will be equal to removing 1.2 million cars from the road.

"If everyone does their part, just changing a light bulb has a major impact," Russo said.

Northeasterners also showed a willingness to make bigger changes in an effort to help the environment. Forty percent of survey respondents in all five states surveyed would consider alternative energy sources such as solar or wind power.

In fact, 50 percent of those in the baby boomer age group (ages 35 to 54) showed a willingness to try the new power sources. The major barrier to adopting alternative energy is the initial expense involved in installation.

Efforts to save energy also include washing only full loads of laundry and dishes, lowering the heat, hanging clothes outside and buying energy efficient appliances. People under the age of 35 have embraced energy efficient appliances in the greatest number with 65 percent of all respondents owning at least one Energy Star qualified appliance.

Primarily, the survey shows this to be a financial decision, rather than a moral one. Forty-nine percent of respondents feel it is more important to save money on their energy bills, while 29 percent believe saving energy is a priority. Seventeen percent of people feel these are equally important concerns.

Indeed, efficient appliances do save money. For example, Energy Star qualified clothes washers clean clothes using 50 percent less energy than standard washers. Compared to a 10-year-old model, an Energy Star qualified washer can save up to $120 per year on your utility bills. Additional Energy Star qualified appliances and lighting products include refrigerators, dishwashers, room air conditioners, dehumidifiers, ceiling fans, CFLs and light fixtures.

Kristen Stewart Completes Advanced Real Estate Training

Kristen Stewart recently completed an intensive education and training program sponsored by Jack Conway & Co., the Bay State's largest independent real estate company.

Stewart, a member of Conway's Quincy sales team, graduated from the Conway College of Real Estate Knowledge, a program that provides licensed agents with advanced instruction in the practical aspects of selling real estate.

KRISTEN STEWART

She is a member of the South Weymouth Neighborhood Association and the Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors. Prior to joining Conway, she worked as an on-site property manager and office coordinator for a medical office.

Stewart lives in Weymouth with her husband, Paul, and children Emma and Miles.

To contact Stewart, call Jack Conway Quincy office, 253 Beale St., at (617) 479-1500.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 650 associates in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. The company, with more than $1.53 billion in sales last year, is ranked among the top 100 real estate firms in the United States by National Relocation and Real Estate Magazine.

Kitchen Design Mishaps

(NAPS) – Most homeowners don't design their kitchens properly. In fact, according to New York-based interior designer John Buscarello, many people don't realize that they must plan ahead.

Below are tips from other leading designers:

Opt for Concentrated Counter Space. Most people focus on an easy work triangle layout (the distance between the stove, fridge and sink). "Not every kitchen accommodates that and the results are tiny bits of counter space," he says.

Also, don't be influenced by what the neighbors have. Says Peacock, "Laminate is a practical and trouble-free material that is perfect for those who use their kitchen often and treat it as a workroom in addition to a showplace."

Don't Play it Too Safe with Color. "Playing it too safe with color is just plain boring," exclaims Ken Charbonneau, member of the Color Marketing Group in New York, who says that neutrals are okay for appliances and tiles, but walls, countertops and accessories need color.

Invest in Proper Lighting. Kitchens need direct light. Choose high-wattage lights that work on dimmer switches.

Consider Handles and Hardware. Make allowances for clearance when choosing hardware for doors, drawers and appliance handles.

Anthony Boyle's No-Hitter Vs. North Highlights 3-Win Week

Memorable Week For Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

With the program stuck in neutral in recent years, the Quincy High School baseball team kicked it into high gear last week with one of its most memorable weeks in school history.

The Presidents, which won five games all of last season, took three of four last week to reach the .500 mark with a 4-4 overall record (1-3 Atlantic Coast League).

They topped Randolph, 4-1, in extra innings last Monday, routed Brighton, 19-4, Tuesday, fell at Plymouth North, 5-3, Wednesday, and blanked North Quincy, 9-0, Thursday.

Senior Anthony Boyle captured all the headlines during the week. The 6-foot-4-inch left-hander fired a no-hit masterpiece against neighboring North Quincy, which followed a one-hit, eight-inning gem against Randolph.

"He's definitely our best pitcher," said head coach Michael Draicchio, who is in his fourth season at the helm. "He's our go-to guy and we're going to look at him down the road come tournament time."

"It's the best week Quincy High has had in years," he added. "It's the first time Quincy High has beaten North in a long time. They just felt confident. We tried to instill in them that we're the better team this year."

Quincy played a home-away series with Whitman-Hanson Tuesday and Wednesday. Today (Thursday) it travels to Brighton at 3:30 p.m. and tomorrow (Friday) it hosts Nauset at 4 p.m.

So far this season Boyle is putting up MVP numbers. He entered this week with a 3-1 record and 0.75 ERA while striking out 38 and walking only five in 24 innings pitched.

"He's a lot stronger," said Draicchio, when comparing Boyle to last year. "And he had an opportunity to win in football and basketball and that's important. He has a lot more confidence from being on winning teams."

Boyle, who struck out 14 and flirted with a no-no through 5 2/3 innings last Monday, couldn't have picked a bigger stage to toss a no-hitter than last Thursday night, under lights at Adams field against longtime rival North Quincy.

He became the third player to throw a no-hitter for Quincy in recent memory, joining Steve Loud (1992 against Silver Lake) and Larry Taglieri (1985 against North Quincy).

"It's funny. I've been involved in all three," said Draicchio, a former Quincy High baseball player. "Boyle was pumped for this game. He had his control and we didn't make mistakes defensively behind him. He was humble after the game and told his teammates that he couldn't have done it without them."

Quincy jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning against North Quincy senior James Zapata.

Seniors Ryan Conley and Rob Muollo walked and senior Matt MacNeil reached on an error to load the bases. After Conley scored on a wild pitch, seniors Jeff Tam and Shaun Gibbons each followed with RBI singles.

In the second inning senior Craig Keenan walked, moved to third on a single by senior Mark Dondero and scored on a fielder's choice by junior Dan Cosgrove. Muollo knocked in Cosgrove (double) in the fifth for a 5-0 advantage.

The Presidents pushed across four runs in the sixth to account for the final score. Gibbons and Keenan each reached on errors and Dondero singled to load the bases.

Conley brought home Gibbons with a sacrifice fly and Cosgrove walked to reload the bases. Muollo stepped up to the plate with two outs and belted a bases-clearing triple.

Quincy's Power Surges

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

A familiar face returned to the Quincy High School softball team last week and his presence seemed to have sparked the Presidents.

Steve Pilalas, the team's lovable assistant coach last year who moved to Florida after the season, arrived here just in time to witness Quincy's back-to-back offensive explosions at Pageant Field

The Presidents pounded out a combined 30 hits in a 10-3 win over Plymouth North last Wednesday and a 15-1 victory over crosstown rival North Quincy last Thursday.

"It's the first time I've seen them play and they absolutely killed the ball," said Pilalas, whose daughter, Michelle, graduated from Quincy High last year and was an all-star second baseman. "They are so much stronger than they were last year."

Quincy (5-3 overall, 3-1 Atlantic Coast League) played a home-away series with Whitman-Hanson Tuesday and Wednesday and tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 4 it travels to the Cape to face Nauset.

In the North Quincy game, senior quad-captain Diane Gilbody and sophomore first baseman Alysia DiMuzio powered the offense — as they did all week and have done this season.

Gilbody went a perfect 5 for 5 at the plate with two triples, two doubles, three runs and two RBI. In three wins last week, Gilbody, the ACL's leading hitter at .692, went 10 for 13 (.769) with five triples, two doubles, eight runs and five RBI.

DiMuzio went 2 for 3 against the Red Raiders with two RBI and a home run, the first Quincy player to belt one out of Pageant Field. For the week, she went 7 for 11 with the home run, four doubles, a run and five RBI.

"We can't hit the ball any harder than we did against North," said head coach Mike Sedar. "Gilbody and DiMuzio have been in a zone. It must be like seeing basketballs to them."

"DiMuzio's a big, powerful athlete," he added. "She hits like that in practice and during BP. She worked hard in the offseason. I told her she is going to be a better softball player than a basketball player. And now I have to make sure that happens."

The Presidents jumped out to a 5-0 lead after two innings against North Quincy. Gilbody crushed a triple over the right fielder's head in the first inning and scored on an error on the play.

In the second, junior catcher Rose Bell, sophomore third baseman Rebi Sorensen and senior quad-captain Stacey Andrew stroked RBI singles while Gilbody ripped an RBI double.

DiMuzio jacked her two-run homer over the center field fence in the fourth inning. Gilbody preceded the blast with an RBI double. Other multiple hitters for Quincy were senior quad-captain Liz Campbell (3 for 4), Bell (3 for 4, 2 RBI), senior quad-captain Shannon Paine (2 for 4) and Andrew (2 for 3).

Junior pitcher Rachel Sorensen, who has pitched every inning this season, tossed a complete game, overpowering North Quincy with 11 strikeouts and allowing one run on four hits.

North Quincy scored its lone run in the fifth inning on back-to-back doubles by juniors May Ho and Michelle Boyd. Senior quad-captain Casey Lorman also smacked a double.

"We take them seriously," Sedar said of North Quincy. "We prepare for them with a lot of hard work. You never know what can happen."

In the Plymouth North game, the score was knotted at 3 before the Presidents exploded for seven runs in the bottom of the sixth inning. Gilbody legged out a bases-loaded triple, Lam had an RBI double while Rebi Sorensen, sophomore Katie Walsh and DiMuzio added RBI singles.

Sorensen pitched a complete game, allowing two runs on six hits with one walk and six strikeouts.

A Win And They're In For Surprising Presidents

BOYS' VOLLEYBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Head coach Christine Barrett is surprised about where her Quincy High School boys' volleyball team currently stands this season.

After missing the state tournament by one game last year, the Presidents entered this week with a 7-2 overall mark — just one game short of qualifying for the postseason.

"If you had asked me before the season if we would be 7-2 at this point, I would have said no way," said Barrett, who's in her eight season. "I'm pleasantly surprised. I don't have a lot of depth. I play about six kids. We're not even tall. We don't have a kid that is six feet."

"The kids get along with each other and communicate well," she added. "They're just a great group that likes to work hard. Before the season their common goal was to get into the tournament and they're going after it."

Quincy (5-1 South Alliance) battled Wareham Tuesday and league front-runner Greater New Bedford Voc Wednesday and will host Dighton-Rehoboth tomorrow (Friday) at 5:30 p.m.

Last Friday at home Quincy fell to Weymouth, 30-23, 30-25, in a match that would've sealed a playoff berth. Junior middle hitter Gideon Endeshaw led the team with 10 kills while senior outside hitters Erald Sejdini and Anthony Sandonato each had eight.

Last Thursday the Presidents met city rival North Quincy and escaped with a closely contested 2-1 victory.

Quincy, which easily handled the Red Raiders in their first meeting April 8, dropped the first game, 30-28, and rebounded with a 30-28 win in the middle game and a 31-29 win the rubber game.

"We missed 18 serves, so don't ask me how we won," Barrett said.

Endeshaw registered 10 kills, four blocks and four digs while senior middle hitter Kevin Hanlon and Sandonato tallied six kills apiece. Sophomore setter Stephen Smith had 17 assists.

"Although he didn't have the numbers, the kid that really stood out was Sajdini," Barrett said. "He had good swings at the ball and made nice passes. He's our most consistent all-around player."

Last Tuesday, Quincy topped Wareham, 30-23, 30-25, to move into sole possession of second place in the league.

"That was a huge win for us," Barrett said. "It gave us a good indication of where we are in the league."

Hanlon paced the team with nine kills and four digs. Sandonato proved clutch in the second game with five kills on five attempts.

Senior setter Phwe Sein Tham is also part of the small rotation. His best game came April 17 in a 2-0 win over Taunton when he tallied six digs, Endeshaw (11 kills, 11 digs, 4 blocks), Hanlon (11 kills), Sejdini (8 kills, 7 digs) and Smith (24 assists) also turned in outstanding performances.

In their first meeting with Greater New Bedford Voc. the Presidents suffered a 2-1 loss, but took solace in the fact that they're the only team in the league to win a game against them.

Senior setter Matt Lavery, who had knee surgery during the first week of the season, could return for the final two weeks of the regular season and the playoffs to give the Presidents a boost.

"That would be an advantage for us," Barrett said. "But Smith has done a nice job filling in. He's stepped up his game."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Tracy D'Arpino Cycling In Positive Spin For ALS May 18

Tracy D'Arpino, owner of Fitness Factor on Wollaston Beach, will join hundreds of other cyclists in Positive Spin for ALS Sunday, May 18.

Unlike many projects that fund amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) research only, proceeds from Positive Spin fund support services for more than 200 local patients and families living with ALS, in addition to the national research projects that will one day unlock the mystery of the disease.

The fund-raiser consists of four concurrent bike rides that start at Longfellow Club on Route 20 in Wayland. The routes are 10, 25, 50 and 100 miles in length, and each is named in honor of a local person or family stricken with ALS.

D'Arpino is a post-rehab physical trainer at the health and wellness studio, designed to help build back muscular strength to those who have lost it. She currently treats several patients with the neuromuscular disease.

"I chose to support this particular fund-raiser because it is the only one, to the best of my knowledge, that funds services for current patients and their caregivers," D'Arpino said. "I've seen how devastating this disease is, firsthand, and while I support research to find a cure tomorrow, my bias as a therapist is to help those who are suffering today."

TRACY D'ARPINO

ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, is a fatal disease that progressively paralyzes its victims, while leaving their mental capabilities intact. The life span for someone diagnosed with ALS is between two to five years. ALS usually strikes those from ages 40 to 70, and 30,000 Americans currently have the disease.

The local effects of the disease have touched D'Arpino personally. Despite her multiple degrees in physical therapy and exercise science, she has watched helplessly as patients wither away from this brutal disease.

"ALS is a terrifying disease, both to the patient afflicted with it and loved ones who must sit by and watch its cruel and relentless progression," D'Arpino said. "If I can help patients manage the disease more successfully, I feel very satisfied."

At advanced stages, care for an ALS patient can cost up to $200,00 per year. Money raised through this event finances programs such as a durable equipment loan program and respite care for 200 local patients and their families through the ALS Association, Massachusetts Chapter.

For those interested in sponsoring D'Arpino in her ride, she may be reached at 617-376-2223.

Lower Risk With Healthy Diet

Diabetes, High Blood Pressure: A Deadly Combination

(NAPS) — There's a growing problem in America — diabetes. Each year nearly 800,000 people in the U.S. are diagnosed with the disease. Nearly 75 percent of people with diabetes also have high blood pressure, which can result in serious health complications.

According to the American College of Physicians, diabetes is the seventh leading cause of death in the U.S. and causes complications such as heart attack and stroke, blindness and kidney disease.

People with diabetes have difficulty converting the sugar (glucose) in their food into energy by the cells. A person with diabetes may not produce enough insulin or their cells may not be able to use the insulin to convert the glucose into energy.

Type 2 diabetes is the most common form of the disease. Type 1 occurs in children and young adults, and gestational diabetes can occur during pregnancy.

You can lower your risk of getting type 2 diabetes by eating a healthy diet high in fruits, vegetables, fish, poultry and whole grains, exercising regularly and losing weight if you are overweight.

Diabetes has no cure, but it can be managed. Diet control and exercise are important and home monitoring of blood glucose is usually required. Pills or insulin injections may also be prescribed to help lower the blood glucose level. Keeping blood sugar under control can help prevent complications.

Most diabetics die from cardiovascular causes such as heart attack, stroke or heart failure. But if you have type 2 diabetes and high blood pressure there is hope. Lowering your blood pressure can dramatically decrease your risk of heart disease, stroke and early death.

Blood pressure can usually be controlled with lifestyle modifications and prescription drugs such as ACE inhibitors and water pills. If you cannot tolerate these drugs, talk to your internist about other medications. The American College of Physicians guidelines suggest that patients with type 2 diabetes and high blood pressure aim for blood pressure levels of less than 135/80.

Getting Tested: A Women's Checklist

When you celebrate Mother's Day this month, remind the women in your life the best gift they can give themselves — and you — is their health. Here are some important things women should talk to their doctors about:

• Breast cancer: Women 40 or older should have an annual mammogram, and women 20 and older should have regular clinical breast exams and do monthly breast self-exams.

• Cervical cancer: Within three years of first having sexual intercourse and no later than age 21, women should have a standard Pap test every year or a liquid-based Pap test every two years. Beginning at age 30, the test should be done every two to three years.

• Uterine/Endometrial cancer: Beginning at 35, women who have hereditary nonpolyposis colon cancer (or are at high risk for it) should ask about an annual endometrial biopsy.

• Ovarian cancer: Regular, thorough pelvic exams may be important to detecting ovarian cancer as early as possible.

• Colon cancer: All women 50 or older need to follow one of these five testing options: Yearly fecal occult blood test (FOBT); flexible sigmoidoscopy every five years; yearly FOBT and flexible sigmoidoscopy every five years (preferred over either option alone); double contrast barium enema every five years; colonoscopy every 10 years.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service.

Founded in 1913 and with national headquarters in Atlanta, the Society has 17 regional divisions and local offices in 3,400 communities, involving millions of volunteers across the United States.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MORE REASON TO BRUSH

While researchers cannot fully explain why, a recent study shows that people who have periodontal (gum) disease and lose a lot of teeth are more likely to have a stroke. The study used data collected from over 41,000 male subjects in the Health Professionals Follow-Up Study. According to this new research, the risk of stroke was 50 percent higher for men with 17 to 24 teeth and 74 percent higher for men with 11 to 16 teeth. One hypothesis for this relationship is that the infection related to periodontal disease and associated tooth loss causes inflammation that injures the arteries. Whatever the cause, it provides one more good reason to brush and floss your teeth

This column has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. A good experience with dentistry is based on making the right choice in a family dentist and in taking steps to keep dental costs at a minimum through self-care at home between visits. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Researchers are wondering if such chronic infections as periodontal disease might possibly be linked with hardening of the arteries.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Mother's Day will soon be here... a good time for us to tell our mothers all the good things we didn't tell her during the past year... This day gives us the chance to say, in a very special way, the loving things we should have said by our words and actions all year long. If it is possible, we tell her - through some word, some thought, some act... of our appreciation ... of our love ... of our thankfulness of having the joy of having each other.

And Mother's Day is a beautiful holiday of memories - whether mother is with us or not. Her guiding hand, love of beauty, devotion and faithfulness deserves prayers of thankfulness that God gave us a mother...

To all mothers and children alike we hope Mother's Day is truly a happy day of memories for all of you ...

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might feel awkward asking for assistance, but who would refuse the charming Goat's request? Do it, then go ahead and enjoy a musical weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Pour some cold water on that simmering misunderstanding before it boils over. The sooner things settle, the sooner you can move ahead with your plans.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're in a highly productive period, which you feel can go on forever. But you could be courting exhaustion. Take time out to relax and restore your energies.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can combine a sense of adventure with a penchant for practicality. Have you considered opening a travel agency?

marshes, Shoreside Beach, Squaw Rock Park, Edgewater Beach, Bishop Field, Brewer's Corner, Merrymount School, Snug Harbor, the Squantum Causeway and Wollaston Beach.

The extreme winter weather resulted in an inordinate amount of tidal wash-up at beach and marsh areas. As a result of Cleaner, Greener Quincy, many beaches will be ready for the summer season. A total of 30 tons of debris was removed from Shoreside Beach alone.

Crews from the Park Department, the Department of Public Works and Recreation Department worked alongside the volunteers. BFI donated its services to help cart away much of the debris cleaned up by volunteers. Stop & Shop donated the food for the cookout.

"I want to thank Stop & Shop for their continued support of the Cleaner, Greener Quincy program," said Mayor Phelan. "Our volunteers work hard all morning and really look forward to a nice 'burger or hot dog at the end of the day."

Tom Koch, executive secretary of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, added his thanks to the volunteers and city workers who made the 14th annual program such a success.

"Everyone worked very hard to make our great city both cleaner and greener," he said.

ATLANTIC SCHOOL STUDENTS, grades 6, 7, 8, were out in full force with teacher Donna Glynn and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro to clean up Wollaston Beach during Saturday's Cleaner, Greener project.

manner."

Last week, the city council's finance committee amended Phelan's original proposal calling for a $10 million bond to pay for an open space plan. The amendment, proposed by McCauley, was intended to provide a check on Phelan and his ability to spend money within the plan.

McCauley's proposal, approved by a 5-3 vote, gives the council input over individual projects in the mayor's $10 million plan.

"It gives the council flexibility in determining how the money should be spent," said McCauley.

But Largey said Phelan would not approve the amended plan.

Instead, the mayor has attempted to address the council's concerns by splitting up the bond issues, Largey said. This would allow the council to address each issue separately, he said.

Quincy Crisis Center Food Pantry Seeks Volunteers

The Quincy Crisis Center's "Food for Families" pantry is seeking volunteers between the hours of 12:30 and 5 p.m. to pick up donated food at local post offices during Letter Carrier Food Drive Day, Saturday, May 10.

The crisis center has been providing emergency food assistance to homebound families in Quincy and the South Shore for more than 20 years.

With state funding being scaled back to many agencies, the Quincy Crisis Center has made 36 percent more deliveries of food assistance in the first three months of 2003 compared to 2002, which was up 70 percent from 2001.

41-Footer Flagship For Police Marine Patrol

Former Coast Guard Boat City Anti-Terrorism Guardian

Quincy has a new weapon to fight possible terrorist attacks — a 41-foot boat that once cruised the seas for the U. S. Coast Guard.

Congressman William Delahunt, a moving spirit behind the acquisition of the motor life boat, was on hand Monday when the craft was turned over to the city of Quincy.

The ceremony took place at Bay Pointe Marina in Quincy Point where the vessel was dedicated to the memory of Joseph Gillan, the longtime Quincy marine patrol officer who died earlier this month.

The vessel, named the "Guardian," will be used by Quincy police to patrol the 27-mile coastline of the city. It will be the flagship of the police marine patrol, whose present boat has limited capacities.

Acquisition of the former Coast Guard boat represents several months of effort on the part of Delahunt, working in tandem with Mayor William Phelan.

Ever since the terrorists' Sept. 11, 2001, attacks on New York and Washington, Delahunt has been advocating an acceleration of federal assistance to local communities for homeland security and easing the transfer of surplus federal equipment.

Improvements In Service Predicted

Trash Pickup To Cost $1M More

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The costs associated with trash pickup, recycling and disposal will rise approximately $1 million over last year, but residents will see improvements in service, according to DPW Commissioner Jay Fink.

In fiscal 2004, the costs for trash pickup, recycling and disposal services will total $5.8 million, according to Mayor William Phelan's proposed budget. Last year, the city spent approximately $4.8 million for those services.

Phelan recently announced his decision to award the city's curbside solid waste and recycling services to Browning Ferris Industries (BFI). The five-year, $10 million contract goes into effect July 1, 2003.

The parties have the option of adding two, one-year extensions to the agreement, according to Fink.

In addition, the city recently entered into a 10-year contract with SEMASS.

14 Candidates Take Out Nomination Papers

The city Election Department did a brisk business on nomination papers this week with 14 candidates picking them up Monday and Tuesday, the first days they were available.

And two of them came right back with more than the required voter signatures for a spot on the ballot.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro turned in nearly 100 signatures and William Keener, candidate for the Ward 6 council seat, submitted 54. Fifty valid signatures are required.

The other candidates taking out papers:

Ward 1 city council: Former Councillor Leo Kelly, Joanne Bythrow and Sean McArdle.

Ward 3 council: Incumbent Kevin Coughlin.

Ward 6 council: Brian McNamee, Maryann Mahony, Alicia Gardner.

Council at-large: Incumbent Joseph Finn and Jo-Ann Bragg, presently a school committee member.

Finance Committee Approves $10M Bond

Open Space Plan On Track

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Mayor William Phelan's $10 million natural resources plan is one step closer to becoming reality.

By a 7-1 vote, the city council's finance committee last week approved Phelan's $10 million bond proposal, which he plans to use to acquire open space, renovate parks, and make improvements to the salt marsh wetlands at Broad Meadows. Councillor Joe Finn was the lone dissenter.

Committee Chairman and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said he expects the city council to approve Phelan's request at the May 19 meeting.

"Once again, working together we have managed to put the interests of the residents first," said Phelan. "I would like to thank the city council for their cooperation and foresight, and for acting in such an expeditious manner."

Last week the committee defeated an amendment proposed by Councillor Frank McCauley that sought to give the city council greater input over the open space plan.

By rejecting McCauley's amendment and approving Phelan's request, the council has virtually signed off on the mayor's original request for the $10 million bond.

Two weeks ago the committee approved McCauley's proposal. Three councillors who originally voted in favor of the amendment - Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton – changed their minds after reconsideration.

Phelan had indicated that he would not sign the amended bond proposal. Instead, the mayor sought a compromise by breaking up the bond into three separate issues. Coughlin said that plan has been tabled to make way for approval of Phelan's initial proposal.

Coughlin said the finance committee's vote relieved a potential logjam.

"This open space plan was perilously close to failure," said Coughlin. "As with any government matter there is a leap of faith you have to make. We could have talked about this issue for years and missed an opportunity to do good things. In my own mind, I have a level of comfort that allows me to move forward with this issue."

McCauley said he was disappointed with the turn of events. "The amendment was not an infringement on the mayor's authority," he said.

Finn said too many questions about the overall plan remain unanswered.

"I think the McCauley amendment was the best tool available to the council," he said. "There are a lot of people who have questions about the wisdom of certain expenditures in this plan."

Finn said he has lingering concerns about the administration's belief there will be sufficient funds available in the hotel/motel tax fund to pay for the bond.

Council Approves Mayor's Plan To Refinance Bond Issues

The City Council recently gave Mayor William Phelan the authority to refinance three bond issues at a lower rate, a move the mayor said could save the city $200,000 in fiscal 2003.

By a unanimous vote, the council gave final approval to Phelan's proposal to refinance three separate general obligation bonds. They are 20-year bonds that mature respectively in 2013, 2014 and 2015.

Refinancing the bonds at this time could save the city between $100,000 and $150,000 over the remaining life of each bond, Phelan said.

City Steps Up Street-Cleaning Efforts

The city is stepping up efforts to clean the streets after a tough winter left the roads caked with sand and debris.

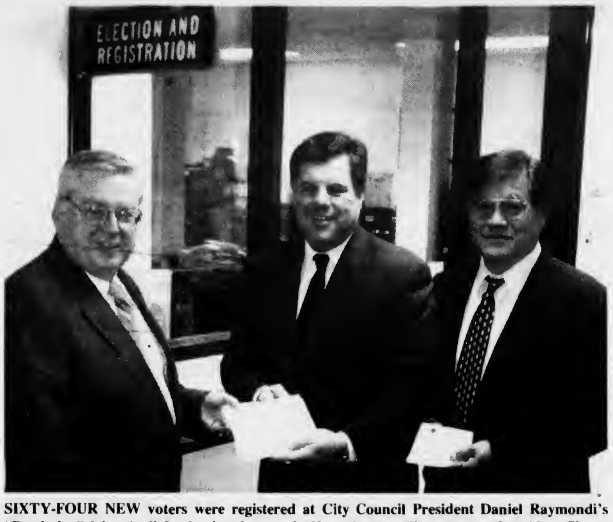
Mayor William Phelan has asked DPW Commissioner Jay Fink to redouble the department's efforts in cleaning the city's streets.

"We need these streets cleaned now," said Phelan. "I will ensure that Commissioner Fink has the resources he needs to do just that, whether its manpower, equipment or overtime – our taxpayers demand and deserve passable streets."

The move means the city's streets will be cleaned about one month ahead of schedule, Phelan said. Originally, the cleaning process was to be completed in July.

Beginning immediately, DPW crews will be pulling 12-hour shifts and working weekends to clear debris from the city's roadways, according to Fink.

An unusually long and snowy winter has left the streets in bad shape, said Fink. DPW crews began cleaning the streets in April, but the wintry weather has hindered the process, he said.



"Mother nature hasn't cooperated with us – we are coming off a terrible winter," he said.

Fink said streets in Wards 1 through 4 will be completed by the first week in June. Streets in Wards 5 and 6 have been completed already, he said.

Fink said DPW crews will post signs a day or two ahead on streets designated for cleaning. This will allow residents to move their automobiles off the streets temporarily while crews clean the roadways, he said.

"If citizens clear the streets, we will clean them," said Fink.

He said he was confident DPW crews could complete the work in the scheduled timeframe. The department may have to rent extra equipment if it is deemed necessary, he said.

Proposal Sets Age Limit On New Fire, Police Hires

The city council is considering a proposal that places an age limit of 32 years old on applicants seeking an original appointment to the police or fire department.

Introduced by Councillor Frank McCauley, the measure calls for the city to accept MGL Chap. 31, Sec. 58A, which establishes a maximum age (32) for the original appointments of firefighters and police officers.

The measure allows qualified veterans still in or released from military service to add up to four years to the age, bringing the limit to 36 years old.

If the city accepted the provision, those who are older than 32 and have already applied for the positions would become ineligible.

McCauley placed the measure on the council agenda last week, but no action was taken. Instead, the body moved it back to the ordinance committee for further review.

Some councillors, however, weighed in on the measure.

"There are some people who have studied for the test, taken the test and have listed Quincy as their preference," said Councillor John Keenan. "But because someone is 33 years old they would become ineligible. I think applying the law as proposed would be unfair to those who are in line to be appointed and older than 32."

Keenan said it might be a good idea to leave the proposal in committee until the current list expires.

Ward 5 Councillor Bryan Connolly opposes the proposal in its current form. "I think the age limit is set too low," he said. "There are many qualified applicants that could serve this city well yet are older than 32. It may be beneficial to set an age limit but this one is too low. I don't think we should restrict ourselves that much."

Police Chief William Falco and Fire Chief Paul O'Connell support the proposal, McCauley said.

29 Liquor Establishments Pass 'Sting' Operation

For the first time in more than 10 years, an "alcohol compliance" operation ended on a positive note.

Lt. Det. Robert Perchard reported at Tuesday's meeting that he had conducted his annual " alcohol compliance" operation at 29 liquor establishments on May 8 and told the board he was "happy to say all of them had passed, and were very vigilant."

He said he was "very pleased with that" and said he had advertised on cable TV and the newspapers about the operation, but did not say "when." He said they all adhered to the regulations and added "its been great>"

Board Chairman Joseph Shea who called it a "sting" operation said in the more than 10 years he has been chairman this was the fist time that "nobody was apprehended."

Shea commended Perchard and said it was a tribute to him since he even had to change his work schedule for the operation

Shea said he will write letters of congratulations to all of the 29 establishments.

Shea said the investigation of the pouring establishments will be held in mid summer.

• On May 16, 1968, in France, the May 1968 crisis escalates as a general strike spreads to factories and industries across the country, shutting down newspaper distribution, air transport and two major railroads. By the end of the month, millions of workers were on strike, and France seemed to be on the brink of radical leftist revolution.

Raymondi, The Crowd And . . . ?

In politics, they say, numbers mean a lot.

And, Dan Raymondi had the numbers at his "Patriotic Celebration" fundraiser last week at the Bryan VFW Post hall.

RAYMONDI

It was a wall-to-wall-with-people turnout as some who were there put it.

Enough to be a, or, the deciding factor on whether to challenge incumbent William Phelan for the mayor's office this year?

Asked later if he's running, Raymondi replied, "I'll have some news shortly."

But, maybe there's a hint what the news might be when he added:

"It (the turnout) was a solid indication the people of Quincy are looking for positive leadership and a change."

A voter registration, part of the event, produced 64 new voters and two changes in party affiliation.

The spacious hall reportedly was set up to accommodate 750 for the event which included dinner and entertainment with tickets at $17.76 in keeping with the patriotic theme and salute to those in the military.

The actual turnout, according to some who were there, was well over 1,000 with people standing in line at the door waiting for someone to come out so they could get in.

"It was the biggest crowd I have ever seen in that hall," said Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley who attended.

McCAULEY

"You (candidates) usually shy away from having a fundraiser there because of its size unless you know you can fill it. If you don't fill it, it doesn't look good. Dan filled it."

Councillor John Keenan, who was executive secretary to former Mayor James Sheets, likened the size of the crowd to one Sheets drew there in his first run for mayor in 1989.

Sheets, who lost a seventh term bid to Phelan by a scant 17 votes in the city's closest mayoral race in 2001, was among those at the Raymondi event. And was overheard saying he thought the turnout was even bigger than his in 1989.

SHEETS

Of course, at $17.76 the price was right. And the patriotic theme a popular one.

Still, it was a fundraiser for Raymondi. But what for? There were no political signs in the hall. And no one passing out bumper stickers.

The tickets were intriguing. Simply said the event was "in support of City Council President Daniel G. Raymondi." But support for what? No indication about mayor. Or council at-large. Or, re-election as Ward 2 councillor.

Many attending the event thought there would be an announcement for mayor and appeared disappointed when it didn't come. But Raymondi had said in advance there would be no announcement for anything that night.

But, as he says, there will be "some news shortly."

Raymondi, who obviously was pleased with the way things went, says: "I was very honored to have all those people turn out.

"Now, we'll keep moving forward."

Toward the mayoral ring?

It looks like it.

A NEW FLAG in memory of Paul Harold and his family will fly in front of Adams Academy, home of the Quincy Historical Society.

HAROLD

The 6-by-10 foot Old Glory is a gift of Ann Knafelz, who was Paul's secretary and right arm during his 14 years as state senator.

She presented it in memory of Paul, his father and mother, Joseph and Marguerite Harold, his brother, Joseph Jr. and sister, Betsy.

It's the second flag Ann has donated to the Historical Society. The first was a couple of years ago in memory of Paul's father, a veteran of the famed World War II Battle of the Bulge and state adjutant of the Disabled American Veterans for 40 years.

He was struck and killed by a car in December, 1994 while crossing Sea St. to attend Mass at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church.

That was a tragedy. As was Paul's death at age 53 last Aug. 12 after a two-year battle with cancer.

Ann, as his long-time secretary and one of his closest friends, has her own special tribute to him.

"People were so important to him. He made sure the people came first."

Delahunt Views HN Salt Marsh Plan

Congressman William Delahunt got a close look Monday at what $500,000 in federal funds is expected to do for the Houghs Neck salt marshes.

Delahunt, accompanied by the marsh's leading advocate, P. J. Foley, toured the section of the 300 acres of marshland that will become the first phase of what will eventually be a $4 million project.

The project is expected to cut the number of fires that have ravaged the elephant grass in the past, control flooding, improve the flow of water into the area and hasten the return of fish, birds and natural vegetation.

Later, during a neighborhood meeting at St. Thomas Aquinas Church Hall on Darrow Street, Delahunt discussed how the restoration of six miles of coastline will improve the habitat of commercial fish stocks and enhance open space and waterfront development.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 postcard showing a portion of West Quincy looking northeast from atop the grout pile at the Granite Railway Quarry. In the lower left are the tracks of the Quincy Quarries Railroad winding their way down to street level and to the tracks of the Granite Branch of the Old Colony railroad running across the bottom of the picture, now the Southeast Expressway. Most of the houses in the lower foreground are still extant on California. The large building in the center was St. Mary's Hall on Willard Street and is now home to Commonwealth Building Inc. The church on the right was the Methodist Episcopal Church on Hall Place now the site of a private home. The three X's in the upper cent mark the old Cornfields section near Lakin Square that was John Robertson's farm. On the horizon marked with an X is the water tower on Forbes Hill in Wollaston.

Broad Meadows, Central Students To Celebrate USS Salem's 54th Birthday

It was the kids who helped save the USS Constitution, "Old Ironsides," by chipping in their pennies more than a century ago.

Now is may be the kids who help save the USS Salem as well.

The Save Our Ship Committee of Broad Meadows and Central Middle School students has organized a 54th birthday party.

The event, which commemorates the retired cruiser's commissioning in 1949, will take place Saturday, May 17, from 12 noon to 3 p.m. aboard the ship at the Fore River Shipyard.

Admission is $6 for adults and $4 for children and seniors.

Activities will include children's games such as freeze dance, musical chairs, bean bag toss and pin the nose on Kilroy. Ice cream and cake will be served and guided tours available.

The heavy cruiser was built in the Fore River Shipyard and returned to its birthplace to house the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

Supports Using Hotel Tax For Upgrading Parks

As director of the Quincy Track Club, I strongly advocate the allocation of the hotel tax money funding for tax renovation. The monies from the hotel tax will improve our quality of life without impacting the bottom line for Quincy taxpayers.

As director of the Quincy Track Club, I have 1,000 Quincy children that participate in track and field programs at Veterans' Stadium every year. This facility has not been renovated since 1973, 30 years ago. Some of the parents of children in the track program were not even born when the track was last renovated. We have one of the largest programs in the state and we need a facility that matches the interest of the community.

Mayor Phelan's plan to improve Veterans' Stadium and other parks is a great plan for Quincy. I urge the City Council to join us in supporting this plan to give our residents the parks they deserve.

Bank Offers To Purchase Bethany Church

This Week
77 Years Ago

Theophilus King, president of the Granite Trust Co., offered to pay Bethany Congregational Church $275,000 – $170,000 in cash – for the church property at the corner of Hancock and Chestnut Sts. as the site of a new bank building.

Under the agreement, the bank would purchase the old Bixby estate at the corner of Coddington and Spear Sts. on which to build the new church and loan the church $60,000 without interest to start construction of the building.

For the past year, a committee made up of the Rev. Eric I. Lindh, the pastor, Charles H. Hardwick, Richard Bishop, Ernest L. Collins, Fred H. Nickerson and Joseph W. Thomas had been negotiating the deal with the bank.

ZONING REJECTED

Quincy voters rejected a zoning ordinance by a vote of 6,368 to 4,924 in a special election referendum sought by the Quincy Real Estate Exchange, which opposed the law. The zoning ordinance had passed the City Council.

President W.W. Wilson said the Exchange was willing to cooperate with any official movement by the city government to formulate a zoning ordinance that "will be compatible with the best interests of Quincy and devoid of confiscatory features."

PINE ISLAND BRIDGE

Mayor Perley E. Barbour approved Park Commissioner William T. Spargo's proposal to build a footbridge from the Merrymount Park mainland to Pine Island in Black's Creek so that the city-owned land can be developed for picnics, outing and other activities.

Gretchen Grant Announces Candidacy For City Council

Gretchen Grant of 73 Bicknell St., Germantown, has announced her candidacy for a fourth attempt to win the City Council seat from Ward 1.

"There is no one to represent the people of Germantown," said Grant, 74.

"Once you get past Sea Street, there is nothing down there but one little dinky store. You don't have to be smart to know what is needed."

Grant, who grew up in New York City, said she is proud that she never graduated from grammar or high school but has a degree from Westchester Community College in New York.

Ayers Hails Bid To Restore Senior Drug Program

Rep. Bruce Ayers has hailed House decision to protect the state's prescription drug plan for the elderly as "a great victory for Massachusetts seniors."

"Some may believe there are priorities more important than our seniors, but my colleagues and I have made clear that we do not," he said.

Ayers was one of a majority in the House who voted for the plan that had been targeted for elimination by Governor Romney and the House Ways and Means Committee's initial budget draft.

Prescription Advantage is a state program begun three years ago which offers insurance coverage for prescription drugs to all Massachusetts seniors

Governor Romney in March announced that he would eliminate the program unless the federal government agreed to provide funds by June.

"We have an obligation to protect our seniors, especially during these tough economic times," said Ayers.

"Many seniors live within a fixed income and rely on this program for assistance with their prescription costs.

"There is no question that this program is a core service."

Quincy College changed my life.

I came to Quincy College as a transfer student from the University of New Orleans. Although born and raised in Quincy, at the naïve age of eighteen I felt the need to remove my "tree" from its "roots" and attend school out of state. Long story, short: no family, superficial friendships, and a campus containing 17,000 students was not for me. After I came home, carrying with me several thousand dollars in student loans, another four year school was just not feasible. Quincy College was the affordable solution, yet the lessons, resources and experiences I will be taking with me upon graduation are worth their weight in gold.

Not only have I developed new friendships, but also the instructor relationships I have formed would not have been possible at a larger college. The Quincy College faculty and administration are some of the most influential educators I have known. I know that I will always be welcomed back to Quincy College for the support and inspiration I may need.

From my first semester at Quincy College, I built the foundation for my educational success. The College also became the support beam for my growth as a woman. My instructors helped me evaluate my life and set goals for the future. It was after one semester with Professor Raymond in the Psychology Department that I changed my degree program to Psychology. Her guidance, like the support of so many people I have met at Quincy College, has helped me define who I am today.

Now, with a clear sense of the future I will be transferring to a four year school in the Fall, but I am confident that at no matter what stage of my education, be it six months from now or six months to completing my dissertation, I will always be grateful for the "stepping stone" that Quincy College provided me.

Quincy College Honors 200 Students At Annual Convivium

An air of pride and celebration permeated the ballroom of the Quincy Marriott Hotel last week when nearly 200 students of Quincy College were recognized at the annual Honors Convivium.

The ceremony, nearly as old as the College itself, celebrates the academic achievements of recent graduates and scholarship recipients. Friends and family gathered with Quincy College staff, administrators, and educators for dinner to recognize the accomplishments of the students who will graduate with high and highest honors distinctions; and to award over 50 scholarships to students who will be returning next fall.

Many of the students present at the ceremony will be awarded Associate Degrees and certificates at the College's Commencement May 31. Others attended Commencement this past January.

The honors students have consistently displayed the highest degree of academic promise and success.

"These students represent the essence of Quincy College," said Quincy College President Sean Barry. "They've come to us to make their lives better and they've worked incredibly hard to be where they are today.

"This special event, which is one of the College's oldest traditions, is the College's way of thanking them and those who supported them on their journey. It is also an opportunity for us to tell them how proud we are," Barry said.

The magna cum laude, high honors recipients have achieved a cumulative grade point average of 3.5 to 3.749, while the summa cum laude, highest honors students earned a GPA in the range of 3.75 and 4.0. The scholarship recipients, chosen by a committee comprised of college faculty and staff, met educational, personal and professional standards that are revered by the scholarship donors.

Theresa Lord-Piatelli, Chairperson of the Board of Governors, congratulated the honorees and applauded the College for the strides it has made over the past several years in distinguishing itself within the community. A Quincy College student herself and now an attorney in Quincy, Lord-Piatelli expressed her passion for Quincy College and also credited the institution with creating the opportunities that helped her succeed, the opportunities she encouraged the class of 2003 to seek as they further their education.

At the end of the month, the new graduates will join a group of Quincy College alumni worldwide. Being honored for their dedication to their studies and their futures, the undergraduates have further distinguished themselves as educational pioneers and ambassadors to Quincy College and its legacy.

Quincy College Governor and City Council President Daniel Raymondi presented Faculty of the College's School of Allied Health each a red rose in celebration of National Nurses Week.

Barry extended Raymondi's greetings and thanked the nurses for their patience during the extraordinarily delayed move into the College's Allied Health building. Because of delays at City Hall students in the College's Allied Health programs have attended classes in the basement of the Bethany Congregational Church.

QUINCY RESIDENT Dot McTiernan, wife of the late Quincy police officer and Quincy College graduate Jack McTiernan, presents student Suzanne Lawson with The Spanky McTiernan Memorial Scholarship dedicated to her husbandís memory.

Scholarship donors joined members of College Courses, Incorporated in presenting academic awards. Highlights included the Quincy Medical Center Staff Scholarship; The Eleanor & Dr. George F. Gales Scholarship; The Gertrude Crowe Scholarship; Muriel & Frederick Moulthrop Scholarship; The Arthur & Victoria Fletcher Scholarship (recent husband and wife graduates of Quincy College).

Soon to be an integral part of the College tradition were the moving remarks of Quincy's Dorothy McTiernan. McTiernan is the widow of Wollaston's long time beat patrolman Jack "Spanky" McTiernan. Mr. McTiernan completed his degree in his 50s and died shortly thereafter from cancer.

"This college changed Jack's life and touched me forever. Quincy College is a Quincy treasure,"i Dorothy McTiernan said.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro Candidate For Re-Election

DOUG GUTRO

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro announces his candidacy for a second term.

Gutro submitted nearly 100 signatures of registered voters in Ward 5 on the first day nomination papers were available, he said. This will allow his name to appear on the fall ballot for municipal elections, he said.

"It has been both an honor and privilege to represent the residents of Ward 5," said Gutro. "I'm just as passionate today about the issues and people in my Ward and across the city as I was when I first ran for city council two years ago. I will continue to work hard to earn their respect and support in this year's local election."

Gutro cited such issues as public safety, public works and environmental protection among his top accomplishments.

On public safety, Gutro noted: "I'm proud that Ward 5 now has its first community police officer and I'm fighting to add another one focused solely on the downtown. We need to step up efforts to ensure that our downtown is a safe, thriving area that will attract residents and visitors. In addition, I will continue to work to keep the Wollaston Fire Station fully operational to ensure our families and seniors have the best fire service available."

Gutro said he successfully pushed for a $5.8 million low interest loan that will be used to replace leaking sewer pipes along Quincy Shore Drive and 11 other streets, including Beach St., Bromfield St., Vassall St. and Billings Rd. The project will begin this summer, he said.

During his first term, Gutro said he has established himself as someone responsive to the needs of Ward 5 residents.

"I do my best to return every call, and respond to every e-mail and letter within a day or two," he said. "That is the job of a ward councillor and one that I take seriously. I pride myself on being both available and responsive in helping people to access services from city government."

As Chairman of the Wollaston Beach Task Force, Gutro said he has worked for a safer, pedestrian-friendly area.

"In the next few years, close to $20 million in state and local monies will be spent to repair the seawall, improve beach-side amenities, such as water fountains, benches, shade shelters and roadway conditions and water quality along Wollaston Beach," he said. "When this work is complete, Wollaston Beach will be the pride of Boston Harbor."

Gutro said he has hosted dozens of neighborhood meetings during the past year and a half, which has kept residents active and informed about local issues.

"I will continue to work hard to respond to each and every concern and do my best to ensure their voice gets heard at City Hall," he said.

Participants will meet at the cemetery entrance to the left of City Hall. Parking is available in the rear of the Historical Society at the intersection of Adams and Hancock Streets.

Labor Council Backs Phelan For Re-election

The city election is still six months down the road but already the AFL-CIO's Norfolk County Central Labor Council has endorsed William Phelan for a second term as mayor of Quincy.

"It is really an easy decision for us to support the mayor based on his record and passionate advocacy on behalf of all working people," said Robert Rizzi, president of the council.

"Mayor Phelan has shown already in his first year and a half that he not only understands the needs and concerns of working families but he is willing to fight for them as well."

Kevin Cotter, business manager of the Plumbers Union local, added that, "In these incredibly tough fiscal times it is critical that we have community leaders who will represent us when tough decisions are being made.

"Mayor Phelan has shown that he is not afraid to make the tough decisions but he has also shown that he is not willing to dig us out of this mess on the backs of working people. We need Mayor Phelan leading this city."

Phelan expressed his thanks for the endorsement to the Council and is many members in Quincy.

"Their faith and trust in me as the best candidate to represent working families in the mayor's office is humbling and energizing," he said.

"There is no question that more tough times are ahead with regard to cuts in local aid and other state assistance but we cannot and will not place the bulk of that burden on the hard-working families of Quincy.

Permit Granted For Summer Sidewalk Festival

A permit to the Quincy Center Business & Professional Association (QCBP) to conduct the 33rd Annual Summer Sidewalk Festival Thursday July 17 through July 19 was granted at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the QCBP said the event will be held "rain or shine" and that the difference this year will be that of having "more space" offered to persons to sit while they are eating instead of "sitting on the curbstone".

She said Stop & Shop will conduct its hot dog fund raiser at the plaza in front of the building on Friday.

She said that KISS 108 will participate on Friday.

Health Commissioner and board member Drew Scheele said the event is a ":good take where you can get good food and great buys.

In other business, the board granted a one day permit to St. Ann's PTO to conduct a carnival by "Just for Fun" Saturday, May 17 rain of shine from 10 a.m. to3 p.m.

Delahunt, Phelan Visit Opens National Nursing Home Week

A visit from Congressman William Delahunt and Mayor William Phelan highlighted National Nursing Home Week Monday for residents of the Marina Bay Nursing and Rehabilitation Center.

Delahunt spoke of the injustice shown to elders who served their country and cared for their countrymen yet are faced with serious Medicare and Medicaid cuts in the twilight of their lives.

The country has supported a war in Iraq for better health conditions for the Iraqi people, he said, but cuts to Medicaid and Medicare jeopardize the healthcare of America's elder and in need population.

He urged all in attendance to let President Bush know how they feel about this injustice.

Mayor Phelan thanked the staff of the Center for the compassionate care they provide and visited with 96-year-old Frank Terranova, former superintendent and commissioner of the Quincy Housing Authority, who is a resident of the Center.

Center Administrator Rosemary McLaughlin kicked off the opening day ceremonies for National Nursing Home Week and Marina Bay Activities Assistant Beth Jordan coordinated the events.

Resident Marie Harris won first place in the essay contest on "Caring With a Personal Touch," the theme for Nursing Home Week. The staff winner was Anne McGrath.

Marina Bay resident Mina Scanlon, a founding member of the Koch Club, who is now 94 years old, threw out the first ball for the staff softball game Tuesday.

SPRING CAR CARE

Hot Tips To Keep Your Car Cool This Summer

In the heat of summer, there is never a good time for your car's air conditioner to stop cooling.

It can ruin a great vacation and is especially important when traveling with elderly or very young passengers. Here are a few tips to make sure that your car's air conditioning will not cause your discomfort this summer.

First, it is important to understand how air conditioning works. Your car's system works in the same manner as your home's refrigerator and air conditioning system. Basically, refrigerant is pumped through the system by a compressor and reduced to a low pressure and temperature inside the passenger compartment. Then the refrigerant is squeezed to a high pressure and temperature outside under the hood. Inside the car, the "blower" or fan forces air over the cold part of the system, and heat from the air is transferred into the refrigerant.

Moisture is also removed from the air as it clings to the cold cooling surfaces and is discharged outside through a drain tube. Under the hood, air is also forced over the hot part of the system by the cooling fan (in some cases the same one that cools the radiator), and heat is transferred out of the refrigerant into the atmosphere. The refrigeration cycle is repeated over and over.

How well the system cools your car depends on the efficiency of the above components and also on having the right amount of refrigerant in the system. Maintaining your air conditioner actually begins by careful attention to the engine's cooling system. If the engine is running hotter than normal, or if the cooling fan is turning too slowly, it will be harder for the refrigerant to give up its heat under the hood, resulting in poor cooling inside the car.

If the belt that drives the compressor slips or breaks, the refrigerant cannot be pumped through the system properly. Inside the car, a poorly functioning blower or blocked air-conditioning outlets will decrease cooling efficiency.

This leads to the refrigerant itself. Too much or too little in the system will result in poor cooling, because the pressures and temperatures will not be correct for good heat transfer. But there are problems other than refrigerant level that can cause system pressures and temperatures to go haywire, so it is dangerous to just have refrigerant added to a poorly cooling system. Overcharging could actually decrease the cooling efficiency even more and could also cause major damage. It is best to have the refrigerant level professionally checked and adjusted, if necessary, using only the type of refrigerant designed for your car's system.

Contrary to popular belief, there is no such thing as a normal refrigerant leak. If the system requires periodic recharging or "topping off," there is a leak that need repair.

To Keep Your Air-Conditioning Working at its Best:

• Have the engine cooling system maintained and inspected regularly.

• Have drive belts inspected and adjusted.

• Check for good airflow at the air-conditioning outlets.

• Refer all air-conditioning system service to qualified personnel.

However, You Should Not:

• Have a leaking air-conditioning system recharged or "topped off."

• Try to add refrigerant yourself.

• Attempt to open or disconnect air-conditioning hoses or lines. Serious frostbite or eye injury can result from escaping refrigerant and oil. Discharging refrigerant into the atmosphere is illegal in the United States.

Buying An Environmentally Friendly Car

Even though technology has made automobiles cleaner and more efficient than ever before, car buyers can still achieve greater economy and fuel efficiency by following a few simple guidelines when shopping for a new car, says AAA. To help shoppers find a vehicle that meets their needs while having less of an impact on the environment, AAA offers these tips:

• If you only need a large vehicle once or twice a year, consider renting one for those occasions, and purchase a more economical vehicle to meet day-to-day driving needs.

• Pay attention to the emissions ratings that indicate cleaner-running engines. Some vehicles are rated low-emissons vehicles (LEV), ultra-low emissions (ULEV), and super-ultra-low emissions (SULEV).

• Even among vehicles of the same size you can find a significant variation in fuel economy. Driving a vehicle that gets better fuel economy may produce fewer greenhouse-gas emissions.

• In nearly every case, vehicles cost less to operate if they have better fuel economy and emit fewer pollutants. Hybrid vehicles, such as Honda's Civic and Insight and Toyota's Prius, can get 35-70 miles per gallon and are readily available.

• Bigger doesn't always mean safer. Some larger vehicles have a higher center of gravity that makes them prone to rolling over in a crash. No matter what car you choose always check its crash test results. These are available online at www.nhtsa.dot.gov or www.iihr.org.

Conserving Gasoline

Here's a quick checklist to help conserve gasoline, from the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence, the organization that tests and certifies automotive technicians:

• Monitor your tires. Underinflated tires or poorly aligned wheels waste fuel by forcing the engine to work harder to push the vehicle and its contents.

• Remove unused items from your vehicle. Store only essentials. Less weight means better gasoline mileage.

• Observe speed limits. Speeding decreases your miles per gallon, as do sudden accelerations. Anticipate traffic patterns ahead and adjust your speed gradually. Use cruise control.

• Avoid excessive engine idling. Turn off the engine while waiting for friends and family.

• Use windows and air conditioning wisely. Avoid using your air conditioner in heavy, stop-and-go traffic such as traffic jams and holiday traffic.

• Consolidate your daily trips and errands. Some trips may be unnecessary.

• Maintain your engine. This will help you maximize the gas mileage for your specific make and model.

Jimmy Liang Candidate For Council At-Large

Jimmy Liang, the first city council candidate of Asian descent in the city's history in 2001, announces he will run again this year for one of the three at-large seats.

Liang, 25, a Quincy restaurant owner, won a nomination in a nine-candidate field in the preliminary election two years ago and finished fifth in the final election.

He polled 7,173 votes in the final election and was the first Asian American to win a spot on a final election ballot.

In his announcement, Liang said:

JIMMY LIANG

"It is time to bring the 'Next Generation of Leadership' to the city council. Taxes are high and services are slipping. There are more potholes than ever, litter is piling up and crime has returned with a vengeance to Quincy Center."

He said he believes "it will take more than 'penny pinching' to get us through the financial crisis without continuing to erode basic services like public works and public safety."

Liang, thanking his supporters, said:

"Working together we made a positive difference in the city of Quincy. We didn't win the election but we won the hearts and minds of thousands of voters and helped thousands participate in the city government for the first time.

"We need to roll up our sleeves, dig in and get to work. My success in business has come from being actively involved, energetic and creative. I'll bring that formula for success to the city council at a time it is needed most."

Kevin Delaney Joins Flynn & Co. Commercial Team

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc., a Quincy-based full service real estate firm servicing the Metro Boston and South Shore areas, announces the addition of Kevin B. Delaney to its commercial brokerage team.

Delaney has 27 years of business growth and strategic management experience on a national and international level. Under his management, he has guided companies to increase their production, expand US and global market share, and quickly achieve profitability.

His accomplishments include reversing a struggling firm's $2.8 million annual loss to a $6.4 million annual profit in two years, increasing sales from $11 million to $30 million in that time frame. In a prior position over a seven year period, he grew a small start-up company with a staff of seven into a 400-employee operation with a global customer base and revenues over $100 million.

KEVIN DELANEY

In 1996, Delaney founded Delaney and Associates, a consulting firm specializing in forming strategies for product development, operations, marketing, sales and general management.

Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski said he is enthusiastic about the business experience Delaney brings to the commercial team.

"As a commercial real estate professional, Kevin is a valuable representative, given his tested strategic planning skills, sales and marketing sense, and above all, his appreciation for the bottom line in today's stringent economy," Talkowski said.

For Buyers With Modest Incomes

MassHousing Offers Improved Affordable Home Loans

House hunters with modest incomes can still make their dreams of home ownership a reality this spring, thanks to new and improved loans just announced by MassHousing, the state's affordable housing bank.

"If you think you can't afford your own home, think again," said MassHousing Executive Director Tom Gleason. "I tell people that with our below-market interest rates and no-down payment options, they can afford not to check us out."

New this spring:

• Higher income and home price limits: To keep pace with rising home prices, MassHousing has increased its income limits and purchase price limits for its flagship MassAdvantageTM loan program, which currently offers interest rates as low as 5.05 percent. For example, a family of three or more in the Boston area can now earn as much as $101,000 and buy an existing home priced up to $342,300. Price limits are slightly higher for newly built homes. Despite the higher limits, last year the average income of a MassHousing borrower was $47,518 and the average sales price was $155,827.

• Easier access to zero-down loans for low-income families: Qualified home buyers with incomes below 80% of the area median ($64,600 for a 1-2 person household in the Boston area) can now obtain a zero-down payment MassAdvantage100™ loan without paying any points at closing (one point, or 1 percent of the loan amount, is still required for buyers that earn more). Closing costs would be the only out-of-pocket expenses for these buyers. MassAdvantage100TM loans currently carry an interest rate of 5.35 percent.

• More competitive home improvement loans: MassHousing offers home improvement loans with more attractive features than ever before. Maximum loan amounts have been raised from $25,000 to $50,000; the interest rate is being dropped from a minimum of 5 percent to Wall Street Journal Prime (currently 4.25 percent); and borrowers can choose loan terms of 5, 10, 15 or 20 years (the interest rate on the 20-year option will be Prime plus .25%). Income limits vary by region, from $92,000 to $114,000, depending on household size. Home improvement loans cannot be used for luxury items or landscaping. Other restrictions apply.

• New benefits for home buyers who use mass transit: Some regular riders of the MBTA and the PVTA (Pioneer Valley Transit Authority) as well as the ZipcarTM users may now be able to qualify for a loan through MassHousing's MassAdvantageTM or MassAdvantage100TM program, if they meet other eligibility criteria. These loans are now being offered in addition to special no-down payment "transit-oriented" loans currently made through a select group of private banks and insured by MassHousing. These loans are designed to encourage people to live near mass transit and reduce traffic congestion.

MassHousing will continue to provide a host of other affordable homeowner loans and services, including:

• The Municipal Mortgage Program, which provides no-down payment loans to help police officers, firefighters, teachers and other public service personnel buy a home in the community where they work.

• The Take the "T" Home Mortgage Program, which offers no down payment loans to qualified riders of mass transit and ZipcarTM users. A similar program serves riders of the PVTA (Pioneer Valley Transit Au-

Home Improvement Tips

Add Value, Security And Curb Appeal To Your Home

(NAPS) – The following tips may pave the way to more secure, valuable and cosmetically pleasing home.

• Doors – One of the easiest ways to give your home a face-lift is to install a new door. When searching for your new entranceway, make sure to look for an insulated, foamcore replacement door. Metal doors are one option, which not only have an attractive wood-grain finish, but also provide better security, a tighter seal and more soundproof than regular wood doors.

• Outdoor haven – Need a place to enjoy the sun or watch the stars on a clear, summer night? Building a deck may be the perfect solution. It will not only add value to your home, but also provide an area to entertain guests during the summer. Choosing to install a TimberTech Engineered Decking System has additional benefits. Besides being low maintenance, the new Tongue-and-Groove Planks feature a slip resistant exterior decking surface that never needs sanding, painting or re-staining.

TimberTech also offers an Ornamental Railing System to complement the deck – it is available in four attractive colors. To receive a free brochure or to find a TimberTech dealer nearest you, call 1-800-3-7-7780 or visit www.timbertech.com.

'Rug Rage': Four Tips For Choosing Area Rugs

(NU) – Forty percent of women between the ages of 25 and 64 anticipate purchasing an area rug within the next two years, according to a recent study by Harris Interactive.

This rise in popularity is due in large part to new technologies that are lowering prices while raising quality, as well as chic designs that are making rugs a central par of the decorating scheme, according to DuPont.

As rugs become "all the rage," consider these tips for choosing an area rug that will complement your current décor:

• Consider whether you want the focal point of the room to be the rug or another design element, like a fireplace. If you want the rug to be the center of attention, choose one with a central medallion. If not, you may want to use a rug with a more repetitive pattern.

• Take into account the patterns on the upholstery and walls in the room, so they don't compete with each other. If your upholstery is ornate, choose a subtle pattern for the area rug. If the walls are subdued, you can choose a more vibrant pattern to add more interest.

• Choose a rug with colors that coordinate with your décor. Not all colors in te rug need match the room, but at least one color should coordinate with the existing décor.

• Remember that light-colored rugs make a room seem more spacious, while darker colors in a rug will bring a cozy atmosphere to the room. Also keep in mind the function of your rug. Light-colored rugs hide dust while dark-colored rugs hide dirt.

When purchasing a new area rug, consumers look for both quality and style. According to DuPont Stainmaster, its rug collection is high-fashion, stain- and soil-resistant, and comes with the ease of cleaning that consumers have come to expect.

"Consumer research shows that appearance, durability, quality, and stain-and-soil resistance are the most important features in selecting an area rug," said Carol Haslach, marketing communications manager for DuPont. "The DuPont Stainmaster rug collection offers all of these characteristics to consumers."

In an effort to exceed consumer expectations, DuPont continues to advance its carpet and rug technology by providing protection against static, stains, soiling and crushing.

Wants Neighborhood Meeting

Raymondi Delays Vote On Cabaret, Video License

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Any time a proposal is heard by the License Board that ;includes the name Point Pub, it always comes under scrutiny by Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi.

And so it was at Tuesday's meeting when Raymondi asked the board to continue a hearing involving Mystic Lounge, formerly the Point Pub, near St. Joseph's Church, until June 3 when he could have time to organize a neighborhood meeting.

A request for a cabaret and video license, common victular all alcoholic license at the Mystic Lounge next to Brigadoons, the former Knotty Pine) at 530-530 Washington St. was presented to the board.

Raymondi said he was "surprised " at the request because he was told that plans for the site included a multi-use facility with retail and housing included.

Atty. Louis Cassis representing the owner of Mystic Lounge George Pepdjonovic said he knew of no valid reason why the transfer ;shouldn't be granted."

Raymondi said the site is "most controversial" and that he wanted to give the neighbors an opportunity to listen to Pepdjonovic's presentation.

He said the site has always stood for "more alcohol than food" which he said is "not a good thing for Quincy Point or the City of Quincy."

Cassis told the board that their only option was to "turn down the transfer" and added the present owner could still continue to operate.

The board will meet on June 3.

Christopher Lee Earns High Academic Honors

Christopher Lee of Quincy earned high academic honors for the winter term at The Loomis Chaffee School in Windsor, Conn.

A sophomore, he is the son of Dr. Daniel Lee and Mrs. Jane Maffie-Lee.

In First Year of Term

Voters Will Continue To Fill Vacant At-Large Seats

Voters will continue to have the final say over who fills a councillor at-large seat left vacant in the first year of a term.

Last week, the city council rejected a proposal by Councillor Frank McCauley that would have placed that decision in the hands of the council.

McCauley proposed doing away with special elections for an at large seat left vacant in the first year of a term. Currently, the city council has the authority to choose a successor if a seat is left vacant in the second year of a term.

Earlier this year, Tim Cahill stepped down from his at large position after being elected to the position of state Treasurer. Since Cahill was beginning the second year of his term the council chose John Keenan as his successor.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said a special election for a councillor at-large seat typically costs between $50,000 and $60,000.

In support of his proposal, McCauley said special elections are costly.

But Ward 5 Councillor Bryan Connolly opposed the measure, saying residents should have the option of voting for a councillor at large seat in the first year of a term.

"I think it's a good idea to leave this in the hands of the public," he said.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin also voted against the proposal, saying, "The price of democracy does not come cheap."

Mary Dunn Recognized As Outstanding Teacher

Mary A. Dunn, a teacher at the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School, was recently cited as an outstanding teacher at the 8th annual Teacher of the Year program, sponsored by Wal-Mart, Sam's Club and Phi Delta Kappa International, the professional education association.

Dunn was one of 31 Boston area teachers recognized in honor of National Teacher's Day, May 6.

Wal-Mart and Sam's Club will award $31,000 in educational grants - $1,000 to each school of the local winner – to Boston-area schools through the Wal-Mart "Good Works" community involvement program. Nationwide, the company is honoring 3,400 outstanding teachers and providing $3.4 million in grants to schools.

Norfolk Labor Council Endorses Finn

The Norfolk Labor Council of the AFL-CIO has endorsed the candidacy of Joe Finn for re-election as Councillor at Large.

"Joe Finn is the kind of person we need at the state and local level of government," said Bob Rizzi, president of the union. "He understands our issues and the impact they have on the working families of Quincy."

Finn said he was grateful for the union's endorsement. "I feel I have been been formed in those values and I feel vindicated that on the various important issues facing Quincy I have been a voice for working people," said Finn.

Improve Your Golf Game, Save Your Back

By JOHN HILL, DC

After a particularly long winter, our weather is finally getting better and many golfers are more than ready to hit the links.

If you're like most of us, however, your back may not be as ready as you are. Many golfers do not maintain their summer fitness level through the winter. That first 18 holes means taking over 100 swings and walking several miles while carrying a heavy bag on your back.

So, here's what can you do to get ready for golf season, improve your swing and save your back:

• Use equipment that fits. Using clubs that are too long or too short causes you to adjust your stance and your swing and strain your muscles and joints.

• Make sure you warm up before you play. Stretch before, during and after you play.

JOHN HILL

• Take lessons to develop a proper swing technique.

• Pull your golf bag rather than carry it.

• Drink plenty of water to prevent dehydration, which increases fatigue and may cause you to adjust your swing. Drinking alcohol also leads to dehydration. It is best to avoid drinking when you play.

• Exercise regularly to strengthen your muscles and decrease the pressure you are putting on your joints. Add weight lifting and regular aerobic exercise to your routine like walking, swimming and bike riding.

• See a chiropractor to adopt a back friendly lifestyle and to keep your back in shape year round.

Doctors of chiropractic are trained and licensed to treat the entire neuromusculoskeletal system and can help to restore flexibility to your spine, knees, wrists, hips and other joints.

Dr. John Hill, a licensed chiropractor, practices at Hill Chiropractic Center for Wellness at 166 Willard St., in Quincy.

Massage Therapy is also offered at his office. For more information, contact Dr. Hill at 617-471-0646, check out his website at www.quincychiro.com or email him at jkjhill@prodigy.net.

Screen Your Child For Hearing Loss At Birth

(NU) – When you've just had a baby, one of the first things you want to know is whether your baby is healthy. Did you know that if a baby is not screened for hearing loss at birth, the problem is often not noticed until, on average, the age of 2?

Because the most rapid brain development occurs within the first 18 months of a baby's life, it is important to detect hearing loss early. Georgia has a statewide initiative that screens babies for hearing loss immediately after birth. With the Universal Newborn Hearing Screening and Intervention initiative (a program of the Georgia Department of Human Resources, Division of Public Health), parents will know if their baby demonstrates normal hearing before the baby is discharged from the hospital.

"It's important that parents make sure their baby's hearing is screened and that they know what to do next if there is a problem – before they leave the hospital," said Leslee Pool, state coordinator, Universal Newborn Hearing Screening and Intervention. "Some parents don't know about the availability of newborn hearing screening and don't realize how important the procedure is. It's also helpful if health care providers talk to parents about the screening and the significance of early detection."

There are two types of newborn hearing screening tests; each is painless and effectively screens for hearing loss. One test, Automated Otoacoustic Emissions testing, measures sounds waves generated in the inner ear in response to sound input. These responses are recorded by miniature microphones placed in the baby's external ear canals. The other test, Automated Auditory Brainstem Response testing, measures the brain's response to sounds. A hospital may use either or both of these tests to screen a baby for hearing loss.

The Georgia Department of Human Resources, Division of Public Health has a system in placed called Children 1st to ensure that babies who do not pass the hearing screening are linked to follow-up services. Children 1st maintains contact with the baby's primary care provider throughout the screening, intervention and treatment process. Participation in Children 1st is free and voluntary. There are no income guidelines or health insurance eligibility requirements.

For more information about newborn hearing screening and intervention and Children 1st in Georgia, call 1-800-822-2539 for the district coordinator in your area.

More information about newborn hearing screening and Children 1st can be found on these web sites: http://health.state.ga.us/programs/unhs or http://health.state.ga.us/programs/childrenfirst.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A BONE TO PICK WITH YOUR DENTIST

Not only can dentists detect signs of tooth decay during a dental exam, but they can also see early signs of osteoporosis. This is because a patient with the bone-thinning disease known as osteoporosis may exhibit signs of bone loss in the jaw, which increases the risk for bone loss around the teeth and tooth loss. One common sign of osteoporosis in the eyes of the dentist is the post-menopausal patient who complains that her dentures do not fit properly. Studies show that post-menopausal women with osteoporosis need new dentures three times more often, after age fifty, than women without osteoporosis. In severe cases, the extent of the bone loss makes it impossible to create functional dentures for the patient.

Do you have concerns about osteoporosis? At your next appointment we'll be happy to discuss all your dental options in detail with you. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals who want you to look and feel your best. Call us at 617-479-6220 and we'll gladly answer any questions you may have. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Come smile with us! We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If faced with early signs of osteoporosis, patients may get a referral to an orthopedist who can make a definitive diagnosis and prescribe treatment.

Rachel Sorensen Throws No-Hitter For Quincy Vs. D-Y

SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Everyone knew Rachel Sorensen had thrown a no-hitter in the Quincy High School softball team's 10-0 win over Dennis-Yarmouth Monday at Pageant Field except head coach Mike Sedar.

"I didn't know she threw a no-hitter," he admitted. "I'm too busy coaching so I can't keep track of that stuff. And the game was kind of long and tedious. When I got back home to do the book, I saw that there were no hits."

Maybe he didn't realize Sorensen, a junior, tossed her first career no-hitter because she didn't celebrate much after the game.

"She knew she threw one, but she was more happy that we won the game," Sedar said. "That's the type of kid she is. She doesn't worry about her personal stats."

It was a huge victory for the Presidents. The win, coupled with Whitman-Hanson's loss to Randolph Monday, pushed the Presidents into sole possession of first place in the Atlantic Coast League, with only four league games left on the schedule.

"I'm a believer in strength of schedule and offseason conditioning," Sedar said. "That has gotten us where we are now."

Quincy (8-4 overall, 6-2 ACL) hosted Sandwich Wednesday and today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. it faces Nauset at home and tomorrow (Friday) it travels to Randolph at 3:30 p.m.

The Presidents staked Sorensen to a 5-0 lead in the first inning. Sophomore Alysia DiMuzio (3 for 3, triple, double, 3 RBI) stroked a two-run single, sophomore Katie Walsh and senior quad-captain Shannon Paine laced RBI singles and senior quad-captain Stacey Andrew knocked in a run with a fielder's choice.

Sorensen walked one and struck out six. More importantly, she recorded 14 groundouts, which defines the type of pitcher she is.

"She's been keeping the ball down low and the defense has been stellar," Sedar said. "She pitches low and outside and puts a lot of spin on the ball. She throws a real heavy ball. Balls aren't hit hard against her. When she gets up in the zone, she loses speed and gives up fly balls."

Sedar also praised junior catcher Rose Bell. "I don't call any of the pitches," he said. "Bell called a good game for us and she played well defensively."

Sorensen's no-hit gem was a continuation of her performance last week. She blanked Whitman-Hanson in a 2-0 win last Tuesday and held them scoreless for six innings the following day before the Panthers rallied for two runs in the bottom of the seventh for a 2-1 victory.

"She had a real good week," Sedar said. "I'm real proud of her. She's just a pure pitcher."

Last Friday, Quincy defeated Nauset, 8-3, on the road. Senior quad-captain Diane Gilbody, who leads the league in hitting with a .600 average, went 3 for 4 with two RBI and three runs scored. Andrew also went 3 for 4 and had an RBI.

Red Sox Derek Lowe Visits Squantum School

RED SOX pitcher Derek Lowe (right) recently visited the Squantum Elementary School to promote Melanoma awareness this month. An official spokesperson for the Massachusetts Melanoma Foundation, he related his personal experience with skin cancer and encouraged sun protective behaviors for youngsters. Youth Football Registration Saturday

Players must have a minimum weight of 70 pounds and not exceed the maximum weight of 160 pounds. Registration fees are $85 per player and $70 per cheerleader.

Sign-ups will be held at the following locations: North Quincy Apaches, Pageant Field; West Quincy Elks, O'Rourke Field; Houghs Neck Manets, Lebrecque Field; Quincy Point Panthers, rear of Fore River clubhouse; Squantum Storm, Squantum Elementary School.

The Panthers' territory consists of points east of the MBTA Red Line to the Town River and points south of Quincy High School including Penns Hill section.

Parents or adults who would like to help out their son or daughter's team are welcome. Those interested should let the head coach know during sign-ups.

North Quincy Bows To B-R, 5-0

BASEBALL

The North Quincy High School baseball team suffered a 5-0 loss to Bridgewater-Raynham Monday afternoon at Adams Field.

Although it was the Red Raiders' seventh straight setback, first-year head coach Rick Del Vecchio continues to see improvement with his young, inexperienced squad.

"It's important for the kids to realize we're young and inexperienced," Del Vecchio said. "We graduated 13 seniors last year. The underclassmen are getting valuable playing time. They're continuing to play better and the future looks bright. But right now we're out-manned, meaning we're young and inexperienced, to compete in the Old Colony League. That will change in the near future for North Quincy."

North Quincy (2-11 overall, 2-8 OCL) traveled to Braintree Tuesday, hosted Barnstable Wednesday and tomorrow (Friday) it heads to Plymouth South at 4 p.m.

Against B-R, senior Dom Delgardo, coming off an arm injury, made his first start and had a one-hitter before running out of gas in the fifth inning.

Junior catcher Andy McAllister had a pair of hits and freshman Tom Power played well in center field for the fourth straight game since being called up from junior varsity.

Last Friday, North Quincy traveled to Falmouth for a doubleheader and dropped both games, 7-4 and 3-0.

In the first game, junior pitcher Steve Reardon pitched well despite the score. Senior John Mateu had two hits and two RBI to lead the offense and sophomore second baseman John Fitzgerald added a pair of hits and played solid defense.

In the second game, senior Gary Dalton picked up a tough loss as he went the distance. Fitzgerald had a pair of hits and freshman third baseman John Allen collected a hit.

"Gary Dalton continues to prove he is one of the best pitchers in the OCL," Del Vecchio said. "He throws his curve ball and change-up for strikes, making him one of the most impressive pitchers in the area. Every game he pitches, the opposing coaches are asking about him."

COOL IDEAS

Think about your vehicle's air-conditioning (AC) system before warm weather sets in. It is smart, preventive maintenance to operate the AC system periodically even during the winter months. Doing so circulates the system's lubricating oil and prevents the deterioration of rubber hoses and o-rings, thereby helping to prevent the leaks that allow refrigerant to escape. If the AC is having trouble cooling the vehicle's interior when it is 50 degrees F. outside, it is a sure sign of a problem. The refrigerant could be low, in which case fixing the leaks and adding new refrigerant will solve the problem. A compressor or other major component may also be at fault. Either way, fix the problem before it gets hot.

Organizers of Mini-Fenway Park recently hit a home run with Senate and House leadership for support of a bill providing a distinctive license plate for Mini-Fenway Park.

Senate President Robert Travaglini and House Speaker Tom Finneran both pledged their support for Senate Bill 1365, sponsored by Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers.

"This is an important step along the way to making this project a reality," said Ron Iacobucci, CEO of the Mini-Fenway Park parent organization.

Since receiving the mandate from the state legislature six months ago, the Mini-Fenway Park team has been working to finalize a long-term lease with the Commonwealth so it can put a financial package in place to build a replica of the famous Fenway Park.

The win improved Quincy to a perfect 6-0 on the season.

At Wollaston Golf Club

Quincy Medical Center Golf, Tennis Classic June 16

The 14th annual Quincy Medical Center Golf and Tennis Classic will be held Monday, June 16, at Wollaston Golf Club in Milton.

The Classic benefits QMC's state-of-the-art Simon C. Fireman Diagnostic Imaging Center, which was launched three years ago by a $1 million challenge grant from the Simon C. Fireman Charitable Foundation.

The Classic has raised nearly $250,000 in the past two years and in the process has become one of the most exciting and visible annual charity events on the South Shore.

Many contributions have come in from business, civic and corporate leaders, including a $10,000 donation as presenting sponsor from Mintz, Levin, Cohn, Ferris, Glovsky and Popeo, P.C.

"Quincy Medical Center is a vital community resource and our support of the hospital's many essential services is critical to the health and well-being of the community," said Peter Racicot, vice president of business development at Fallon Ambulance Service and event chairperson.

"Sponsoring Quincy Medical Center's annual tournament is a win-win situation," added Dick Cahill, president Jack Conway & Company. "As a QMC Foundation board member and community resident, I wholeheartedly support Quincy Medical Center because the hospital has been there for me and my family every time we need medical care. While there is no doubt that the company benefits on many levels from our involvement with the tournament, we support Quincy Medical Center because it is the right thing to do."

The day-long event includes golf and tennis tournaments, a cocktail reception, dinner, and a live auction and awards presentations. Players, this year, will also have access to the Wollaston Golf Club driving range. In addition, new sponsorship levels and a tournament Ad Book will offer sponsors increased visibility both during and after the tournament.

Many South Shore business and community leaders have lined up, once again, to support the annual QMC fund-raiser through volunteer activities:

• Peter Racicot, vice president of business development at Fallon Ambulance Service, will serve as event chairperson.

• Robert FitzGerald, owner of South Shore Buick, will sponsor the tournament's annual "Hole-In-One" competition for the 13th year. The lucky golfer who shoots a "hole-in-one" on the hole sponsored by the dealership will win a free 2003 Buick Rendezvous.

• Elaine DuJardin, vice president of South Coastal Bank, and Tiffanie Williams, president of Tiffanie Williams & Co., will co-chair the event's live auction and raffle for the second year.

• Dan Flynn, CEO and founder of Daniel J. Flynn Real Estate, will again donate his auctioneer services to host the evening's live auction and raffle.

Sponsorship opportunities are still available. They include new sponsorship levels and advertising opportunities in the new 2003 Ad Book. Last year's event sold out well in advance of the event.

For sponsorship information or to participate in the Classic, contact Amy Klotz, development officer, at 617-376-5493 or aklotz@quincymc.org.

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race For ALS June 7

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are getting ready for the sixth annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS.

The event, also known as the Squirrel Run, will be held Saturday, June 7, beginning and ending at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

All proceeds will benefit the Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) research at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at age 31.

Event organizers, including Jimmy's family, are planning another great day, which will include more than 200 walkers and 400 to 700 runners in the competitive/non-competitive event.

The five-mile run begins at 10 a.m. and winds its way along a flat, fast course along Quincy Shore Drive. The 2.5-mile walk encompasses a more direct route to Quincy Shore Drive, where participants will have an opportunity to walk along the ocean drive. The walk begins at 9 a.m.

According to Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother and president of the Angel Fund, the day will be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments and awards (New Balance apparel and sporting goods) for competitive runners in 15 age divisions for men and women.

"The Jimmy Kennedy/Squirrel Run has a great mix of competitive, somewhat competitive and recreational walkers and runners," he said. "Moms and dads with their kids in tow, serious runners and family members affected by this disease come together to help us raise money for ALS research."

Former Gov. Michael Dukakis has participated in the past and Rich Kennedy said he is expected to take part again this year.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Cost to pre-register is $15; $20 on the day of the event. The first 1,000 participants to register will receive a long-sleeve T-shirt.

Children are also welcome to participate in their own activities during the event. For a $5 fee per child, they can participate in races of various distances, with all participants receiving a medal. Entertainment and activities will be provided, including train rides, moon bounces and many other age-appropriate activities.

For registration information, contact Rich Kennedy at 781-383-6008 or e-mail tytaylin@aol.com; or Marty Levenson at 800-999-5950, ext. 1127, or e-mail mlevenson@adt.com.

Quincy Volleyball Tourney-Bound

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School volleyball team qualified for the state tournament last week, secured second place in the South Alliance and welcomed back one of its setters.

A pretty good week for the Presidents.

"Now we're looking to pick up some more wins to help us in our seeding in the south sectional," said head coach Christine Barrett, whose team missed the tourney by one game last season.

Quincy (9-4 overall, 6-3 league) hosted Durfee Wednesday in its final home game of the season and today (Thursday) it travels to Brockton at 5:30 p.m. Next week, it finishes the regular season at New Bedford Monday and at Weymouth Tuesday.

"We have all non-league games left: three against Big 3 teams and Weymouth is one of the top teams in its league," Barrett said. "It's really going to help us get ready for the tournament."

The remaining games will also give senior setter Matt Lavery time to develop a rhythm. Lavery, out this season with a knee injury, returned last Friday and also played Monday. Sophomore Stephen Smith, who had filled his spot, will now be more involved offensively.

"Matt has two games under his belt and now he has a week and half to get back into it and get used to his teammates," Barrett said. "Smith is a great hitter and now we can utilize him offensively."

Quincy defeated Taunton, 30-8, 30-26, Monday evening at home. Junior middle hitter Gideon Endeshaw led the way with 10 kills and three blocks. Senior middle hitter Kevin Hanlon (4 digs, 4 aces) and senior outside hitter Erald Sejdini (2 aces) each had five kills. Lavery tallied 13 assists.

Last Friday, the Presidents fell to Dighton-Rehoboth, 30-26, 31-29, at home. In his first game back, Lavery registered 15 assists, six digs, three aces and two kills. Endeshaw tallied 10 kills, nine digs and three blocks and Hanlon had seven kills and two aces.

Last Wednesday, Quincy suffered a 2-0 loss to Greater New Bedford Voc in a battle for the league title.

"The kids were real disappointed," Barrett said. "They didn't play well and they knew it."

Endeshaw (5 blocks) and senior outside hitter Anthony Sandonato each had five kills. Senior Adilson Ribeiro, called up from junior varsity, had five digs.

Quincy clinched a playoff berth last Tuesday by knocking off Wareham at home, 30-20, 30-10.

Sejdini and Hanlon (2 aces) had eight kills apiece and Endeshaw had six kills, five blocks and eight digs. Smith (15 assists, 3 aces) also turned in a strong game.

Travel Soccer Under 10 Perfect 5-0

The Quincy Travel Soccer under 10 boys team has jumped out to a perfect 5-0 start this year.

In the season opener, Bob Kozlowski netted four goals to power the offense in an 8-0 win over Whitman. Darren McGrath (2 assists) added two while Dave Joyce and Nick Dolan (2 assists) had one apiece.

Eric Kelly had two assists and Mattie Costa, Michael McGrath, Jack Kozlowski and Ian Hunter each had one. Keepers Michael McGrath and Aiden Flattery split time for the shutout.

Quincy blanked West Bridgewater, 16-0, as Tom Mannion, Bob Kozlowski, Costa, Kelly, Hunter and Jack Kozlowski netted two goals apiece. Joyce, Darren McGrath, Dolan and Flattery also scored. Michael McGrath and Flattery stood out in goal again.

Quincy edged Stoughton, 3-2, as Joyce, Costa and Mannion scored. Bob Kozlowski, Dolan, Darren McGrath and Michael McGrath all had assists.

Bob Kozlowski tallied both goals in Quincy's 2-1 win over Sharon. Darren McGrath and Jack Kozlowski picked up assists. Costa, Joyce and Michael McGrath played well.

Quincy rallied for a 4-3 victory over West Bridgewater after trailing 1-0 at the half. Mannion scored two goals and Costa (assist) and Bob Kozlowski each had one. Michael McGrath, Kelly, Darren McGrath and Hunter had assists. Flattery, Joyce and Jack Kozlowski played well.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Andrew Carnegie once said, "The average person puts only 25% of his energy and ability into his work. The world takes off its hat to those who put in more than 50% of their capacity, and stands on its head for those few and far between souls who devote 100%."

Do you ever feel an emptiness or unfulfilled desire in your life? If so, have you ever considered your view is perhaps nearsighted, instead of farsighted enough to vision your capabilities? The plain fact is that every one of us possesses certain energies and resources that are often unused or wasted.

Let us remember that each of us has some unique capacity waiting for realization. Let us remember every person is valuable in his own existence . . . for himself alone . . . Let us remember that in our communities, in our circle of family and friends, each of us can bring to fruition these innate, God-given abilities . . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Taking advice isn't always easy for self-assured Rams and Ewes who think they know what's best. But it wouldn't hurt to listen to what close colleagues have to say.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You know how to balance life's practical aspects with the poetic. This gives you a special edge this week in both your professional endeavors and your personal life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Focus on keeping a balance between your home-related activities and your workplace responsibilities. Be mindful of both without obsessing over one or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change in plans is likely, as you discover more facts about a possible commitment. Continue to ask questions and, if you're not sure about the answers, demand proof.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be careful not to let that Leonine pride keep you from seeking wise, experienced counsel before making an important decision. A family member once again seeks your help.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That surge of Virgo energy drives you to take on more work assignments. Be careful you don't overdo it, or you might find yourself overdone: e.g., burned out.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your decision to be upfront with colleagues on a touchy matter causes some consternation at first. But in the end, your honesty wins their trust and admiration.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) As in the past, someone again wants to share a secret with you, knowing it will be safe. But do you really want to be this person's confidante? Think about it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) As one of nature's straight shooters, you seek to correct misconceptions about a project. Do so, of course, but without giving away too much too soon.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Creative pursuits continue to be strong in the gifted Goat's aspect. New friendships can come from sharing these experiences with like-minded art aficionados.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolve lingering grumblings over your way of doing things by keeping your mind open to suggestions while continuing to show how your plans will work.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The perceptive Piscean might find that changing course in midstream isn't as workable as it would seem. Explore this option carefully before making a decision.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your willingness to share your love of life's good things brings joy to many, including, of course, yourself.

Trash Pickup To Cost $1 Million More

which will be responsible for disposing of the city's solid waste material. SEMASS operates a waste-to-energy facility in Rochester, Mass.

Although costs are increasing, residents can expect to positive changes, according to Fink.

Yard waste pickup will continue under the new contract with BFI, he said. In addition, residents will be able to put out TVs and computer monitors for pickup. Previously, residents had to take TVs and monitors to a DPW yard for disposal, Fink said.

Fink said changes in state and federal regulations have driven up the costs of trash pickup and disposal. Since 1985, those costs have risen approximately 585 percent, he said.

Fink said Quincy's increase is not as steep as that of some communities, which are paying up to 50 percent more for services this year.

He said it was important for the city to award separate contracts for collection and disposal. This will allow the city to handle any possible changes in state or federal regulations regarding pickup and disposal of materials.

Trash from the city is moved to a transfer facility in Braintree, before being shipped to the SEMASS facility in Rochester.

A request for proposals for the curbside waste and recycling contract was issued in January, with 11 vendors responding, Fink said.

Iacobucci and Brian Buckley.

Two candidates sought nomination papers but were informed they first had to establish a campaign committee.

Robert Boussy, who ran for mayor against James Sheets in 1999, said he will be a candidate for that office again this year.

John Rodophele did not indicate what office he will seek.

Both were given campaign committee forms to fill out and return to obtain their nomination papers.

Candidates have until July 29 to pick up and return nomination papers.

The preliminary election will be held Sept. 16 and the final Nov. 4.

Former Coast Guard Boat City Anti-Terrorism Guardian

updated its fleet of patrol boats, the opportunity presented itself to acquire two of the old boats. Last week, Delahunt helped the Massachusetts State Police land the other boat, which was also turned over Monday.

The National Park Service too played a critical role in the transfer of the patrol boat to the city of Quincy.

Since surplus federal property can only be transferred from one federal agency to another, the Coast Guard first gave the boat to the Park Service which in turn transferred it to Quincy with the provision it could be used in emergencies on the Boston Harbor Islands.

Hancock St. Repaving Underway In Wollaston

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro reminds residents that the city has begun repaving Hancock St from Wayland St. to Albion Rd.

In addition, sidewalk replacement is underway across from Fenno St., he said.

Although the work may cause minor inconveniences it should be completed by July 4, he said.

New Police Program Accents Self-Defense

Teaching Women How To Defend Against Rape

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Women concerned about their safety or who wish to improve their self-defense skills are now able to take part in an intense new program offered by the Quincy Police Department.

"Rape Aggression Defense Systems," or RAD, is available free of charge to women seeking instruction on defense techniques and ways to fend off attackers during various types of assault.

"There is not one woman who has not felt uncomfortable or disadvantaged at one time in their life," said Quincy Police Officer Lisa Linskey. "If we can keep one person from experiencing that type of situation then it will be a great success."

The department's inaugural class ended last week, and the second class will begin during the first week in June. Classes are kept small and the names of participants remain confidential. The training location, usually a local church, is kept close to the cuff as well.

The program has been made available with the help of an $11,000 federal community policing grant and the dedication of Quincy's finest.

Wide Range Of Licenses Affected

Health Dept. Hikes Fees To Help Generate Revenue

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

In a move designed to generate additional revenue, the city council Monday night agreed to hike certain fees for a wide range of health department licenses and permits, including those required to run a retail food business and the cost of burials.

At the request of Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the council agreed to increase certain fees and create a few new ones. The fees fall under the jurisdiction of the health department and are expected to bring in an additional $31,000 to the city's coffers. They will take effect upon the approval of Mayor William Phelan.

The largest amount of new revenue will come from funeral directors, who are charged a $10 fee for every burial. That fee will double to $20, said Scheele. The city hopes to raise an additional $7,000 from that particular fee, he said.

Owners of food establishments will have to dip a bit deeper into their pockets to operate in the city. The fee for operating a food business of up to 50 people will double, from $25 to $50. The permit for operating a food establishment of 51 to 100 will jump from $50 to $100. Operating an establishment that holds more than 100 people will cost $150, up from $100.

Other fees scheduled to increase include;

- To sell tobacco, from $10 to $25
- License for massage practitioners, from $25 to $50
- To operate a tanning establishment, from $100 to $150
- License to operate a bakery, from $50 to $75
- License to make frozen desserts, from $10 to $20

In addition, the health department has created two new fees; including a charge for operating a recreational camp, $25; and a fee for using a temporary septic for more than eight days, $25.

Despite the increases, Scheele said the city's heath-related fees would continue to compare favorably with other cities and towns in the Commonwealth. Many of the fees have not been hiked since 1989, he said.

"We compared our fees with other cities and towns

Council Approves $233,000 To Pay Quincy College Rent

The city council Monday night approved a $233,000 appropriation to the school department to offset a shortfall caused by the ongoing rent dispute with Quincy College.

The issue has been brewing since the school committee raised the college's rent on Coddington Hall and two other buildings from $217,000 to $450,000.

The committee threatened to evict the college after it refused to pay the increase. The situation remains at a stalemate.

Councillors voted 9-0 in favor of the appropriation.

"I certainly want to help the school committee meet their bottom line," said McCauley, voting in favor of the appropriation. He noted that next year's school budget calls for a $450,000 payment as well.

McCauley and Councillor John Keenan urged both sides to clear up the matter as soon as possible.

Weekly Mosquito Spraying Starts June 5

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project will begin spraying a pesticide June 5 for mosquito control, according to the Quincy Health Department.

Applications will occur on Thursday mornings from 2 to 6 a.m. and continue weekly until the week of September 30.

Not all areas of the city will be treated on a given date, according to the health department. If inclement weather occurs or equipment fails, the application will be added to the next schedule date, the department said.

The pesticide sprayed is called Resmethrin, which is used for its compatibility with the environment, its low toxicity to mammals and its low irritation levels to wildlife, the department said. It is applied in ultra low volume (ULV) sprayers at a rate of one half ounce per acre of finished spray.

For more information, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at 781-762-3681 or the project's website, at http://users.rcn.com/ncmcp.

Sewer Repair, West Nile Virus Topics At Ward 3 Neighborhood Meeting

Ward 3 residents will have the opportunity to receive an update on the North Quincy Lateral Sewer Project and the West Nile Virus at a neighborhood meeting, Thursday, May 29 at 7 p.m. at the Wollaston School gym.

Sponsored by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the meeting is designed to update residents on the repair and replacement of sewer lines in the Montclair and Wollaston sections of the city. Representatives from the Department of Public Works and Weston and Sampson, Inc., the project engineers, will attend the meeting.

The project, scheduled to commence in June, will include the repair and replacement of sewer lines on selected streets in the area. The work will prevent blockages, backups and sewer collapses, as well as inhibit sewage from leaking into the ground and infiltrating the storm drain system, Coughlin said. In addition, the work will prevent sewage from polluting the Bog, the Neponset River and Wollaston Beach, he said.

Coughlin said the project should save the city thousands of dollars in MWRA sewer assessments.

Also, Health Commissioner Drew Scheele will attend the meeting and present an informative discussion on the West Nile Virus. Coughlin said the topic is of concern to residents as the summer months approach.

Work To Begin On Adams Field

Council Approves Mayor's $10M Open Space Plan

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council Monday night approved Mayor William Phelan's $10 million natural resources plan, which secures many acres of land for open space and renovates the city's parks and recreation facilities.

Despite reservations from certain members of the council, the body overwhelmingly approved Phelan's plan by a 9-0 vote.

"This is a landmark accomplishment by our city government," said Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly, a strong supporter of the plan. "This is going to change the face of our park and recreation system. Everyone would agree that there were many ways this could have been done, but I think the current plan does a great job in balancing the city's priorities."

Although he expressed concern about the overall mix of the plan - open space versus park renovations – Council President Dan Raymondi voted in favor of the proposal, saying "we need to work in harmony with the mayor's office."

Councillor Joe Finn had lingering questions about certain projects within the overall plan but ultimately voted in favor of it.

Phelan's plan earmarks $5 million for open space, $4 million for park renovations and $1 million for improvements to the salt marsh wetlands at Broad Meadows.

The plan will be bonded and paid for by the city's hotel/motel tax, which was proposed by Raymondi in 2001.

Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton said the plan places Quincy in a unique situation compared to other cities and towns.

"We are buying open space and making capital improvements for parks for children and families without affecting the taxpayer," said Newton. "We look at other communities and they are laying off employees or laying off firefighters. Here we are talking about buying open space and fixing our parks."

Newton also praised Raymondi for his work in pushing for a hotel/motel tax.

Renovations to Adams Field will begin this weekend, according to Park, Cemetery and Forestry Commissioner Tom Koch. The field will close on Saturday and will not re-open until August, when the Babe Ruth World Series arrives in the city, he said.

Phelan's plan calls for some $850,000 worth of renovations to the field, which will include the installation of new bleachers, upgrades to the lighting system and the construction of a new backstop and perimeter fencing.

"I would like to express my gratitude to the mayor for his vision and the support by the city council," said Koch. "We are under a tough deadline to get this work done and it will be difficult and challenging."

Koch said the work on Adams Field will be done by a combination of contractors and employees in-house. "We are going to do as much as we possibly can, and certain work will be bid out," he said.

Koch said the renovations to Adams Field will benefit the city economically as visitors come to see the Babe Ruth World Series.

In addition, some preliminary work may begin this fall at Mitchell and McCoy Fields, Koch said. Phelan's plan will spend approximately $200,000 for renovations to those areas.

Phelan stated that Allen, who previously held the position of Executive Secretary, will continue to represent him on various boards and organizations and serve as an advisor.

"One of Laurie's responsibilities in the mayor's office has been the supervision of the Purchasing Department and of spending practices for all city departments," said Phelan. "More importantly, she has the integrity and intelligence necessary for this critical position."

The Names The Same -- Almost

There could be a little confusion in the city council election campaign this year.

Three sound-alike names: Keenan, Keener, Keegan.

KEENAN

KEENER

KEEGAN

John Keenan is running to keep the at-large seat he was appointed to when Tim Cahill left it after being elected state treasurer.

William Keener is a candidate for the Ward 6 seat Joseph Newton is vacating at the end of the year.

And, Joseph Keegan is running for the Ward 1 seat incumbent Greg Hanley is leaving.

Voters might have a little trouble identifying one from the other as the campaign season heats up.

But not as much, of course, if all three were running at-large or for the same ward seat.

And, if all three were elected?

Might be a bit challenging at council meetings for those in the audience or watching on Quincy Access TV to keep track of roll votes: Councillor Keenan . . . Councillor Keener . . . Councillor Keegan.

THERE'S SPECULATION ON the political front that Ron Mariano will run for the Ward 2 city council seat if Dan Raymondi decides to challenge Bill Phelan for the mayor's office.

MARIANO

But Mariano says that's all it is -- speculation.

"No, I have no intention of running for Ward 2 councillor," he says.

Mariano is a state representative and school committeeman.

That combination is more practical than state representative and city councillor.

If he were a city councillor it would mean he would have an election yearly: city one year, state the next.

School committee terms are four years, not two as council terms are, which gives Mariano a breather between elections.

DAVE COLTON, Quincy public works commissioner under Mayor James Sheets, is now head of the Milton DPW but hasn't lost his interest in Quincy.

COLTON

Colton, who still lives here, is again heading up the campaign committee for Jimmy Liang, making his second bid for a city council at-large seat.

Liang two years ago was the city's first council candidate of Asian descent and the first to make the final ballot.

A BIG DAY coming up Friday for Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly.

CONNOLLY

He will graduate from Boston College Law School where Supreme Court Justice Stephen Breyer will be the commencement speaker. Connolly, a 1996 graduate of Notre Dame, will take the Massachusetts Bar exam in July.

And, he will be seeking his second term as Ward 4 councillor. Making his political debut two years ago, he unseated incumbent Michael D'Amico.

A LETTER FROM a Quincy Point boyhood friend, Lindsay Tait brought back a few fond memories.

Tait, who grew up to become a well-known banker in the Quincy-South Shore area, now lives in Cheshire, Ct. and gets The Sun via mail to keep up on the news in his old hometown.

A recent item from the past in the Quincy Yesterdays column caught his eye. It was about Rev. Bedros Baharian announcing in May, 1947 that 24 young people from Quincy Point Congregational Church would spend two weeks in Harlem in the summer repaying a visit by 22 Harlem youngsters to Quincy the summer before.

"I am proud to say I was one of those kids," Lindsay writes. "And I remember when the kids arrived from Harlem to the Point, there was a lot of concern among the adults as most of them came from Scotland, England and Ireland and were not accustomed to blacks.

"But the members of the church had so much respect and love for Bedros Baharian. . . The Point people, as they say, did us all proud. Trips to Nantasket, Avalon Beach, softball and a cook-out at Faxon Park, Red Sox game, Boston Common, etc."

In Harlem, Lindsay spent his time with a family living in an apartment over a store front next to the subway.

"But what a wonderful family, two boys and a girl. I shared a bed with a boy named Buzzi. We stayed up most of the night talking about his life and asking about mine in the Point. His sister (who had come to Quincy the summer before) could not forget McGibbons' Market across the street from the fire station."

Lindsay recalls a few of the old Quincy Point landmarks now gone: the Lincoln Theater (where he ushered), the bowling alleys below, Stone's drugstore, Zack's clothing store, Mattie's, the Avalon. (Of course, we kids never got to the latter two).

"I can't tell you the last time I wrote a letter," he says. "I used to dictate them. But I think I still have handwriting that you can read. Thank Miss Scripter at Quincy Point Junior."

(Nice hearing from you, Lindsay. I'm glad your handwriting held up down through the years but Miss Scripter would scream if she could see mine.)

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1925 postcard view of Dorchester Bay looking north from Dorchester Street near the end of Trevore Street in Squantum. Thompson Island is on the horizon in the right center. The spit jutting out from Squantum Park on the right protects what is now known as Nickerson Beach and for years has provided a safe anchorage for small boats like those shown here. A sewer vat has replaced the small building at the end of the spit. At one time there was a pier extending out from here with floats for boats and swimming. Mrs. Ellen Garneau, who in the 1920s ran the small store originally known as Watt's Variety at 735 East Squantum Street, published this postcard.

City Observes National Public Works Week

In accordance with the tradition of the American Public Works Association (APWA), those who work in professions that provide and maintain public facilities and services are being honored this week as part of National Public Works Week (May 18-24).

"We value the commitment of our employees and the role public works personnel play in keeping residents of the community safe and the infrastructure functioning," said DPW Commissioner Jay Fink.

The first National Public Works Week, held in 1960 and instituted by the APWA, was an outgrowth of an aggressive public education campaign, according to Mayor William Phelan's office.

The observance week was designed to bring about greater appreciation for the importance of public works in community life, Phelan said. The program also seeks to enhance the prestige of the professional engineers and administrators serving in public works positions and to arouse the interest of young people to pursue careers in the field, he said.

Public works professionals include those who manage water, sewer, public transportation, and refuse removal systems as well as those responsible for maintaining public buildings and grounds.

"They are, in short, the people who maintain and improve the systems and services vital to a community's health, safety and comfort," said Phelan.

"I am very proud of the efforts of Commissioner Fink and the dedication demonstrated by all of the men and women of the Department of Public Works," said Phelan. "Despite the terrible winter that we have just had coupled with the drastic reduction in the workforce as a result of last year's fiscal crisis, critical services are being provided to the citizens of Quincy."

Praise For Officer Lisa Linskey

(The following letter to Police Chief William Falco was also submitted to The Quincy Sun by the writer for publication.)

Dear Chief Falco:

Please accept this letter as an expression of appreciation on behalf of the actions of officer Lisa Linskey on April 28.

My dog was hit my a car on that date and officer Linskey was the responding officer.

Her actions and professionalism contributed in a great way to our pet surviving the accident.

Her compassion and empathy towards my son helped to ease the pain throughout this family tragedy.

Her actions should be acknowledged. Our appreciation for her actions are immeasurable.

She is an example of the effort and professionalism of all of Quincy's police officers, firefighters and other emergency personnel.

With much appreciation,

Wonders About The New Budget

Regarding the new budget for Quincy . . . no layoffs and additional money for education?

I hope this budget is true and the numbers are legit, but it's hard to believe. With the cutback in state aid and a lousy economy, Quincy is the only town/city in the state, that I know of, that won't have layoffs.

I'm hoping, but it's hard to believe. What do you think?

Woodward Considers Admitting Girls Not Born In Quincy

This Week
54 Years Ago

Trustees of the Woodward School for Girls met to discuss the possibility of admitting girls who were not born in Quincy in order to increase the student body.

Rep. Charles A. Wing, minister of the First Parish Church and chairman of the board, said that no definite action was taken at the meeting.

Attorneys told the board that court action would have to be taken to secure a change in entrance requirements and such action probably would be contested by Dartmouth College.

Under the terms of the will of Dr. Ebenezer Woodward, who founded the school, the property would be turned over to Dartmouth if the trust were dissolved.

PR VOTE COUNT GOING SLOW

The results of the Student Council elections at North Quincy High School indicated that it would take 11 days to count the votes in Quincy's first proportional representation Plan E election in the fall.

It took two hours to count 815 ballots cast at North Quincy, leading to the assumption that it would take 11 eight-hour days to count the 36,000 ballots expected to be cast in the fall.

Or, said an optimist, less than four days if the counters worked around the clock.

NEW TEACHERS CHOSEN

The School Committee elected 11 new teachers, 10 for the elementary schools and one for the high school, and Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard said that about 20 more were needed.

Chosen were Jacqueline Bragg, Elizabeth Grandfield, Anne Connolly, Kathleen Tivnan, Eunice Chatterson, Constance MacKin, Pearl McKenney, Phyllis Gallagher, Rosella Mitchell, Priscilla Darling and Joseph Bennett.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Kim's Pumpkin Mousse

When people see me, and know how I love to cook and have this food column, they usually give me some new recipe for either an entree or dessert.

And so it was last week when I was getting ready to watch little Ellie as her mother, our daughter Nancy prepared to go to work. Her friend Kim who was visiting gave me today's great recipe for pumpkin mousse.

It calls for sugar free vanilla pudding if you are watching your sugar intake or just counting calories. However, it can certainly be made with ordinary pudding. It is so delicious both ways and very simple to prepare. When I tasted it, I thought it was like eating a piece of pumpkin pie without the crust which I do 99 percent of the time.

Kim's Perfect Mousse

2 packages sugar free vanilla pudding (or the other)

2 cups ;skim milk (or other if you prefer)

1 large can pumpkin

1 teaspoon cinnamon

1 teaspoon vanilla

1 cup cool whip

Cook pudding according to directions. Add the pumpkin and cinnamon and vanilla. Fold but do not beat the cool whip into the mixture.

Chill thoroughly and top with dollop of cool whip, sprinkle with added cinnamon or chocolate shavings.

P.S. Kim took two of Nancy's three children home with her little girls, so I had only Ellie to take care of who was asleep for the two hours I was there. And when our son-in-law Jed came home he brought me a coffee and a scratch ticket What a guy!

House Moves To Protect Senior's Drug Program

The State House of Representatives has voted to protect the Prescription Advantage program, the state's unique prescription drug plan for the elderly and disabled.

"We are in the midst of a budgetary crisis, but our principles remain strong," said Rep. Ron Mariano.

"It is our responsibility as a legislature to ensure we protect those who need it most. By saving this program we are assuring that our neediest seniors will not be facing a choice between food, rent or prescription drugs."

Prescription Advantage is a first-in-the-nation state program started three years ago, which offers insurance coverage for prescription drugs to Massachusetts seniors. It has more than 82,000 enrolees.

Gov. Mitt Romney announced in March that he intended to eliminate the program unless the federal government agreed to provide funding by June.

Quincy College changed my life.

Quincy College is people like you
your friends, your co-workers, your neighbors.

I never imagined I would be a college student.

But, in two weeks I will be graduating from Quincy College as a surgical technologist with a new career awaiting me at one of Boston's reputable hospitals.

As a young, single mother I never believed I would be able to make a better life for my son and myself. I worked in retail and I struggled to make ends meet. Then I came to Quincy College and my life changed.

The Allied Health programs at Quincy College helped me find my niche. I am entering a new profession where I will be making a difference in people's lives just like the dedicated faculty who helped change my life.

But even more than an allied health professional, I have become someone who my son can be proud of. I have become a role model especially to him and hopefully to other Quincy residents who will come to Quincy College to change their lives like I did.

'Blue Star' Families Marshals For Flag Day Parade

Quincy's "Blue Star" families, those with sons and daughters currently serving in the Armed Forces overseas, will be the designated Grand Marshals in this year 52nd annual Quincy Flag Day Parade.

The Flag Day Parade will be held Saturday, June 14, stepping off at 7 p.m. on Coddington Street and marching up Hancock Street to Merrymount Park where it will disband at Adams Field.

The Blue Star families will comprise the entire Grand Marshal contingent in the parade which will also feature bands, floats, drum corps, military vehicles, specialty units and 1,500 flag-waving youngsters.

"We are honored to recognize the commitment made by our servicemen and women and the sacrifices that their families are making as their loved ones are in harm's way," said Ed Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership.

"We are proud that so many Quincy men and women are serving our nation well over in the Middle East."

The Blue Star Flag was originally given to families during World War I to hang in their windows while their sons were fighting overseas. The practice was revived by the American Legion for the most recent war in Iraq.

The families were invited to participate in the parade by Honorary Chairman Mayor William Phelan.

"The Flag Day Parade has always been a family-oriented event and what better way to utilize the Grand Marshal designation than recognizing the sacrifices that an entire family makes when a family member serves in an active conflict," said Tom Koch, chairman of the Flag Day Parade Committee.

"These past months have been anxious times for the families of our servicemen and women and we are proud to honor those families with the Grand Marshal title."

Following the parade, there will be a flag-raising ceremony at Pageant Field featuring the raising of a 30 by 60-foot version of Old Glory. The night will conclude with a fireworks display over Black's Creek.

Bliss Salon & Spa Holds Grand Opening In Quincy Center

The Bliss Salon & Spa, 1604 Hancock St., a new women owned business, recently held its grand opening with a ribbon cutting and open house.

Mayor William Phelan, Councillor Doug Gutro and representatives of the Quincy 2000 Corporation joined the owners, Donna Hidalgo-Mavromates, Elaine Foley, Jo-Anne Hidalgo-Glennon and Terry (Tia) Foley at the ceremony.

Quincy 2000 board member Don Uvanitte and Loan Pool members Greg Glennon of Citizens Bank and John Mannion of South Shore Savings Bank also participated.

Quincy 2000 is the city's public/private partnership for economic development, providing loans to help eligible new businesses.

"Quincy 2000 is one of the few places where financing for start-up businesses is available and we knew we had a winner here from day one," said Dick Mason of Quincy 2000. "Bliss brings the combination of professional experience and business acumen that we seek to support."

Bliss Salon & Spa presented a detailed and rigorous business plan which evidenced their ability to compete and succeed in Quincy's competitive salon industry, he said.

"The Bliss facility is all new and exquisitely equipped and furnished and represents the long held dreams of its four owners, all of whom are Quincy natives," Mason said.

"Bliss is a unique partnership of three experienced spa service practitioners while the fourth owner holds an MBA and will use her 12 years of marketing and business experience to guide the business aspects of the spa."

Donna Hidalgo-Mavromates, speaking for all four owners, said:

"We wanted to create an inviting ambiance for our clients and took advantage of the building's original birch wood floors and exposed brick walls.

"Our location offers an abundance of foot traffic, both on- and off-street parking and reserved parking in the rear.

"We sought out Quincy 2000 for our debt financing because of the programs, support and guidance they offer. Additionally, we were terrifically well served by our building owner, Tony Agnitti, and his brother, Larry, who acted as general contractor."

Financing was provided by the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool, a consortium of 11 banks which serve the city of Quincy, including Abington Savings, Century Bank, Citizens, Colonial Federal, Eastern, Fleet, Rockland Trust, South Shore Co-operative, South Shore Savings, Sovereign and The Bank of Canton.

Quincy Author Pens Kids' Book On Vietnam

Philip Gavin's first literary effort, a children's history book called "The Fall of Vietnam," has just been published by Lucent Books of San Diego.

The longtime Quincy resident focuses not only on the American experience and the collapse of South Vietnam but on the postwar period, the boat people and the invasion of Cambodia as well.

Gavin has been active in historical circles for several years as trustee and curator of the Dorchester Historical Society and founder of The History Place, an educational site on the Internet.

He has written extensively for the Web site on the rise of Adolph Hitler and the Holocaust, the Vietnam War and the Irish Potato Famine.

Gavin has college degrees from Northeastern and Boston University and a background in journalism and television. He received an award in 1994 for "Songs of the Season," a children's holiday special celebrating Christmas and Hanukkah.

He is working on his second children's history book, entitle "World War II in Europe," examining history's most lethal conflict.

SPRING CAR CARE

Gas Prices Fall Again, Says AAA

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts have fallen for the eighth consecutive week, and are now 13 cents less than the 2003 high in mid-March, according to AAA Southern new England.

AAA's weekly survey of prices in Massachusetts found self serve, regular unleaded averaging $1.56[9] per gallon, one cent less than last week. Eight weeks ago, on March 17, prices locally reached the high for the year, $1.69[9], but have fallen each week since. The current price of $1.56[9] is 15 cents higher than the $1.41[9] found last year at this time.

AAA's weekly survey continues to show a wide range in prices within each grade of fuel. Self serve unleaded ranges 28 cents from $1.43[9] to $1.71[9]. AAA urges motorists to shop around for the best prices in their area.

AAA Southern New England is a not-for-profit auto club with 27 offices in Rhode Island and eastern and central Massachusetts, providing 1.9 million local AAA members with travel, insurance, finance and auto-related services.

10 Timely Travel Trips For Memorial Day Driving

There is nothing worse than taking off for a driving vacation and two hours out on the road you encounter car problems.

According to the Car Care Council, "tow truck operators in resort areas or along Interstate highways see all too many travelers forced to return home ahead of schedule due to car touble. The situation usually means more than just a repair bill. It can involve towing charges, lodging and possible a rental car. Add to that the cost of extra phone calls, meals and general inconvenience and the ordeal becomes expensive."

So, if spiraling gas prices have not discouraged you from hitting the road this Memorial Day weekend, take heed before you take off. The Car Doctor at Precision tune Auto Care has 10 timely tips for saving money on gas and for ensuring a trouble-free trip.

• Closely inspect your tires. At highway speeds, a blow out with the vehicle fully loaded with family and luggage could spell disaster. Check for balding, bumps, nails, proper inflation. Don't forget your spare tire. Is it inflated? Do you have a jack and all needed tools for changing a tire? Check tires when cool. Tire pressure will change after extended highway speeds.

• Have brakes and brake fluid inspected. If fluid is low, do no just top it off. There's a reason it is low. Check brake pads and shoes for wear.

• Visually check all brake lights, turn signals and head lamps – including high beams – to ensure they are working and properly focused.

• Have cooling system examined by a trained professional for the following:

— leaks

— sound hoses

— coolant level and mixture ratio (a 50/50 coolant to water ratio is the most common ratio as recommended by manufacturers)

— radiator cap (Does it tighten securely? Are seals intact?)

— cooling fan to make sure it is operating properly (the fan affects both engine cooling and the air conditioner)

— pH level of coolant (it should be around 9.5 or 10 for green type coolant)

• Make sure your technician checks your A/C system for proper freon level and condition of belts. To help conserve gasoline, use your air conditioner on the road rather than keeping windows down. Open windows create wind drag, straining the engine.

• Change engine oil and filters if you haven't done that in the last three months or 3,000 miles.

• Check the condition of the windshield wiper blades and have them changed if they do not provide adequate visibility, and top off the windshield wiper solution (do not use plain water).

• Use cruise control to maintain a steady speed and save gas.

• Use only the fuel octane recommended for your car. Higher octane gas, which produces less energy, not only costs more, it also yields lower miles per gallon.

• Every time you stop for gas, check oil level and inspect tires, and clean the windshield. Do NOT check coolant level when engine is hot, except to visually inspect the overflow (or recovery) bottle. If you are just making a quick pit stop (five minutes or less), do not cut the engine, let the car idle for a few minutes.

For added peace of mind, Joel Burrows, a.k.a. "The Car Doctor" and veteran trainer at Precision Tune Auto Car, suggests an engine and emissions analysis to ensure there are no problems and that the engine is running at maximum efficiency. This, too, helps reduce your fuel bill. And for safety, he recommends bringing a cell phone and road map.

Spring Into Action With Proper Car Care

(NAPS) – Warmer temperatures mean it's time to check your car. According to the Car Care Council, nearly eight out of 10 vehicles on the road need maintenance or repair.

With a little maintenance now, it may be possible to prolong your car's life and prevent costlier repairs down the road. Here are answers to some common vehicle care questions.

Q: I didn't keep up with preventive maintenance during the winter. How will that affect my car in the long term?

A: Winter weather can be particularly taxing on your car. Increased stop-and-go driving can be tough on your motor oil and extreme temperature fluctuations can cause moisture accumulation in your fuel line. Have the car serviced, and consider having it inspected by a qualified repair shop if larger problems are discovered.

Q: How do I prepare my car for spring weather?

A. Some of the routine maintenance your should perform for spring includes inspecting belts and hoses for cracks or leaks; inspecting the air filter; checking tire treads and inflation; and changing windshield wiper blades if they are damaged. Overheating also becomes a bigger problem in warmer weather, so pay particular attention to your car's radiator fluid level and coolant overflow reservoir.

Q: In cleaning my car, should I keep anything special in mind?

A: While washing your car, don't forget to spray underneath. Road salts used during the winter may have accumulated under the steel frame, especially behind the rear wheels, and should be washed away before they corrode. Also, wax your car and check the body for minor scrapes and paint loss.

Teaching Women How To Defend Against Rape

we want people to feel safe - that's the idea behind this program," said Linskey, the city's lead RAD instructor.

Officers Karyn Barkas, Patrick Buonaugurio, James Dentremont, Lauren Lambert and Linskey volunteered to become RAD instructors. Bob Hanna, the city's crime prevention officer, also participates in the classes and fields questions about safety issues.

In February, all five officers were certified as RAD instructors after attending a training program at Endicott College.

Participants can expect to attend four, three-hour classes during a given week. Linskey said the program consists of a combination of lecture and hands-on instruction. She said all enrollees undergo a background check for security purposes.

In the beginning, participants receive a manual and learn about such subjects as risk reductions strategies, date rape and the basic principles of self-defense.

As the class progresses, students will participate in hands-on training. Students have the opportunity to enhance their motor skills and practice ground defense techniques.

"Many women are apprehensive at first, but you can see how they gain confidence as the classes progress," said Linskey, a three-year veteran of the Quincy Police Department. "I tell them that they will not be the same woman when they walk out that door as when they first came in. A lot of women don't realize their own capabilities. This empowers them and shows them how capable they are."

Finally, students have the option of participating in "simulated assault" scenarios at full contact with instructors, who wear protective gear. This provides women with the opportunity to utilize their skills in a safe training environment monitored by instructors.

Representatives from the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, as well as the Stoughton and Milton Police Departments provide assistance and equipment.

Judging by the reaction of students, the first class was a great success, the officers said.

"Many of the students were very excited when they finished the class," said Buonaugurio. "They were wondering when they could take an advanced class to further enhance their skills."

During the 1980s, Hanna said he participated in safety training programs at Quincy High School and Quincy Junior College. Those programs proved to be very popular with residents. "We were inundated during that time, so this is a natural progression of that," said Hanna. "I remember many women asking me if there was some sort of hands-on training for them."

More than 100,000 participants throughout the country have taken the RAD course. The curriculum is taught at more than 450 colleges, police departments and rape crisis centers in the United States, according to the officers.

Hanna said the department will be seeking to extend the program into fiscal 2004 as community policing funds become available.

Advanced courses or similar instruction for kids may be offered in the future, Hanna noted. He said local companies have inquired about the program as well.

To learn more about the program or to enroll, call 617-745-5746, or visit the RAD website at www.rad-systems.com or the City of Quincy website at www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

Marines Aid Sherman St. Drain Line Project

The Marine Wing Support Squadron 472 based in Westover Air Force Base mobilized this past weekend to relay a 24-inch diameter drain line on Sherman St., according to Mayor William Phelan's office.

The squadron is continually searching for support projects to assist local communities and gain experience in actual construction projects, the mayor's office said.

Phelan met with the Marines and members of the Parks and Public Works departments to strategize on the types of projects that faced Quincy and would qualify to meet the Marines' objectives.

The Sherman St. drain replacement will be a trial project to determine if it is successful and to plan future endeavors between Quincy and the Marines, Phelan said.

"This is a great opportunity to receive assistance to accomplish construction projects that are on our plates that we currently do not have the finances or manpower to proceed with," he said.

The drain line has corroded to the point where replacement became necessary, Phelan said. There had been fears that if the pipe had not been replaced soon it could collapse, causing personal injury or property damage, he said.

The drain is laid between two homes on Sherman St. running the length of their properties. The drain line conveys storm water adjoining streets.

17-25 BROAD STREET, QUINCY

Daniel Flynn & Co. Sells 17-25 Broad St. Building To Dependable Cleaners, Inc.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc., a Quincy-based full-service real estate firm, has sold the former Harbar Corporation manufacturing building at 17-25 Broad St., Quincy.

The 13,860 square foot facility sold to Dependable Cleaners, Inc. of Quincy for $1,010,000. Commercial broker Derek Holt represented the seller and obtained the buyer.

Despite what has largely been categorized as a slow commercial real estate market, the building was placed under agreement after just three weeks on the market.

"Despite the economy, there's always a buyer for every property," said Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski. "When the market is down, you have to be more resourceful to find them."

The property is widely-known as the former Merrymount Bowling Lanes, but was rebuilt in the 1990s and utilized as a 10,000 square foot warehouse with 3,000 square feet of front office space. Dependable has not disclosed its intended use for the building.

Harbar, a food manufacturer, has relocated to 320 Turnpike St., Canton, and has retained Flynn & Co. to market a vacant 9,000 square feet of office in their new building.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. specializes in commercial sales and leasing, residential real estate, real estate auctions, property management and construction. For more information, call 617-479-9000.

Add Value, Security And Curb Appeal To Your Home

(NAPS) – The following tips may pave the way to more secure, valuable and cosmetically pleasing home.

• Doors – One of the easiest ways to give your home a face-lift is to install a new door. When searching for your new entranceway, make sure to look for an insulated, foamcore replacement door. Metal doors are one option, which not only have an attractive wood-grain finish, but also provide better security, a tighter seal and more soundproof than regular wood doors.

• Outdoor haven – Need a place to enjoy the sun or watch the stars on a clear, summer night? Building a deck may be the perfect solution. It will not only add value to your home, but also provide an area to entertain guests during the summer. Choosing to install a TimberTech Engineered Decking System has additional benefits. Besides being low maintenance, the new Tongue-and-Groove Planks feature a slip resistant exterior decking surface that never needs sanding, painting or re-staining.

TimberTech also offers an Ornamental Railing System to complement the deck – it is available in four attractive colors. To receive a free brochure or to find a TimberTech dealer nearest you, call 1-800-3-7-7780.

• Shed some light on the subject – Installing outdoor lighting not only adds to the aesthetics of your home, but also provides some extra time in the evening to help finish up exterior projects. In addition, a well-illuminated home not only deters thieves but also provides a welcoming entrance for visitors while helping prevent injuries.

• Picture perfect finish – Re-siding your home is one option that not only gives your home a makeover; it is a low-maintenance investment that saves time and money.

Add accessories such as window accent trims and decorative corner post systems to provide a complete, finished appearance.

The new Windowsill Lineal from Crane Performance Siding is designed to give the authentic appearance of a wood-trimmed window. It provides added dimension for a classic, detailed look. The 5.5" Corner Post, also from Crane, offers a wider corner with one-piece installation and SolidCore backing, for maximum energy efficiency.

For more information on Crane Performance Siding or their new Architectural Essentials Accessories Package, call 1-800-366-8472 or visit www.cranesiding.com.

McKinnon Of Grossman Companies Exclusive Agent For Retail Space At Quincy's Munroe Place

Richard McKinnon, director of Brokerage Services for The Grossman Companies, Inc., the Quincy-based commercial real estate firm, has been named exclusive agent for the retail component of Munroe Place at Quincy, now under construction.

McKinnon is representing owner Abbott Real Estate Development LLC of Boston.

When completed this fall, Munroe Place at Quincy Center will consist of 111 luxury apartment units on seven floors plus 10,000 square feet of retail space on the street level. McKinnon says retail units will range in size from 1,700 square feet to 6,000 square feet.

Situated in downtown Quincy, the building is adjacent to the MBTA Red Line and Commuter Rail stations and offers easy access to Routes 3/93 and 128/95. Retail tenants will benefit from heavy pedestrian traffic and excellent demographics.

In the past year, McKinnon has attracted three food users to the adjacent Munroe Building for which he is also leasing agent: Dudley's Liquid Library, a pastry and coffee cafe'; Gypsy Kitchen, purveyor of sauces, pastries, chocolates, truffles, coffees and teas; and Mexican eatery Fajitas and Ritas.

The architect of the new building, John Sheskey & Associates, has designed the new structure to blend with the Greek revival-style of the Munroe Building. Abbott Real Estate Development LLC is a real estate development firm specializing in multi-family residential development.

For leasing information, contact McKinnon at 617-472-2000.

Buyers Look For Homes Where the Grass Is Greener

(NAPS) – When selling a home, curb appeal may be king, but it's more than just the house that attracts buyers. A recent national survey found that 82 percent of Americans believe that the lawn's appearance plays an important part in the home purchase decision.

The survey also revealed that prospective homebuyers' top turn-offs include yard trash, bare patches, overgrown grass, weeds and lawn ornaments, like gnomes and pink flamingos.

In addition, the survey indicated that yards with gardens and landscaping that are neatly kept, and that boast lush, green grass create the most positive first impressions. And, because potential buyers have limited time to look at a home, first impressions are often the basis for a decision to buy or pass.

"Proper lawn care techniques can prepare the lawn for selling a home," says Briggs & Stratton's Yard Doctor, Trey Rogers, Ph.D., a turfgrass expert who is a consultant to the engine manufacturer.

"Maintaining the lawn for open houses and showings is easy when you follow the tips included in my prescription for a beautiful, healthy lawn," Dr. Rogers says. "One rule of thumb is never cut more than one-third of the grass blade during mowing. By following this one-third rule, the remaining two-thirds will develop deep roots and spread out, eventually creating a dense, health turf."

Dr. Rogers suggests some additional simple steps homeowners can take to keep their lawns looking their best:

- Leave grass clippings on the lawn for added nutrients.
- Look for a high-quality engine when buying a mower to ensure its starting ability.
- Water early in the day to maintain most grass.
- Control weeks early. Apply herbicide to grassy weeds, such as crabgrass, in the spring, and to broadleaf weeds, like dandelions, in the fall.
- Avoid a fertilizer over dose – even good medicine harms when used improperly.

In 1954

When JFK Was Quincy's Memorial Day Speaker

Sen. John F. Kennedy had been married little more than eight months when, with his bride, he came to Quincy to deliver the Memorial Day address at the GAR Monument in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

It was May 31, 1954 and Kennedy was still more than six years away from the White House but some aspects of his speech that day may well have been delivered by President George W. Bush a half century later.

"America's martial history," said the junior senator from Massachusetts, "should be a lesson to our enemies and a source of assurance to ourselves.

"Let us keep watch and ward in our times over the liberties which have been preserved for us" by our young men and women in uniform over the years.

"It is a high honor to join with you today to pay tribute to generations of young men and women who in every war since this republic began have taken up arms in the defense of their country.

"On Memorial Day we recall their sacrifices."

Kennedy paid tribute to the veterans of Quincy and Massachusetts who, he said, have always responded generously to their country's call in time of crisis throughout the nation's history.

His visit to Quincy was brief, possibly less than an hour; then he and Jackie were off by car to Marlboro where he was scheduled to deliver a similar speech at 12 noon at Memorial Day exercises in that town.

The Kennedys were officially welcomed to Quincy by Mayor Aldo Della Chiesa but Congressman Richard R. Wigglesworth, a Milton Republican, was absent due to business in Washington.

FORMER QUINCY FIRE Chief Thomas Gorman (left) and current Quincy Fire Chief Paul O'Connell (right) were honored by Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating (center) for their exceptional leadership and for their extensive support of the Norfolk Firewall Partnership -- a multi-disciplinary community coalition to address youth firesetting. Lt. Robert Servaes was also recognized for his hard work in support of this comprehensive prevention effort. A special award was presented to former Deputy Fire Chief Paul Cuddy by the Massachusetts Statewide Coalition for Juvenile Firesetter Intervention Programs in recognition of his extraordinary contributions during the early stages of the project.

ON BEHALF OF Quincy Public Schools, Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, superintendent (left), accepts a Senate Citation from State Sen. Michael Morrissey in recognition of the school system's commitment to protecting children and families from fire. Representatives from both of the city's high schools, five middle schools, and numerous elementary schools participated in the forum held at the Quincy Marriott.

New Coalition Addresses Problem Of Youth Firesetting

A coalition comprised of public safety officials, social service agencies and schools has banded together to address the troubling issue of kids who light fires.

More than 25 organizations serving Quincy met last week at the Boston Marriott Quincy to launch a program that addresses the serious and misunderstood public safety issue of youth firesetting.

Child-set fires caused nearly $9 million in property damage in the state last year, and nearly 60 percent of children involved had histories of lighting as many as five previous fires, according to the Massachusetts Coalition for Juvenile Firesetter Intervention Programs, which sponsored the forum.

Without proper intervention recidivism for this activity hovers at nearly 80 percent, the coalition maintains.

The Quincy pilot program has developed a blueprint of resource options for families in need, including the implementation of an eight-week, accountability-based Fire Safety School for qualifying children. The program is supported by the National Fire Association, which is headquartered in Quincy.

The new program has its roots in the Norfolk Firewall Partnership, a coalition developed on behalf of children, families and safer communities. It was launched with the help of the Quincy Fire and Police departments in 2001 as a first step towards more appropriate service pathways and inter-agency solutions.

Daniel Feeney, spokesperson for Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating's office, said children may decide to set fires because of problems at home. Some children may suffer from mental health problems, said Feeney.

"This issue is so complex," said Feeney. "With the right type of intervention this program can be a tremendous relief to the families of children who may experience this type of behavior."

Numerous awards were given out during the meeting, including a special award to former Deputy Fire Chief Paul Cuddy for his contributions to the program.

STATE REPRESENTATIVE A. Stephen Tobin (center) presents Citations from the Massachusetts House of Representatives to Joyce Livramento-Young of the Quincy Housing Authority and Linda Stanton of the Quincy Mental Health Center in recognition of their dedicated service on fire prevention task forces.

Coughlin Urges Support For Recycling Legislation

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin continues to advocate on behalf of legislation that would mandate a solid waste strategy for recycling electronic waste, such as computer monitors and televisions.

Coughlin joined legislators, leaders of the Massachusetts Municipal Association and Clean Water Action, and other local elected officials in support of H 1533, Producer Takeback Legislation.

Communities assume the responsibility of disposing of such items, an unfunded mandate that costs Quincy approximately $60,000 annually, he said. The legislation would shift the responsibility for recycling of the electronic waste to the companies that produce them, he said. Coughlin said the legislation could save cities and towns millions of dollars if enacted.

"In these fiscally challenging times, when cities and towns are facing the consequences of millions of dollars in local aid cuts, the importance of this legislation to municipalities cannot be underestimated," said Coughlin.

TORQUE AND HORSEPOWER

Horsepower, a measure of the work that can engine can do, is a term coined by a Scottish inventor who wanted to know how many horses his invention, the steam engine, would replace. He found that a robust horse could life a 150-pound weight 220 feet in the air (using a pulley) in 60 seconds. Thus, horsepower is the force needed to move a specific amount of weight a specific distance in a specific amount of time. Torque, on the other hand, is a measure of force that produces rotation around an axis. Torque, then, is the force that propels it down the road, while horsepower is the force that determines how fast the force (torque) makes it happen.

No matter what the horsepower you can count on us for most all types of service for your car, van, or light truck, from replacing your wiper blades to major repairs. Our customers continue to tell us they find our ASE Certified professional service staff to be superior. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based systems for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is proud of that, and we want you to know we will continue to work toward improving our record. We are located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: By knowing how much torque an engine produces, and at what rpm the engine is generating the torque, you can determine the engine's horsepower.

Quincy Locks Up Share Of League Title, Tourney Berth

SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School softball team found itself a master key last week, as it locked up a tournament spot for the second straight year and then locked up at least a share of the league title — its first in school history.

On Monday, though, the Presidents missed out on a chance to capture the Atlantic Coast League championship by themselves when they fell at Plymouth North, 5-4, in eight innings.

Quincy could still win the title outright if Whitman-Hanson and Randolph both lose their final league game.

"We just played awful," said head coach Mike Sedar, whose team pounded the Blue Eagles, 10-3, in the first meeting. "I don't know what happened. We had so many tough games in a row. We have at least a share of the title but we could've won it ourselves. It's our own fault."

Quincy (11-5 overall, 9-3 ACL) closes out the regular season this week with a home-away series with Framingham today (Thursday) and tomorrow (Friday), both at 3:45 p.m.

"We're going to change our lineup around and play a lot of subs in those games," said Sedar, adding he's not too concerned about tournament seedings since his team will have to beat a powerhouse anyway to win a state title.

Quincy held a 2-0 lead in third inning against Plymouth North but found itself trailing 4-3 in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Junior Rose Bell walked and moved to second on a fielder's choice, where sophomore Marissa Powers pinch ran for her. With two outs, sophomore Katie Walsh smacked a single to send the game into extra frames.

Sophomore Alysia DiMuzio continued her hot hitting when she crushed a home run, her second of the season.

"They're not a bad ballclub but we beat ourselves," Sedar said. "We had people on base all game long. We hit but we just played atrocious defense."

Last week, Quincy played fantastic ball as it won all four games to extend its winning streak to five games — its longest of the season.

The Presidents blanked Dennis-Yarmouth, 10-0, Monday, topped Sandwich, 7-2, Wednesday, shut out Nauset, 8-0, Thursday to qualify for the tournament and defeated Randolph, 6-2, Friday to earn at least a share of the league title.

"We've had a couple of phenomenal weeks," Sedar said. "Last week was a great week. We got into the playoffs, clinched at least a share of the league title and had the school's first no-hitter."

In the Randolph game, sophomore third baseman Rebbi Sorensen led the way, going 3 for 3 with two RBI and recorded six putouts defensively. Walsh, who's batting .353 this season, went 2 for 3 while senior quad-captains Diane Gilbody (RBI) and Stacey Andrew each had a couple of hits.

With the score tied at 2-2 in the fifth inning, Gilbody made a sensational diving catch in center field with the bases loaded that saved three runs from scoring.

Junior pitcher Rachel Sorensen picked up the win to conclude a dominant week from the mound. She won all four games, threw a no-hitter and didn't allow an earned run in 28 innings.

Mite B Travel Team Wins Spartan Invitational Title

The Quincy Mite B travel hockey team recently captured the Spartan Mite Invitational championship in Stoneham with a 2-0 victory over Wakefield.

Goalie Matt Glynn earned MVP honors and received great defensive help from John, O'Callaghan, Steve Baglione, Tommy O'Brien, Danny O'Brien, Greg McKinnon and Paul Mulvey.

A scoreless affair through two periods, Cameron Buonopane netted the game-winner in the third with an assist from Trevor McCarthy on a one-timer in front of the net. Matt McGuire potted an empty-net goal in the final minute to cement the game.

In the opening game of the tourney Quincy battled Wakefield to a 3-3 stalemate. Tommy O'Brien, Andy Rogantino (assist) and McGuire all scored. Mike Ferris and McKinnon had assists.

In the second game Quincy downed host Stoneham, 4-2. Rogantino, Patrick Verhault, McGuire and Tommy O'Brien (assist) scored. McKinnon, Radcliff, Baglione and Joey Ingemi had assists.

In the next game Quincy topped Billerica, 6-2. Rogantino (assist), McGuire, Verhault, Ferris and Patrick Buell all found the net. McCarthy, McKinnon, Radcliff and O'Callaghan had assists.

Presidents Need 2 Wins To Qualify For State Tourney

BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School baseball team stepped off the trail to the state tournament Monday afternoon with a 3-0 loss to Plymouth North at Adams Field.

The Presidents, which strolled into the matchup with a three-game winning streak, now has to win two of its final three games to clinch a playoff berth.

"We have to get back on track," said head coach Michael Draicchio Tuesday morning.

Quincy (8-9 overall, 3-8 Atlantic Coast League), which hosted Archbishop Williams Tuesday, travels to Nauset today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. and closes out the regular season tomorrow (Friday) night at 7 against neighboring North Quincy.

"It's going to be tough," Draicchio said. "I told them after the game to keep their heads up. It was another game we could've won. We've been pitching well but we have to start to hit. I told them all three games we can win."

There wasn't much offense in the game as each squad managed only three hits apiece. Senior Ryan Conley collected a pair of hits and senior Liam Powers stroked a double in the first inning.

Quincy sophomore pitcher John Folino went the distance, striking out 10 and walking just one.

The Blue Eagles took a 1-0 lead in the fifth when a batter walked, stole second and third, and scored on an error.

In the sixth, a batter reached second on an error, moved to third on a sacrifice bunt, and scored on a fielder's choice as he beat the throw to the plate. They took a 3-0 lead later in the inning on an RBI double.

"We just made a few mistakes that cost us," Draicchio said.

Last Saturday, Quincy rallied for a 4-3 victory at Brighton with a pair of runs in the seventh inning.

Trailing 3-2, senior Jamie Chiocchio led off with a single and Powers reached on an error. After a double steal, sophomore Ray Marchand knocked in the tying run with a sacrifice fly and senior Matt MacNeil ripped a single for the game-winning run.

Sophomore John Santon, who relieved senior starter Rob Muollo, earned the win, allowing one hit and striking out five in 3 2/3 innings.

Brighton took a 1-0 lead in the first inning but Quincy evened the score in the third on an RBI double by Marchand.

In the fourth, Quincy took a 2-1 lead when junior Dan Cosgrove, senior Joe Scribi and Conley all singled and Powers followed with a walk to bring home a run. Brighton, though, answered with a pair of the bottom half to regain the lead.

Last Friday, the Presidents pulled out a 1-0 home win in 12 innings over Randolph. Senior left-hander Anthony Boyle pitched all 12 innings (as did the Randolph starter), scattering five hits and punching out 15.

In the 12th, Conley reached on a fielder's choice and moved into scoring position on a passed ball. Powers followed by stroking a single up the middle for the game-winning run.

Last Thursday, Quincy blanked Holbrook, 7-0, as Conley fired a shutout, allowing just three hits and striking out eight.

The Presidents pushed across four runs in the third inning. Conley (2 for 4, two RBI) laced an RBI double, Chiocchio cracked RBI single and Muollo (three RBI) roped a two-run single. Marchand added an RBI double in the sixth inning.

Neighborhood Housing Services Annual Golf Tournament June 13

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore (NHS) will host the fourth annual Mulligan Golf Tournament Friday, June 13, at 1:30 p.m. at the Pembroke Country Club.

Co-sponsored by Father Bill's Place, the tournament's goal is to raise funds for the creation of affordable housing for working people in need of a home. Over the last three years the tournament raised over $50,000.

Proceeds generated from the tournament will help fund affordable housing ventures, such as a recently completed home renovation project in Weymouth, known as the Bridge House. NHS, Father Bill's Place and the town of Weymouth all contributed resources to make the Bridge House residence a successful affordable housing solution.

"The Mulligan Tournament promises to be a fun-filled day of golf, dinner, silent auction and prizes," said Robert Corley, director of Housing Development for NHS. "People are invited to 'come take a Mulligan' in honor of providing people with a second chance at a home."

NHS invites interested individuals and companies to sign up to play in the tournament, encourage co-workers and friends to sign up, sponsor a hole, donate a prize for the raffle or silent auction, and join the NHS staff for dinner.

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

Acupressure Therapy Institute Opens In Quincy

The Acupressure Therapy Institute, formerly of Canton, is reopening in Quincy and offers training in disciplines that are increasingly incorporated in treatment offered by major hospitals and health care maintenance organizations.

An open house will be held Wednesday, May 28 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at 1 Billings Rd., North Quincy.

The Acupressure Therapy Institute (ATI) opened its doors in August, 2000 in Canton. The mission of ATI is to provide a comprehensive education in Asian Bodywork Therapy (ABT) in the Acupressure Shiatsu style. ATI is dedicated to training professional practitioners with sensitivity, skill, knowledge and compassion so that they can provide health care to the public in complementary and alternative medicine.

The Acupressure Therapy Institute is licensed by the Mass. Department of Education. ATI is also a member of the Council of Schools and Programs of the American Organization for Bodywork Therapies of Asia (AOBTA). Graduates are eligible to sit for the national ABT exam given by the National Certification Commission for Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine (NCCAOM).

Barbara Blanchard, teacher and practitioner, is the founder of ATI. She was a founding director of the New England Shiatsu Center (1986-91) and the Acupressure Certification Program at OMNI, the Institute for Optimal Health in Hingham (1997-99). A licensed acupuncturist in Massachusetts and a certified instructor of the AOBTA, Blanchard has taught her own style "extraordinary vessel acupuncture" for more than 20 years.

"Medicine is a science. But it is also an art," Blanchard says. "Western medicine has done much to help us live healthier and longer lives. However, there are many chronic diseases that it does not always address effectively, including every day pain, menstrual distress (PMS), and chronic digestive disorders," she says.

"More and more, western medicine understands that there are traditions from other parts of the world that can contribute to treatment of a variety of conditions," Blanchard adds.

At the ATI open house May 28, demonstrations will be given in thai massage, yoga, tai chi/qiqong, and chair acupressure therapy.

Information will be available about summer classes being offered, as well as the certification program and public supervised student clinics.

For more information, call the Acupressure Therapy Institute at 617-697-1477.

Osteoporosis

'Silent Disease' Can Be Prevented With Calcium

(NU) — In 1997, the National Academy of Sciences said that America will face an osteoporosis epidemic if the consumption of calcium did not increase.

Recent studies also indicate that osteoporosis concerns are getting worse, with more than 50 percent of people over 50 in the United States suffering from low bone density or osteoporosis.

Just last year, the American Journal of Public Health found that doctors missed 90 percent of osteoporosis cases and a majority of those cases went untreated.

A free report called "How Strong Are Your Bones" is now available to help you personally assess your risk for osteoporosis by answering 20 questions. It also includes information on bone strength, the importance of calcium and how to choose the best calcium supplement for your needs.

The report was written by Dr. Jennifer Nissen, a naturopathic doctor and author of other informational booklets including "7 Rules to Maximum Immune Health."

Often referred to as the "silent disease," osteoporosis is a condition characterized by calcium-depleted bones that become weak and fragile. This bone loss often begins in women age 35, and accelerates to about 3 percent a year in women in their 50s. However, men are victims of osteoporosis, too.

Here are a few osteoporosis facts from the National Osteoporosis Foundation:

• A women's risk of hip fracture exceeds her risk of breast, uterine and ovarian cancer combined.

• Fifty-five percent or 44 million people aged 50 and older in the United States have low bone mass or osteoporosis. More than 12 million of these cases are men.

• Most women consume only half of their recommended daily calcium requirement.

If you are a woman over 50, there is a 50 percent chance that you will suffer an osteoporotic fracture and if you're a man over 50, your chances are one in eight.

But you can prevent being a statistic. Calcium supplements like AdvaCAL have been clinically shown to increase bone density and build bone. Load-bearing exercises also have been shown to increase bone health and strength.

COTTON MOUTH

Dry mouth (xerostomia) may be a common problem among adults, but it is not a normal by-product of aging. Research has shown that adults and children produce similar amounts of saliva, a shortage of which causes a dry, unpleasant-tasting effect. Dry mouth can be a problem for those with Sjogren's syndrome, systemic lupus, diabetes, and other immune diseases. In addition, dry mouth may be caused by any of four hundred or more medications, both prescription and over-the-counter. Many of these medications are intended to treat high blood pressure or depression. Others are antihistamines, used to treat asthma and allergies. Whatever the cause, dry mouth must be treated. Otherwise, too little saliva circulating in the mouth can lead to tooth decay.

Are you suffering with dry mouth? Our entire staff encourages your questions about comprehensive dental care. For answers to your oral health questions, we invite you to call at 617-479-6220. We offer almost any type of dental treatment right here in our office at 44 Greenleaf Street. Our goal is to make each visit to our office a comfortable and positive experience. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Some cancer treatments, including chemotherapy or radiation to the head or neck, can also cause dry mouth.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

On this Memorial Day let us remember that this day signifies, perhaps mor deeply than any other patriotic observance, the soul of America. The patriots to be remembered on this day represent every generation of Americans. They fell in battles widely separated by distance and time. Some came from families long established in America; many others were new to the land. These patriots differed in color, in religious beliefs, in political faith and other ways which historically have divided the human family.

Yet, all had this in common; they loved their country and they died to make men free.

And so, on this Memorial Day, let us solemnly pay tribute to these fallen heroes... Let us spare a prayer of thanksgiving that there have always been men and women willing to offer the ultimate sacrifice so that our national ideals could endure...

Health Dept. Hikes Fees To Help Generate Revenue

and we fell well below average," said Scheele. "Every other city and town is doing this now."

Time constraints influenced the council's action because the window of opportunity for hiking the fees was drawing to a close.

Scheele said the department must renew most of its fees before the end of the fiscal year, June 30. If not accomplished in that time frame, the city would have to wait another year and miss out on the revenue associated with the fee hikes, he said.

Although the money generated from these fees is not substantial, it is still important to the city during tough fiscal times, Scheele said.

"$30,000 means we might be able to save a bus driver for the schools," he said. "It means possibly having another teacher for the schools to keep those classroom sizes down."

Last year, Phelan asked department heads to investigate ways to increase fees for the purposes of generating additional revenue. Scheele drafted his list and submitted it to the council at that time. The issue has lingered for more than a year.

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly supported the fee increases, saying it was important for the city to find ways to bring in more revenue.

"It would have been a missed opportunity," said Connolly. "These fees will not affect the Quincy homeowner or consumer. And they are not going to break the backs of the licensees."

The council is soon expected to review possible fee increases from other departments, including the Clerk's office.

Wollaston Beach Seawall Months Ahead Of Schedule

The restoration of a portion of the Wollaston Beach seawall is ahead of schedule and should be completed in 60 to 90 days, reports Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"The difficult winter caused Jay Cashman, Inc., to suspend work but Cashman will again start work to finish the job," said Morrissey. "Cashman's quick pace and response put the project months ahead of its April 2004 completion date."

The restoration project will repair the seawall between Rice Road and Black's Creek along Wollaston Beach and will refurbish the parking area between Fenno Street and Rice Road.

Cashman's low bid of $2.8 million won from the MDC the contract, which also includes repair of the sidewalks along Wollaston Beach from Rice Road to Fenno Street.

Four Quincy Schools Join Recycling Initiative

Students from four Quincy schools have joined "The Green Team," a state initiative aimed at reducing waste and protecting the environment.

Merrymount, Beechwood Knoll and Squantum Elementary Schools and Point Webster Middle School have begun or expanded recycling programs, working on Slash Trash lesson plans, or setting up school or home compost bins.

The effort, called "The Green Team" is part of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) and the Department of Environmental Protection's (DEP) statewide recycling awareness and education effort for Massachusetts students.

Participating teachers received a Green Team Classroom kit, which included various educational tools such as a poster, magnets, suggested lesson plan with recycling tips, and other information. Coordinators for the schools are Anne Pegg (Merrymount), Janine Giatrakos (Merrymount), Tom Ditullio (Point Webster), Diane C. O'Keefe (Beechwood Knoll) and Ellen Pierce (Squantum).

Students are asked to take a recycling pledge and to track the trash generated in their home for one month. Students will take various waste reduction and recycling measures and monitor the impact on the amount of trash being thrown out.

The goal is to have students learn how their family's efforts to recycle and reduce waste can have a real impact on the amount of trash being generated in the home. Students will be recognized for their efforts and classrooms that participate in waste reduction activities will have the chance to win classroom and school-wide prizes.

Massachusetts' 2000 waste reduction rate was 54 percent. The state has set of goal of 70% waste reduction by 2010.

First Expenditure From Hotel-Motel Tax Funds

$800,000 Renovations Project At Adams Field

Major renovations are now underway at Adams Field in Merrymount Park.

Mayor William Phelan has allocated $800,000 — the city's first expenditure from the hotel/motel tax monies, which was approved by the city council this month for the project.

Renovations include a new lighting system to replace the 30-year-old system, a new combination rest room/concession stand/press box building to replace the original rest room building, new bleachers, new fencing and a reconstructed ball diamond. The diamond is being moved toward the outfield fences, allowing for tree plantings along Vietnam Veteran's Drive.

Adams Field will host the 14-year-old Babe Ruth World Series this August. Teams throughout the United States, and a select team from Italy, will compete for the Babe Ruth World Series title at Adams Field Aug. 15-23.

"I am proud to lead the effort to renovate Adams Field and create a first-class facility for Quincy youngsters without impacting the bottom-line for our city's homeowners and taxpayers," Phelan said. "The hotel/motel tax will allow us to achieve a host of improvements to our park system and acquire valuable open space. It is a great opportunity to improve the quality of life for the residents of Quincy."

Work will continue at Adams Field throughout the summer months in preparation for the World Series. City personnel is currently being used for much of the demolition work and will be used wherever possible during the construction period in an effort to stretch city dollars even further.

"We are most fortunate to have a tremendously talented staff that saves our city hundreds of thousands of dollars on park renovation and construction projects," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"Without their talents such projects as the construction of the Quarry Street Soccer Complex, the construction of a new little league diamond at Faxon Park, the creation of the Formal Garden at Upper Merrymount, the creation of Teel and Hanlon soccer fields and major renovations to Pageant Field would not have been possible. We will again utilize their skills to save our city money while constructing a first-class recreational facility."

Adams Field was constructed in 1938 under President Franklin Roosevelt's Works Progress Administration program. The dimensions of the original Adams Field replicated the exact dimensions of Braves Field in Boston.

The new dimensions will be: 340 feet down the left field and right field lines, 365 feet to the left field power

Task Force Readies Crackdown On Downtown Crime

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The Mayor's Quincy Center Task Force is expected to tackle crime, vagrancy and other safety concerns in the downtown area at tonight's (Thursday) Crime Watch meeting at City Hall.

Crime Watch Meeting Thursday At 7 PM At City Hall

Among the highlights of recommendations to be made at the 7 p.m. meeting are:

- A constant police presence in the Quincy Center area;
- A one-year moratorium on granting new licenses for rooming houses;
- A crime watch program made up of Quincy Center businesses and residents.

Mayor William Phelan indicated he would implement the task force's recommendations where possible and issue proposals urging favorable action by the city council when necessary.

"I am committed to providing the resources necessary to make sure these recommendations are implemented aggressively and as soon as logistically possible," said Phelan.

The task force, chaired by Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, will address areas of increased police presence, community watch programs, code enforcement and aesthetic considerations. Largey said the task force is expected to submit a full report at the Crime Watch meeting, which is sponsored by Council President Dan Raymondi, Ward 5

Connolly Third Ward Councillor Bowing Out

Ward 4 Councillor Bryan Connolly will not seek re-election, creating the third open ward seat in this year's municipal election.

Connolly, who graduated with honors from Boston College Law School last week, and completed his undergraduate studies at the University of Notre Dame, will join a prestigious national law firm as an associate.

"I have loved every minute of my term as Ward 4 councillor and the decision not to seek re-election has been an excruciating one," Connolly said Tuesday.

BRYAN CONNOLLY

"However, recognizing the demands of my new position, I fear that I would not have the time to give the city council all the effort that it requires.

"The residents of Ward 4 deserve nothing less than 100 percent from their councillor, which is what I have given over the past two years."

Connolly will be leaving the council at the end of the year along with Greg Hanley and Joseph Newton, Ward 1 and Ward 6 incumbents who announced their departure earlier.

Hanley has moved to Pembroke. Newton, who is getting married, said new personal time demands will keep him from giving the

Sheets To Bid Farewell To Politics At Reception

JAMES SHEETS

Former Mayor James Sheets will bid a formal farewell to Quincy politics Wednesday, June 11, at a reception honoring him and his wife, Jo-ann at the Boston Marriott Hotel in West Quincy.

The reception is sponsored by his sons, Tad and Luke, with an assist from Ron Kaufman, the Republican power-broker who was once Sheets' student and aide.

A buffet will be served from 6 to 9 p.m.

Sheets is retiring after 28 years in elective office and 26 years as a history teacher at what was then Quincy Junior College.

He was first elected to the City Council from Ward 4 in 1973 and was president of the Council in 1984-85. He was elected mayor in 1989 and reelected 5 times before he was defeated by Mayor William Phelan in 2001.

He also served two terms as state representative from 1975-78.

A native of Pennsylvania, he came to Quincy to attend school at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston and remained to teach history and enter the political arena.

There will be no head table at the reception and the speaking part of the program will be limited so that invited guests will have a chance to mingle.

"The friendship of the people has meant a lot to my mother and dad," said Tad Sheets, "and they would like to see the people again, renew old memories and express their appreciation for the kindness of the people to them."

Memorial Day Reflections: Much Remains To Be Done

Memorial Day in America is a time when "thousands of Americans who lie in overseas graves are remembered," said retired Air Force Major William E. Zinnel. "It is an all-American ceremony."

"We all need to take the time for thought and reflection about the deeper meaning of what our country is all about. This is our challenge: To make this year serve a purpose in this time of turbulence and uncertainty; to take stock of our democratic experiment."

Zinnel, now a senior aerospace instructor at Quincy High School, was the featured speaker in the city's Memorial Day observance, which was held inside the Quincy Center for Technical Education gym after the parade was called off due to inclement weather.

The men who fought in the American Revolution, he said, "opened a new and wonderful vision of a society based on the dignity and inalienable rights of the individual. These were radical, truly revolutionary ideas in the age of monarchies and empires. Thus, the democratic experiment was begun.

"Throughout the centuries, we have at times lived up to these ideals and at other times failed. Yet, we have persisted and our founding values have been preserved, if not always practiced. In the past few decades, we have become a society on the move to improve the quality of life for all our citizens.

"In many ways, we have kept faith with those who died that these things might be accomplished."

"(But) much still remains to be done," he said. "As a nation, we again need to unite in a common purpose, that of concerning ourselves with the deeper meaning of what our country is all about. What our unfinished agenda is. And what we want to become in the years ahead.

"History teaches that no human society has a guarantee of immortality. Indifference to outside subversion and aggression, corruption, and disintegration of the will of the populace, have been fatal to nations throughout civilization. We can't let that happen.

GUEST SPEAKER Major William E. Zinnel, U. S. Air Force retired, tells the Memorial Day assemblage that the holiday "provides us the opportunity to renew our determination to preserve those principles which so many have died for."

GUEST SPEAKER Army Warrant Officer Kathy Silvia, mobilized for the Iraq War, tells the Memorial Day assemblage that their support of Veterans Administration program is "the greatest gift you can give a veteran."

Quincy Sun Photos /Robert Noble

"Honoring those who have fallen in defense of our country's ideals is not only an act of gratitude, it also provides us the opportunity to renew our determination to preserve those principles which so many have died for.

"I suggest that all of us try to make 2003 and the next several years a period dedicated to learning and understanding our country's heritage and its relevance to our situation today and our prospects for tomorrow."

A second featured speaker was U. S. Army Chief Warrant Officer 2nd Class Kathy Silvia, who was mobilized for service in Iraq but spent the brief war stateside outfitting the 757th Transportation Battalion (Railway) for a war that went by so quickly most of the equipment was not needed.

"In 28 days," she said, "(British/American forces) reached Baghdad and found the rail line basically intact. Success and speed of progress made by the coalition forces by mid-April was categorized as such a success, it was like putting a 'hot knife through butter.'

"Our equipment arrived in early May. In theory, rail operations were expected to take some time getting up and running. perhaps as long as six to nine months. Due to such early success, our plane ride (to the war zone) was canceled."

Silvia told the crowd at the Memorial Day ceremony that their support of Veteran Administration programs and facilities is "the greatest gift you can give a veteran."

""Veterans' organizations everywhere need volunteers, need folks to help organize parades, place flags to commemorate and assist returning soldiers to launch themselves back to their next event," she said.

"They have not seen a child they recognize in some time, except through e-mailed photos perhaps. They will need time to clear their heads, rest in a comfortable place, distress for a bit and reprogram the mind back into reality and learn how to hold a newborn as it may be as awkward as holding an ice cream cone (not available out in the desert)."

Those Mayoral Polls

There's no official mayor's race as yet.

But polls are being conducted in an apparent attempt to size up the voter strength and appeal of Mayor Bill Phelan and City Council President Dan Raymondi.

They, of course, would make the race if Raymondi decides to challenge Phelan.

PHELAN

RAYMONDI

There appears to be two -- possibly three -- telephone polls conducted over the past two or three weeks. And may still be going on.

Callers zero in on Phelan and Raymondi.

One person who received a call in one of the polls last week said she was asked questions along the following lines but not necessarily in these exact words:

What do you think of Mayor Phelan and the job he is doing? Do you think he should be re-elected?

SHEETS

What do you think of Dan Raymondi? Do you think he should be elected mayor?

Do you think businesses should pay more taxes than homeowners?

She was also asked what she thought of former Mayor James Sheets.

That apparently to determine how much effect Sheets might have on a Phelan-Raymondi battle if he should endorse, or publicly support Raymondi.

Sheets lost his bid for a seventh term to Phelan by a mere 17 votes in 2001 – the closest mayoral election in the city's history.

But he still has a large following and could have an important effect on a mayor's race if he steered that following towards the Raymondi camp.

Sheets has given no indication he would do that but he did attend Raymondi's recent big crowd drawing Patriotic Celebration at the Bryan VFW Post.

This poll took 15 minutes or more to complete. The caller did not identify himself and did not say for whom the polls was being conducted, according to the woman.

Another resident – a former city official – said he received a call three weeks ago from a caller who asked who he would vote for "if the election were held tomorrow – Phelan, Raymondi or (Jo-Ann) Bragg."

This was when Bragg, a school committee member, was considered a possible mayoral candidate but has since opted to run for city council at-large.

The resident was asked if he thought the city was going in the right direction.

"I was asked a series of pro-Phelan questions like did I agree that he was doing a good job on a series of issues. Then I was asked some negative Phelan questions, mostly just the reverse of the pro-Phelan questions.

"I was asked to list the favorability of some politicians -- Phelan, Raymondi, Bragg, Governor Romney and some other well-known politicians."

No city councillors or city council candidates were mentioned.

The resident said the phone call lasted about 20 minutes. The caller identified himself "as such and such a research company but I didn't note down the name."

Question: What effect, if any, will these polls have on whether there is to be a mayor's race -- and if there is -- who the winner would be?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1927 postcard showing the new South Junior High School on Granite Street in South Quincy. It was built for $500,000 on the so-called Nightingale lot, a large tract of land owned and used as a farm by several generations of the Nightingale family that owned the Nightingale Coal and Grain Co. South Junior was opened in September, 1927 just six months after the new North Junior High in Atlantic. The city's rapid growth at the time called for 20 new classrooms a year and the newly adopted junior high program was barely keeping abreast of the classroom needs. The following year Point Junior High was built as an addition to the Daniel Webster School. Now known as Sterling Middle School, South was renamed in memory of the beloved Reay E. Sterling who was the school's principal when he died unexpectedly at age 58. He began his teaching career here when the school opened, served six years as assistant principal at North Quincy High and returned here as principal in 1956. He died in 1963. He was also well known as a junior high baseball and basketball coach as well as the director of the YMCA's Camp Burgess on Cape Cod where he served for 12 summers in the 1940s and 1950s.

Sewer Repair, West Nile Virus Topics At Ward 3 Neighborhood Meeting

Ward 3 residents will have the opportunity to receive an update on the North Quincy Lateral Sewer Project and the West Nile Virus at a neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Wollaston School gym.

Coordinated by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the meeting is designed to update residents on the repair and replacement of sewer lines in the Montclair and Wollaston sections of the city. Representatives from the Department of Public Works and Weston and Sampson, Inc., the project engineers, will attend the meeting.

The project, scheduled to commence in June, will include the repair and replacement of sewer lines on selected streets in the area. The work will prevent blockages, backups and sewer collapses, as well as inhibit sewage from leaking into the ground and infiltrating the storm drain system, Coughlin said. In addition, the work will prevent sewage from polluting the Bog, the Neponset River and Wollaston Beach, he said.

Coughlin said the project should save the city thousands of dollars in MWRA sewer assessments.

Also, Health Commissioner Drew Scheele is expected to attend the meeting and present an informative discussion on the West Nile Virus. Coughlin said the topic is of concern to residents as the summer months approach.

World War II Rules Restrict Yachting Season

This Week
1942
61 Years Ago

Quincy's first war-time yachting season in nearly a quarter of a century faced the traditional Memorial Day opening burdened by new Coast Guard and Navy restrictions that included personal identification cards and boat licenses.

Licenses for Zone C, entitled the owners to sail their boats only in the waters of Quincy Bay. Other licenses were issued for Zone A, Winthrop Bay; Zone B, Dorchester Bay; and Zone D, Hingham Bay.

Enemy aliens, revolvers, explosives and cameras were not permitted on board and radio transmitters were required to be sealed at all times.

"It is desirable that owners put their boats in the water in order that they may not only be used for recreation but kept in condition for possible employment for war needs," said Rear Adm. W.T. Tarrant, commandant of the First Naval District.

INDIAN FIGHTER

Albert E. Gore of Quincy Point, 85 years old and a veteran of the Indian wars and World War I, was an honored guest at Quincy's Memorial Day services. The featured speaker was Thomas H. Buckley, a prominent Legionnaire from Abington.

"We go forward proudly behind the men from this community and every other part of the United States who will again furnish the glorious pages of history with exploits of heroism of sacrifice of glory for their nations and its success and progress," Buckley said.

SCHOOL CLOSINGS

The School Committee voted to close the Washington School in Quincy Point in the wake of a $28,000 budget cut by the City Council and Vice Chairman Heslip E. Sutherland said closure of the Pollard and Point Junior High School is possible in the future.

Blue Hills 'Bioblitz' On Tap For Saturday

A coalition of state environmental agencies and local non-profit organizations will host a Blue Hills Bioblitz Saturday, May 31, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. as part of the state's Biodiversity Days celebration.

The days program will consist of a variety of guided hikes through the Reservation, including a canoe exploration around Ponkapoag Pond, a beginner's bird walk and a Kids Bioblitz Challenge around Houghton's Pond.

Biodiversity Headquarters will be in the Houghton's Pond main parking area with kids' activities, live animals and more.

"The Blue Hill Bioblitz is a fun family activity for neighbors to the Reservation to learn more about the many species that call the Blue Hills home and help to collect critical information to preserve the park for future generations," said Peter Jeffries, president of the Friends of the Blue Hills.

For a list of trips, call 781-575-0354.

The Blue Hills Bioblitz is sponsored by the State Secretary of Environmental Affairs Ellen Roy Herzfelder, the Friends of the Blue Hills, the Metropolitan District Commission and the Neponset River Watershed Association.

Participants in the Bioblitz will collect information that will be maintained in the state's Biodiversity Species Registry and will be accessible to all cities and towns via the Web.

COUNCIL PRESIDENT DAN Raymondi recently donated $5,000 in mitigation funds to Quincy High School for the purchase of new lighting equipment for the school's drama program. New Lighting Equipment Aids QHS Drama Productions

Audiences attending drama productions at Quincy High School may have noticed a difference recently.

A $5,000 donation of Ward 2 mitigation funds has enabled the school to purchase new lighting equipment that should go a long way in improving the production quality at the school.

During the winter, Ward 2 Councillor and Council President Dan Raymondi attended Quincy High School's production of "A Christmas Carol."

"I was so impressed with what the students were trying to accomplish and I wanted to know if there was anything I could do to help the program continue to grow," said Raymondi.

Quincy High School Drama Club Advisor Stephanie Scanlan took up the offer.

"We had a lighting control board that was about 10 years old," said Scanlan. "It was very high tech when it was purchased, but now, well, it's seen better days."

The drama club was searching for ways to replace the aging equipment, which was utilized by many other groups using the auditorium.

Raymondi requested $5,000 from Ward 2 mitigation funds to pay for the purchase of a new lighting control board.

"Our new board is fantastic," said Scanlan. "It is a fully computerized board with so many technical capabilities. Not only will it help make our productions look better, but it will allow students to have training on a professional level piece of equipment."

Scanlan added that training could help students as they pursue higher education.

"It was truly amazing that the councillor had enough faith in our kids to really make something special happen for them, we are very grateful," she said.

Raymondi said it is important for the community to support the arts.

"I think it's great for the students to see enthusiastic crowds and to know there is support within the community," said Raymondi. "The city has spent significant time and effort in improving the physical plan, and now we have a quality facility, a quality educator in Stephanie Scanlan and a motivated student population."

JOYCE BAKER (third left), who served 16 years as president of the Quincy Historical Society, hands the gavel to incoming president James Edwards at the recent annual meeting. With them, from left, are Dr. James Cameron, Society historian; Deborah Northall, outgoing secretary; Susan Ramey, incoming secretary; and Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald.

Joyce Baker Honored On Retirement As Historical Society President

The Quincy Historical Society presented the William O'Connell Award, the Society's highest honor, to retiring Society President Joyce I. Baker at the Society's recent annual meeting.

James P. Edwards, the new Historical Society president, presented the award to Mrs. Baker. The O'Connell Award — named for the late Historical Society president, Quincy business executive and community leader — is presented on an occasional basis in recognition of exceptional service both to the Historical Society and to the Quincy community.

Mrs. Baker served 16 years as Society president, and, among other achievements, has also been a leader in DOVE, a Quincy agency serving abused women and children, the Quincy Partnership, the Quincy Historical Commission, and is a local businesswoman. Past recipients of the O'Connell Award include Mr. O'Connell himself, Paul D. Harold and James Edwards.

Edwards was elected president at the annual meeting. A Quincy resident and the principal in the Quincy firm of Holmes and Edwards, Architects, Edwards has been instrumental in accomplishing recent preservation projects at the Adams Academy, a National Historic Landmark and the Historical Society's home. He is also a past chairman of the Quincy Historical Commission.

DEBORAH NORTHALL receives the Quincy Historical Society's Volunteer of the Year Award from Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald at the recent annual meeting.

"I am both surprised and delighted to receive the O'Connell Award, particularly since it's given in memory of my dear friend Bill O'Connell," Mrs. Baker said. "And I know that with Jim Edwards, I am placing the Historical Society in very good hands."

Edwards said, "Joyce is leaving the Society in a very strong position. We still have very ambitious goals to fulfill for the Academy building, our core exhibit, programs and library. I know I can count on the help of the Society's trustees and membership as we build on the tremendous work Joyce has done."

'Mitford' Fundraiser Planned For Wollaston Cong. Church

The Wollaston Congregational Church will hold a "Mitford" fundraiser Friday, May 30 through Sunday, June 1, to raise money for the church.

Mitford is the fictional town in the Jan Karon series of books about an Episcopal priest, Father Tim, and his relationship with the church and the townfolk.

The organizing committee started out with a plan for a dinner auction fundraiser, which quickly grew into a three-day affair when Penguin Publishers authorized the use of the Mitford name.

"Mitford takes care of its own is the motto of the town," said Laurel Oster, chairman of the event. "We decided we wanted to do something not only for us but for others as well."

Lincoln Avenue between Grand View and Winthrop Avenues will be closed to traffic Friday night, May 30, while a group of adult Irish Set dancers from the South Shore Ciele Club perform with a sing-along and a fiddler.

Those who plan to attend are asked to bring canned goods or a check made out to the ISS Pantry Shelf.

A craft fair will be held Saturday, May 31, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tables are available for $20 each. There will also be a "Bane and Blessing" sale of used goods. New Mitford books also will be available.

Tea with "tastebud temptations" will be offered at 12 noon and a video of Jan Karon explaining her upcoming books and how she develops her characters, will be held at 12 noon.

Pictures of Father Tim with his dog Barnabas, described as a "huge, black, furry dog about the size of a Buick," will be taken with guests at 2:30 p.m. The cost is $2 with proceeds going to the Quincy Animal Shelter.

There will be a free piano and organ concert from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

A dinner will begin at 5 p.m. Saturday with an auction of gift certificates, goods, services and antiques to follow. There will be several Mitford items, including two autographed books and a Staffordshire Tea Set valued at $300.

One of the services offered for the auction is a half day Cape Cod cruise for six aboard the 48-foot, steel hulled sailing sloop, the Storm Petrel, donated by Capt. Phil Levine.

A luncheon will be held following the 10 a.m. service Sunday, June 1, with the proceeds split between the church, the Wollaston School Library and the Wollaston branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Once again Lincoln Avenue will be closed to traffic for a block party from 1 to 5 p.m. following the luncheon. There will be music, games, pony rides, a visit with fire trucks, a Fallon ambulance and the Quincy Police K-9 team.

"Our theme this year is 'Begin Again at Wollaston Cong,'" said Laurel Oster. "Wollaston Congregational is celebrating 128 years of service in Wollaston and we have just hired a fulltime minister, the Rev. Mary Lou Gifford.

"This three-day event will kick off our celebration as we begin again with a new minister, new members, but recommitting to the community to the community with the promise we are here for them."

Tickets are available by calling the church office at 617-773-7432 or Laurel Oster at 617-471-3516.

$800,000 Renovations Project At Adams Field

alley, 375 to the right field power alley and 400 feet to dead center field.

The original lighting system at Adams Field was installed under Mayor Walter Hannon in 1973. One light pole came down during Hurricane Gloria in 1985 and another was replaced by Park Department personnel three years ago. Many of the original fixtures are still in place today.

The bleachers at Adams Field no longer meet the acceptable Americans with Disability Act standards or regular industry safety standards. The bleachers will be replaced with one permanent set of ADA accessible aluminum bleachers for the home side and three seats of hydraulic portable bleachers for the away side. This will allow the use of the same bleacher systems at various locations in the city during the different sports seasons.

The dilapidated old rest room building will be replaced with a two-story brick building housing the rest rooms and concession stand on the first floor and a press box on the second floor. The new rest rooms and press box will be ADA accessible.

"The playing field at Adams Field has always been the pride of Quincy, but the facility was in major need of upgrade," Phelan said. "With the current renovations, generations of Quincy youngsters will get to enjoy one of the finest amateur baseball fields in New England and Quincy will make a lasting impression with the many folks that will visit Quincy for this summer's Babe Ruth World Series. I want to thank the city council and the Park and Recreation Board for their support of this project."

"We are quite pleased to be a part of this historic effort to upgrade our city's park system," said Josephine Shea, chairwoman of the Quincy Park and Recreation Board. "The improvements to Adams Field will be a great benefit to the young people of this city."

The city of Quincy passed a Home Rule Petition in 2000 that instituted a hotel/motel room tax at all hotels and motels in Quincy. The money collected through the hotel/motel room tax was specifically allocated for open space acquisition and park renovation (85 percent) and tourism promotion (15 percent).

GROUND-BREAKING FOR renovations at Adams Field took place last Saturday. Work will continue throughout the summer months in preparation for the 14-year-old Babe Ruth World Series to be held Aug. 15-23. From the left: Recreation Director Barry Welch, Jack Nigro, Parks and Recreation Board; Anthony Sansevero, Parks and Recreation Board; Dave Murphy, program director Quincy Park Department; Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, City Council President Dan Raymondi; Bryant Carter, Parks and Recreation Board; Tom Koch, executive director Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments; and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

The tax began collecting revenue on July 1, 2001 as a 1 percent room tax. Each July 1 it will increase 1 percent before maxing out at 4 percent in 2004. It is expected that the hotel/motel tax could generate $750,000 in revenue each year.

Quincy College changed my life.

Quincy College is people like you
your friends, your co-workers, your neighbors.

I never imagined I would be a college student.

But, in two weeks I will be graduating from Quincy College as a surgical technologist with a new career awaiting me at one of Boston's reputable hospitals.

As a young, single mother I never believed I would be able to make a better life for my son and myself. I worked in retail and I struggled to make ends meet. Then I came to Quincy College and my life changed.

The Allied Health programs at Quincy College helped me find my niche. I am entering a new profession where I will be making a difference in people's lives just like the dedicated faculty who helped change my life.

But even more than an allied health professional, I have become someone who my son can be proud of. I have become a role model especially to him and hopefully to other Quincy residents who will come to Quincy College to change their lives like I did.

Connolly Third Ward Councillor Bowing Out

necessary time to serving as Ward 6 councillor.

Hanley and Newton, who were first elected in 1999, are completing their second terms. Connolly defeated three-term incumbent Michael D'Amico in 2001 and is completing his first term.

Connolly's decision to launch his legal career full time leaves the Ward 4 council seat open in the first election since 1989.

That was the year that James Sheets, who held the seat for 16 years, gave it up to run for mayor. Tom Fabrizio won the seat, defeating Joseph Shea, now city clerk.

One candidate, Atty. Jay Davis, a member of the Neighborhood Housing Board of Directors, Tuesday declared his intention to run for the seat and others are expected to follow.

"Bryan has done a fabulous job as ward councillor," Davis said. "I would be honored to succeed him."

Connolly's decision not to seek re-election means that at least one-third of next year's city council and one-half of the ward councillors will be new.

Connolly will be an associate with Piper Rudnick LLP, a 925-lawyer firm with offices nationwide, including one in Boston.

The firm includes as members former U.S. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, former U.S. House Majority Leader Dick Armey and Massachusetts state Senator Jarrett Barrios.

"Piper Rudnick is the perfect place for me to launch my legal career," Connolly said. "I will be working with and learning from some of Boston's best attorneys. It is exactly the type of professional opportunity that I hoped to secure when I began law school three years ago.

"Given my commitment to my new legal career, I am not confident that I would have the time or the flexibility of schedule to keep up the same intensity and workload as Ward 4 councillor that I have maintained since being elected. And it would not be fair to seek re-election if I was not certain that I could give 100 percent and meet my constituents' fullest expectations."

Noting that the workload of a first-year associate at most law firms can be extremely demanding, Connolly said, "I do not want to risk shortchanging my public obligations as a result of commitments assumed in my private life. For that reason, I want to provide another Ward 4 resident the opportunity to lead them within our community."

Connolly said that he plans to remain very active in the city after he finishes his term. He also said that he may run for public office in Quincy again in the future.

Connolly said he believes his record will show that he provided new leadership and a voice of change at a time when Ward 4 desperately needed them.

"People were concerned that the priorities of our past leadership did not reflect their own, and that a new approach to local government was needed," he said. "With that in mind, I always approached my duties with a simple philosophy: be honest, be fair, vote my conscience, and put my constituents' interests ahead of all others."

Connolly said that he proudly upheld his campaign pledges to scrutinize new development and to professionalize traffic management. Only developments that satisfied neighborhood concerns were approved under his watch. Furthermore, the proliferation of new traffic signage in Ward 4 ceased under Connolly's leadership. He held firm to his commitment not to authorize new signage or traffic regulations unless expressly recommended by the city's professional traffic engineer.

He said he also honored his pledge not to accept campaign contributions from developers with business before the City Council, a contentious issue in his successful campaign for the seat.

Connolly cited his work with the mayor's office in renegotiating the operational lease with Quarry Hills Associates as an accomplishment that will provide major benefits to the city and to his community for decades to come, including a pending proposal to fund street and sidewalk repair from the revenues generated by the Granite Links golf course.

He also noted the major water-main replacement project being undertaken in South Quincy, his advocacy for new on-ramps at the Crown Colony Office Park, his initiation of city-wide tax-exemption workshops for senior citizens, and his efforts to secure new revenues for critical public services by modernizing the city's fee structure.

He also cited efforts to keep residents informed on all issues that would affect day-to-day life in Ward 4, and his commitment to holding nearly-weekly neighborhood meetings to address issues ranging from traffic and public safety to flooding and street and sidewalk repair.

"Among Quincy's many treasures are its talented and hard-working public employees," Connolly said. "From our teachers to our firefighters to our administrators to our department heads, our city government is full of people who have committed themselves to making this city the great place to live and raise a family that it remains today. It has been an honor to work alongside them these past two years.

I love this city, and I love the neighborhoods that I have represented. Although this decision has been difficult to make, I take comfort in knowing that I will maintain an active role in the issues most important to life in Quincy."

Meeting On Proposed Parking Rule Changes Near Eastern Nazarene College

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro sponsored a meeting regarding proposed parking rule changes on the streets surrounding Eastern Nazarene College yesterday (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the auditorium in the college's Mann Student Center.

Gutro said a number of residents living near the college's main campus have expressed frustration with student parking throughout the neighborhood.

In an effort to reduce illegal parking and encourage students to utilize the college parking lot on Wendell Ave., Gutro has urged the City Council and college to revise parking restrictions on the neighboring streets and to step up enforcement of illegally parked vehicles. In addition, Gutro wants to broadly publicize parking "do's and don'ts" to the college community.

Gutro and representatives from the college were expected to attend the meeting.

McCauley: Early Retirement Good For City's Finances

The city's decision to adopt the early retirement incentive last year has produced substantial savings and helped the city to handle the economic downturn, according to a recent study by Councillor Frank McCauley.

McCauley looked at the financial impact of the city's decision to institute the early retirement incentive, which has been touted by the state and local communities as a cost savings measure. Approximately 100 city workers took advantage of the program.

"It is my opinion that the Phelan administration took the right course of action in proposing an early retirement incentive program back in the Spring 2002," said McCauley.

FRANK McCAULEY

The city saved a substantial amount of money in salary costs in fiscal 2003 at a time when the state revenues were decreasing and state expenses to local communities were increasing, he said.

"The success of the early retirement incentive has helped the city financially as we prepare for the fiscal 2004 budget," said McCauley.

Since 13 employees replaced the retirees, the net savings amounted to approximately $3.2 million in fiscal 2003 alone, McCauley said.

Overall, the city stands to save approximately $6.4 million in the first two years.

"We needed immediate savings, and the payback to these employees doesn't begin until 2005," said McCauley. "By that time the economy should rebound and that should make it easier for the city to make the payments."

In 2002, the city had approximately 974 employees. That number dropped to 855 after workers took advantage of the program. Approximately 872 workers have been budgeted for fiscal 2004, according to Phelan's plan.

"The city could have simply laid off employees," said McCauley. "However, this course of action would have been a slap in the face to those employees who had served the city well over the years. The early retirement incentive allowed these individuals to retire with dignity."

McCauley thanked Edward Masterson, executive director of the Quincy Retirement Board; Roberta Kety, director of the City of Quincy's Human Resources; and Tom Walsh, director of Personnel for the City of Quincy, for their help in preparing the study.

YMCA Annual Support Campaign Underway

The YMCA's Annual Support Campaign is underway to help families who cannot afford the cost of programs such as Resident Camp, childcare, youth sports, swim lessons and other initiatives for youths.

The organization hopes to raise $700,000 this year. The Quincy Police Department recently donated $200 to help the organization reach its goal.

Last year, more than $490,000 was raised for the campaign, which allowed 1,262 children and families to take part in YMCA activities.

In addition, 2,849 children and families were served through subsidized programs, including the Germantown Neighborhood Center. In total, more than 4,100 people benefited from the campaign last year.

This year, the YMCA expects to assist an additional 1,500 individuals through the campaign.

For more information, please call the South Shore YMCA at 617-479-8500.

Good 'Curb Appeal,' Clean Interior Enhance Look

Simple Steps Can Help Your Home Sell Quickly In Today's Market

By CHRISTOPHER HARADEN

Price and market conditions aren't the only factors to consider when putting your home on the market. Good "curb appeal" — how the house looks from the outside — and a clean interior condition of the home will enhance the look of your home to potential buyers.

On the inside, consider these tips:

• Clear all unnecessary objects from furniture throughout the house. Keep decorative objects to a minimum. Rearrange or remove some of the furniture, if necessary. Less furniture makes a room look larger.

• The kitchen is the most important room in the house — make it bright and attractive. If dull, paint the cabinets and replace faded curtains. Keep countertops clear and the refrigerator door free of photographs and messages.

• In the bathroom, eliminate clutter from countertops, tubs, shower stalls and shelves. Coordinate towels to one or two colors. Repair dripping faucets and keep the sinks, fixtures and mirrors sparkling.

• Take down or rearrange certain pictures or objects on the walls. Patch and paint, if necessary. In painting and redecorating, stick to conventional white and easy-to-work-with neutral colors.

• Review the house room by room, and paint any rooms that need it, clean carpets and drapes and wash the windows.

• If you have a fireplace, place a log in the hearth to create a warm and inviting atmosphere.

• Make sure the closets and garage are not "too full" so the buyer can see the actual size of the area.

• Leave on certain lights during the day — the agent will show you which ones. During showings, turn on all lights and lamps. Make sure all light switches are operating and that bulbs are working.

On the outside:

• Walk the perimeter of the house and move all garbage cans, discarded wood scraps, extra building materials, etc. Stack firewood and neatly place yard items away from the house or put them in storage.

• Check gutters and/or roof for dry rot. Make sure the gutters are swept and cleaned and that there are no missing roof shingles.

• Look at all plants and prune bushes and trees. Keep plants from blocking windows, since you can't sell a house if you can't see it!

• Weed all planting areas, keep lawn freshly cut and fertilized. A well-manicured lawn, neatly clipped shrubbery, and clear walks create a good first impression.

• Clear patios or decks of all small items. In winter, the walks and pathways should be free of snow and ice.

• Check the condition of the paint on the house, especially on the door and trim. Paint it if necessary, as this can do more for sales appeal that any other factor. If you decide against painting, at least consider painting the front shutters.

In general, try to look at your house through the eyes of potential buyers — as though you have never seen it or been there before. There are many other simple things you can do to help your home sell quickly and at the best possible price.

Home Fix-It Makes The Heart Grow Fonder

(NAPS)—Couples looking to strengthen the bonds between them, a recent study suggests, may do well to try to strengthen their home improvement skills.

The survey found 54 percent of all couples (married or living with a significant other) who do home improvement projects together actually enjoyed working with each other. Proving their ability to work together as a couple was cited as a key factor. Nine percent reported working together was a romantic experience.

The Bliss Factor

When asked what they like most about the home improvement experience, 36 percent of the couples said spending time together while 28 percent reported they were pleased because they work well as a team. Another 28 percent said they laughed a lot and one out of four indicated working together was a positive experience because they did a good job.

He Says, She Says

When given the opportunity to compare their ability to do fix-it jobs with that of their partner, 34 percent said they were better (55 percent of males and 11 percent of females claimed superior skills). One out of four said their partner was better, with 48 percent of females and 5 percent of males in this category. One-third said both partners did a good job.

Tool Savvy

Responses were similarly divided when it came to evaluating skills in using basic hand tools. Men were decidedly more confident, with 77 percent saying they were better at wielding a hammer, screwdriver (68 percent) and saw (84 percent).

Pet Projects

When it comes to the project the couples prefer, lawn and garden projects ranked No. 1 with 51 percent. Other preferred activities include painting and wallpapering (34 percent), general fix-it and repair (31 percent), woodworking (17 percent) and upgrading flooring (15 percent).

The survey was conducted for Great Neck Saw Manufacturers, which has been making and distributing superior quality tools for the hardware, automotive and do-it yourself markets since 1919.

But Demands Remain At Near Record Level

Bay State Home Sales Slip In First Quarter

Sales of single-family homes in the Bay State cooled this past winter as a weakening job market, along with poor weather and consumer concerns over the war in Iraq dampened home buying activity in the first quarter of the year, according to date issued recently by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

In spite of the slower sales pace, the first quarter of 2003 was the third busiest January-March period for home sales in state history, and the near record demand fueled a sharp increase in home prices, which rose for a 39th consecutive quarter in the first three months of the year.

The MAR report shows sales of detached single-family homes declined 10.6 percent in the first quarter of 2003 compared to the same period one year earlier, falling from 9,172 units sold in the first three months of 2002 to 8,199 in the same quarter this year.

In addition, condominium sales were flat during the opening quarter of the year, with sales of 3,025 units in the first quarter of 2003 versus 3,024 condo sales closed in the comparable quarter last year.

"The first three months of this year were far quieter for business than last year, but the market has still been quite active by historic standards, especially given the fact consumers have been preoccupied with issues related to job security, family members going off to war and digging out from storm after storm this past winter," said MAR President Peter Casey.

In fact, the aggregate total of 11,224 detached single-family homes and condos sold from January-March 2003 is the third highest residential sales volume ever recorded in Massachusetts during a first quarter of the year, topped only by the opening quarters of 2002 (12,196) and 1999 (11,701).

Regionally, in the first quarter, sales of detached single-family homes rose 1.4 percent in southeastern Massachusetts (greater Fall River-New Bedford) from the same three-month period last year, but declined in all other areas.

Sales declined a modest 3.1 percent on Cape Cod and the islands, but slid 9 to 11 percent in the central, greater Boston, northeast and west regions, and fell 17.5 percent on the South Shore.

In the condo market, first quarter sales increased in the northeast, central (Worcester County) and west regions by 4.1 percent, 9.3 percent and 18.9 percent, respectively, over the same three-month period in 2002.

Elsewhere, sales declined, but only modestly so, especially in greater Boston, the South Shore and southeastern Mass., where sales were off 3 to 5 percent from the first quarter a year ago.

Today's historically low mortgage rates have been a key factor in keeping demand strong, according to Case. In the last year, the average for a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage in Massachusetts decreased from 7.05 percent in the first quarter of 2002 to 6.01 percent in the same quarter this year, providing increased purchasing power for consumers.

In addition to declining mortgage rates, inventory levels also have improved over the past 12 months, providing prospective home buyers a greater selection of home from which to choose.

Notably, in the first quarter of 2003, there was a monthly average of 34,010 single-family homes (detached home and condos) available for sale statewide, or 8.9 months worth of supply.

That represents an increase of 11.9 percent in the number of single-family homes active on the market since last year, when an average of 30,405 homes were listed for sale during the first three months of 2002. It's the healthiest the market has been in terms of supply since the first quarter of 1998 when there was 10.8 months of supply.

Despite the steady rise in supply and more moderate sales pace of the first quarter, the market continues to treat sellers well, too. That's evident by the steady increase in home prices over the past year. In the detached single-family home market, the statewide average selling price increased 15.7 percent in first quarter, climbing from $309,807 in the opening quarter a year ago to $358,334 in the first quarter of 2003.

In addition, the statewide average selling price for condominiums rose 9.5 percent, from $225,089 in the first quarter of 2002 to $246,572 in the same quarter this year.

Every region of the state also reported positive price gains between the first quarters of 2002 and 2003. In the detached single-family home market, the west region was the only one to observe single-digit appreciation in the quarter, while average selling prices rose faster than the statewide rate of appreciation in the Cape Cod and islands, southeast and South Shore region.

In the condo market, average selling prices rose modestly by 4 to 5 percent in the greater Boston and west regions, but prices increased in excess of the statewide rate appreciation in the remaining five regions.

Additionally, today's higher prices reflect the fact that inventory, although up from a year ago, is still not sufficient to meet current demand, particularly at the entry level.

"We simply aren't building enough starter homes," Casey said. "There is very little inventory at the low-end, so first-time buyers are having to buy in the mid-to-upper price levels. It's taking longer for this group to find a home that fits their budget. That's another reason why sales are down and prices are up."

Sales and price data from the MAR report reflect transactions occurring through Realtor-affiliated multiple listing services in the commonwealth, and account for approximately 80 percent of all real estate in Massachusetts.

Restore, Protect Beautiful Decks

(NAPS) If time has taken a toll on your deck, leaving it dirty, mildew-stained and wearing a coat of gray, don't worry. It's easy to restore your deck to its natural beauty. It's also easy to protect your deck so it stays beautiful for years to come. Here's advice from the experts at Wolman Wood Care Products:

Step 1: Clean away dirt and gray weathered wood with an acid-free, biodegradable deck cleaner, such as Wolman Deck Brite (formerly Deck & Fence Brightener). Deck Brite is tough on ground-in dirt, mildew and algae stains, yet it's gentle to handle and safe to use near grass, plants and shrubs. Its fast-acting foaming action loosens and lifts dirt, stains and weathered-gray discoloration in 10 minutes or less. Unlike chlorine bleach, which can degrade the structure of the wood, this oxygen bleach formula cleans and restores the wood to its original, like-new without whitening or damaging the wood surface. Protective finishes will adhere better and last longer.

Step 2: Protect your deck against mildew attack, water damage and graying with a powerful finish and preservative, such as Wolman F&P Premium Wood Finish and Preservative. This product contains extra mildewcide to prohibit decay-producing fungal growth including mildew and mold. It also contains a water-repellant that exceeds national standards, thereby minimizing wood damage such as splitting and warping. In fact, F&P is guaranteed to repel water and protect against wood rot and decay up to four years. It is available in four one-coat, easy-to-apply finishes – golden pine, natural, cedar and redwood – that beautify wood with long-lasting, transparent color that reveals natural wood grain and protects against graying.

Step 3: Bring out your patio furniture and enjoy your deck for many seasons to come.

For more information about restoring, protecting and beautifying your deck, call the Wolman Consumer Help Line at 1-800-556-7737 or visit www.wolman.com for more helpful deck care tips.

Coughlin Announces Candidacy For Re-Election To Ward 3 Seat

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin announced his candidacy for a second term at a recent campaign kick-off event.

Coughlin expressed his appreciation to Ward 3 residents for the honor and privilege of representing their interests and by extension the interests of residents throughout the city.

KEVIN COUGHLIN

As Chairman of the city council's Education Committee, Coughlin said he has been a vocal advocate of adequate funding for school programs, supported such programs with mitigation fund and was the council sponsor of the Quincy Education Fund, which was initiated on the school committee by Jo-Ann Bragg.

Coughlin said this voluntary fund has secured donations of more than $16,000 to date.

He also proposed the creation of an Environmental Health and Safety Committee for the school system, which was modeled after a program in Milton.

"As an active parent of three children educated in the Quincy Public Schools and a member of two school councils, I have always felt a strong personal commitment to public education," said Coughlin.

He also serves as Chairman of the Park and Recreation Committee and Finance Committee.

Coughlin said his leadership on those committees has been credited with preventing a stalemate in action on the recently passed $10 million Natural Resources Initiative, which will lead to open space acquisition, marsh restoration and capital improvements in park and recreation facilities.

In addition, Coughlin said he has advocated for the necessary resources to address the needs of neighborhoods, including the $1.7 million Northwest Lateral Sewer Improvement Project. This project will rehabilitate and replace several miles of sanitary sewer lines in the Montclair and Wollaston area and provide flood control to mitigate longstanding problems in lower Montclair.

He said he has worked closely with community police officers and has maintained a vocal stance regarding the services of Engine 4 at the Wollaston station. He has advocated for adequate staffing levels and deployment per the National Fire Protection 1710 standards.

Coughlin authored the city's first Wireless Communications Ordinance to govern the deployment of equipment and protect residential neighborhoods.

He testified before the Legislature and actively supported recycling legislation that could save the city more than $50,000 per year, he said.

Focusing on the concerns of seniors, Coughlin said he has sponsored tax workshops, filed the council action that increased the value of senior citizen real estate tax exemptions and has drafted a Home Rule Petition to be submitted to the Legislature to create Senior Citizen Safety Zones on the public ways around senior housing.

"I take my responsibilities to all residents of all ages and every neighborhood very, very personally and I will continue to do my best to earn their trust, respect and support," said Coughlin. "Holding community meetings, office hours, quickly responding to phone calls and mail, keeping people informed and bringing City Hall to the neighborhoods have been and will always be my highest priorities."

Local Educator, Music Group To Receive Honorary Degrees

The largest graduating class of Quincy College will honor a lifetime Quincy educator and a musically talented band of brothers at commencement Saturday, May 31 at 1 p.m.

The college will present honorary degrees to Dr. Kathleen M. Morris, Principal of Quincy's Beechwood Knoll Elementary School and members of the legendary local musical group Tavares.

The spring commencement ceremony represents the largest graduating class in decades, with more than 350 graduates in degree and certificate programs. Students from much of southeastern Massachusetts will join the ranks of graduates from the nearly half century old college.

Dr. Morris will be awarded an Honorary Degree in Public Service in recognition of her 33 years as a public educator in the City of Quincy.

Having worked as a teacher and a principal in the public school system, she has dedicated her life to making a difference in children's lives. Her work both inside and outside the classroom, the many educator awards she has received, her involvement on various boards, and her membership to numerous associations have demonstrated her passion for education and her commitment to public service.

"Not only does Dr. Morris set a stellar example for our graduates through her dedication and accomplishments, as someone who earned higher degrees later in life she personifies the idea of lifelong learning, which reflects the mission of Quincy College," said college President Sean Barry.

"When we say goodbye to our graduates we encourage them to never stop learning and to continue with their education no matter where it may lead them."

Morris returned to college and earned a Doctoral Degree in 1999.

Tavares, the musical sensation of the 1970s, will be awarded Honorary Degrees in Music Arts by Barry. The honorary degree celebrates the accomplishments of the singing group of brothers whose popular hits include It Only Takes a Minute, Heaven Must be Missing One Angel, and More Than a Woman, their smash hit from the Saturday Night Fever Soundtrack.

The six brothers from New Bedford, MA being honored include Ralph, Antone "Chubby", Feliciano "Butch", Arthur "Pooch", Perry Lee "Tiny" and John who is credited with forming the group and teaching them to harmonize.

Originally created in 1962, the group of four brothers first known as the Del Rios then The Turnpikes grew to include additional brothers by the time they signed with Capitol Records in 1973 as Tavares. Their first LP Check It Out (1973) debuted in the R&B Top 20 and contained the group's first hit title-track single.

Their rise from the local clubs of Southeastern Massachusetts to the international stage is a story of talent and tenacity. Although on the charts nearly 30 years ago, their music continues to reach a growing fan base fueled by the recent 25th anniversary of the film Saturday Night Fever.

"This is the first year of the Music Arts Program at Quincy College and to celebrate we wanted to award an honorary degree." Barry said. "The first and only group we thought of was Tavares. Their background is similar to many of our students and their incredible rise to stardom is something I know will inspire everyone at the event.

"The story of these brothers resonates today and we were amazed that no other institution had recognized them. Aspiring musicians and performers can learn much from their story."

"Some institutions feel compelled to pull national figures for their graduations yet we have so many treasures in our community. Our event will be a local celebration honoring some of our own," said Tom De Santes, Vice President of Enrollment Management. "We're thrilled that Dr. Morris and the Tavares brothers will be part of our ceremony."

Barry said this year's commencement focuses of community.

"In this ceremony we celebrate the accomplishments of our students, and in a larger way, the region. Dr. Morris has touched the lives of generations of Quincy's children, and continues to teach education professionals.

"Tavares has created their own unique art and in many ways, have expressed in music a creative energy and entertaining force. They too make our community a better place," Barry said.

Spring commencement exercises are held in front of the College's landmark Coddington Hall, in Quincy Center. Seating is reserved for guests and graduates, with limited public viewing areas on the periphery. Quincy College serves more than 4500 students each semester, and like most two-year public institutions, serves many students who do not intend to earn a degree, or who plan to transfer before completing degree requirements.

Accordingly, the significant increase in graduates means that many more students are remaining at the College, but for each graduate there are many more attending Quincy who will not earn their degrees on campus.

SPRING CAR CARE

Auto Checkup Eases Summer Driving Worries

A quick and easy automotive checkup can help prepare a vehicle for the stress of summer's high temperatures and increase reliability on long road trips, according to AAA Southern New England.

"The cold temperatures may be far behind us, but the summer heat can be just as hard on automobiles as the fiercest winter weather," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "A few minutes spent checking your car's vital components can help you enjoy a summer of trouble-free driving."

To help prevent dangerous and inconvenient tire failure, examine tires for uneven or excessive tread wear. Make sure all tires, including the spare, are inflated properly.

With the engine off, look for worn or cracked belts and damaged, blistered or soft hoses. Inspect antifreeze/coolant level and condition, making certain the proper 50/50 mixture of water and coolant is present.

Check motor oil level and condition. If driving under extreme conditions — such as very hot temperatures or towing a heavy trailer — switch to a motor oil with higher viscosity. Check the owner's manual for specific oil recommendations.

If you are not comfortable performing this inspection yourself, a qualified auto service facility, such as those recognized by AAA's Approved Auto Repair Program, can conduct a thorough examination.

Because even properly maintained vehicles can break down, AAA urges motorists to equip their vehicle with an emergency kit containing at least the following items: flashlight with extra batteries, warning devices such as flares or reflective triangles, jumper cables and a first aid kit. A cellular phone provides an easy way to summon emergency assistance

AAA also reminds motorists summer weather can cause temperatures inside a parked vehicle to reach levels that can be dangerous or even fatal, especially to children and pets.

"Temperatures inside a parked car can quickly soar to near 200 degrees," Paul said. "Don't leave children or animals unattended in a car, not even for a short time."

Before entering a vehicle that has parked in high temperatures, AAA says motorists should open the vehicle's door and let the interior cool for a few minutes. A sun shield can be used to cover the windshield to minimize heat build-up and to help protect the car's interior. Cover metal and plastic parts on safety belts and child safety seats to prevent burns.

Good Communication Leads To Satisfatory Auto Service

(NAPS) — Today's busy schedules and high-tech vehicles may discourage tinkering, but motorists can still be involved in car care.

According to the experts at the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE), good communication can help ensure satisfactory auto service.

Here's a checklist to help:

Before Taking Your Vehicle In For Repairs Or Service

- Read the owner's manual.
- Follow the recommended service schedules.
- Keep a log of all repairs and service.
- Don't ignore warning signals.
- Inspect your car frequently for: unusual sounds, odors, drips, leaks, smoke, warning lights, gauge readings, changes in acceleration, engine performance, gas mileage, fluid levels; worn tires, belts, hoses; problems in handling, braking, steering, vibrations; note when and under what conditions the problem occurs.

At The Repair Establishment

- Be prepared to describe the symptoms.
- Bring a list of symptoms.
- Let the technician diagnose and recommend a remedy.
- Don't be embarrassed to request explanations of technical terms.
- Don't rush the service consultant or technician to make an on-the-spot diagnosis. Ask to be called about the problem, course of action and costs before work begins.
- Be sure you understand all shop policies regarding labor rates, guarantees and acceptable methods of payment.
- Leave a telephone number.

The non-profit National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE) is dedicated to improving automotive service and repair. ASE-certified technicians wear blue and white ASE shoulder insignia. Their employees often display the blue and white ASE sign.

Maintenance The Best Form Of Driving Vacation Insurance

Planning a successful summer driving vacation involves more than arranging overnight stays or knowing how many states will be visited on the journey.

Attention to details, including preventative automobile maintenance, is the key to a stress-free driving vacation.

Before taking the trip, have your car inspected by a certified automotive technician. Things can go wrong no matter how well you prepare, so it's a good idea to carry emergency supplies. If you expect to be traveling at odd hours or off the beaten path, consider carrying a cellular phone for summoning help, if needed.

Don't overload your vehicle with luggage, AAA advises. A fully loaded vehicle can put excessive stress on tires, brakes and suspension components, so pack as lightly as possible. When loading the car, position luggage so it doesn't obstruct the driver's view or shift during braking or sharp turns. Keep in mind car top carriers can affect vehicle handling and reduce fuel economy.

Check your route for food, fuel and rest stops. Stopping every few hours will help fight fatigue. Make hotel or motel reservations beforehand.

It's a good idea to carry as little cash as possible. A major credit car and traveler's checks are safer options. Take the telephone numbers of friends to call in case of emergencies, and let someone know your itinerary.

AAA offers its members route planning, reservations, traveler's checks, car care advice and roadside assistance. No one can be assured of a perfect trip, but proper planning can increase the odds.

What Baby Boomers Should Know About Stroke

A recent American Stroke Association survey shows many baby boomers do not recognize all five of the major warning signs for stroke and are in denial about the looming threat of American's No. 3 killer in their own lives.

In a February survey of 1,000 adults, the American Stroke Association found most baby boomers know at least one — but not all — of the stroke warning signs and what to do if someone has a stroke. They are moving closer to the age — 55 — when their own stroke risk will begin to double with each successive decade, according to the NHLBI Framingham Heart Study.

"We are happy to see that baby boomers, as a group, are beginning to understand what a stroke is and how to act when faced with one," said Judith Hinchey, MD, a neurologist at St. Elizabeth's Medical Center and an American Stroke Association volunteer.

"It concerns us, however, that this group underestimates their risk and that most aren't concerned about stroke as a health risk in general. Baby Boomers represent a large part of the population and as more of them turn 55 each year, they should be able to recognize the stroke warning signs and know what to do."

So why doesn't stroke worry baby boomers, who as each birthday passes, are at greater risk of stroke? One-third of respondents said, "I can't prevent a stroke, so why worry?"

Truth: Various factors affect your risk for stroke. These include uncontrollable factors, such as family history, age and gender. But some factors are controllable, such as high blood cholesterol, high blood pressure and smoking.

By quitting smoking, working with your doctor to treat high cholesterol and high blood pressure, eating healthy and exercising, you can reduce your stroke risk.

The reason that more than half of the baby boomers surveyed don't worry about stroke is that they believe, "I'm not at risk for stroke."

Truth: Stroke can occur at any time, at any age, to anyone. It's important to recognize the signs of stroke and seek treatment. Never dismiss the signs of stroke because you believe that someone having symptoms is "too young."

In addition, while some people are at a lower risk for stroke than others, those who have the highest risk have a combination of factors that may include a family history of stroke, existing cardiovascular conditions, high blood cholesterol, high blood pressure, a history of heart attack or stroke, tobacco use and age greater than 55.

Moreover, if you are overweight and obese, you should follow sound dietary advice and engage in physical activity to control your weight and reduce your risk of stroke.

The American Stroke Association encourages you this May — American Stroke Month — to take the following steps toward a healthier future:

• Knowing the warning signs of stroke and teach them to your family and friends. The more people who can recognize stroke, the better off you are if you have one. If you recognize the signs of stroke in yourself or another person, call 9-1-1 immediately to get to a hospital quickly.

The signs of stroke are: Sudden numbness or weakness of the face, arm or leg, especially on one side of the body; sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding; sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes; sudden trouble walking, dizziness, loss of balance or coordination; sudden, severe headache with no known cause.

• Visit StrokeAssociation.org to learn more about stroke and take the stroke pledge. Fill out a confidential risk assessment and learn more about risk factors and solutions, then discuss that information with your physician to reduce your stroke risks.

• Watch your television for new stroke public service announcements. Stars Patrick Dempsey, Michael Clarke-Duncan, Penny Marshall, Don Rickles and Sharon Stone portray a stroke to teach Americans about the warning signs of stroke in a new campaign from the American Stroke Association and Ad Council.

Parents Should Act Quickly To Deal With Children's Mental Health Issues

Your 11-year-old child seems unusually sad, but you can't pinpoint the reason why. Or, suddenly your honor roll high school freshman is bringing home D's. Or your son or daughter can't get along with classmates or teachers.

All of these issues may indicate a child is suffering from an emotional problem and may have mental health needs that are not being met. He or she would not be alone.

According to the Office of the United States Surgeon General, one in 10 children and adolescents in this country — perhaps as many as 6 million young people — suffer from mental illness that is severe enough to cause some level of impairment.

Indeed, the federal agency suggests 4 to 7 percent may have "significant functional impairment." Yet, the government estimates that in any given year, fewer than one in five of these children get needed treatment.

Parents take center stage in the effort to recognize and get treatment for these problems.

"One of the most important things for parents to do," said Elliot Pittel, M.D., a child and adolescent psychiatrist, "is to look at how a child is behaving, what their mood is like and how they control their moods. How do they socialize with friends, peers, family and other adults?"

Dr. Pittel, affiliated with Tufts New England Medical Center and Lemuel Shattuck Hospital, both in Boston, as well as various community clinics in the state, said parents should not try to bear this responsibility alone.

"They should partner with professionals, teachers, pediatricians," he said. "And they should be open to other peoples' impressions of their child . . . find out how the child is functioning and see if they have a different perspective."

There are numerous emotional or mental health problems that can beset children and adolescents. Some, such as depression, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) and obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD), are often discussed and well known to many.

The American Academy of Child & Adolescent Psychiatry (AACAP) says parents are usually the first to recognize emotional or behavioral problems in their child. "Still," the organization maintains, "the decision to seek professional help can be difficult or painful for a parent."

Perhaps the biggest reason for this is the stigma — or stereotyping — that sometimes comes with a diagnosis or emotional problems. These are almost always a result of misunderstanding and lack of knowledge.

"Stigma is a barrier to getting proper care," Dr. Pittel said.

The first step for a parent who suspects a child may suffer from an emotional problem is to gently talk to the child, according to the AACAP.

"For most people, the thing to do after that is to call the child's pediatrician for advice," Dr. Pittel said.

Another alternative, he said, is for parents to consult their health plan for a list of mental health professionals who can evaluate the child.

Parents are the key link for a child who needs professional help with an emotional problem. And yet, some parents may miss the symptoms or be reluctant to confront their child's emotional illness. That may prompt action by the child's school.

"It happens quite a bit that schools will do something," Dr. Pittel said. "School is an important part of this."

Dr. Pittel said it is important for parents who think their child may have an emotional problem to act quickly. "Early intervention is often the key," he said.

The AACAP recommends that parents who suspect their child has emotional problems get as much information as possible. The organization suggests that parents who still have questions after conferring with personal physicians or school counselors consult their Employee Assistance Program at work, state medical society, psychiatric society or mental health association.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

STRESS AND THE DAILY GRIND

As a reaction to any number of traumatic life experiences (including accidents and natural disasters), those with PTSD develop many stressful reactions stemming from the memory of the original event. Difficulty sleeping is common among those with the disorder, and researchers have now found that wear patterns along the necks of the teeth are also an apparent potential consequence. Moreover, those suffering with the anxiety of PTSD also have worse oral hygiene in general, including greater incidence of gingivitis. These symptoms provide dentists with means of detecting PTSD. While it has already been established that general stress gives rise to tooth-grinding (bruxism), those suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) grind their teeth and clench their jaws more than usual.

Once diagnosed, teeth grinding can be treated in a number of ways. When was that last time you had a comprehensive dental examination? We make every effort to see you promptly and listen to your concerns and needs. We will let you known about new procedures and technologies and what they can do for you. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. For superior dental care, call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Bruxism can be helped by wearing a custom-made mouth guard at night.

5-Mile Run Begins 10 A.M.
At Veterans' Memorial Stadium

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run For ALS June 7

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are getting ready for the upcoming 6th annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Race for ALS a/k/a the Squirrel Run, on Saturday, June 7th.

The event will begin and end at Quincy's Veterans' Memorial Stadium on Hancock St.

All proceeds from the event will go to the Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at Massachusetts General Hospital. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

Event organizers, including Jimmy's family, are planning for another great day, which will include more than 200 walkers and 400 to 700 runners in the competitive/non- competitive event.

The 5-mile run begins at 10 a.m. and winds its way along a flat, fast course along Quincy Shore Drive.

The 2.5-mile walk encompasses a more direct route to Quincy Shore Drive, where participants will have an opportunity to walk along the ocean drive. The walk begins at 9 a.m.

According to Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother and President of the Angel Fund, the day will be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments, and awards (New Balance apparel and sporting goods) for competitive runners in 15 age divisions for men and women.

"The Jimmy Kennedy/Squirrel Run has a great mix of competitive, somewhat competitive, and recreational walkers and runners," Rich Kennedy said. "Moms and dads with their kids in tow, serious runners, and family members affected by this disease come together to help us raise money for ALS research."

Former Governor Michael S. Dukakis has participated in the past and is expected to be here again this year, Rich Kennedy noted.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The cost to pre-register is $15; $20 on the day of the event.

The first 1,000 participants to register will receive a long-sleeve t-shirt.

Children are also welcome to participate in their own activities during the event. For a $5 fee per child, they can participate in races of various distances with all participants receiving a medal. Entertainment and activities will be provided, including train rides, moon bounces, and many other age appropriate activities.

For registration information, call Rich Kennedy (781) 383-6008 or Marty Levenson at (800) 999-5950 x 1127.

South Shore ARC Golf Outing June 24

South Shore native Bob Rodgers, host of NESN's Extra Innings Red Sox postgame show, will participate in the 16th annual South Shore ARC Lou Bailey Golf Outing to be held Tuesday, June 24, at Lakeville Country Club.

The tournament has an 8 a.m. shotgun start with a barbecue, awards and raffle/auction to follow. Golf fees are $100 per person and $400 for a foursome.

Proceeds from the tourney will directly benefit children and adults with mental retardation, cognitive, physical and/or developmental disabilities that are served by South Shore ARC.

"I've been involved with the South Shore ARC Lou Bailey Golf Outing for many years," said Kathleen Bailey of Cohasset, who is serving as co-chair with Robert Gramm of Norwell. "It gets great community support and helps a very worthy cause."

Brian Joyce Strikes Out 11 To Lead Consumer Home Mortgage

Brian Joyce struck out 11 and walked three as Consumer Home Mortgage edged Encompass, 3-2, for its first win of the season in recent Quincy Youth Baseball Triple A action.

Joyce also had one of CHM's three hits in what was a well-pitched game by both clubs. Catcher Andrew Beaton scored two runs and played well behind the plate. Tom Dow also had a hit and scored and Robert Bergonzi played strong defensively.

For Encompass, Steve Santana and Brian Repetto each pitched effectively and scored a run. Daniel Hartel played well.

Masons 9, Flavin 8

Jeff Alsip picked up the win against Flavin & Flavin and Joe Madden led the offense. Shawn Grogan, Michael Renken and Alsip provided excellent base running. David Westerman was solid in the field.

DON'T KNOCK IT

The octane requirement of a vehicle's engine is largely determined by the mechanical compression ratio inside the cylinders. High-compression engines (above 9.5:1) generally require premium fuel, while those with lower compression can use a lesser grade. Why? Because there is more heat and pressure inside a high-compression engine, fuels with lower octane values (which ignite more readily) can cause a dangerous condition called "detonation" inside the cylinders that puts enormous strain on pistons, connecting rods, and bearings. Basically, detonation occurs when the fuel ignites prematurely, before the piston is in proper firing position. Burning high-octane fuel in a low-compression engine, on the other hand, is a waste of energy.

It's best to use the grade of gasoline recommended by the manufacturer for your car. It's also important to keep your engine in tune. For maintenance and repairs, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO provides friendly, personal service. We also have the latest test equipment, and more important, outstanding ASE Certified technicians. You can trust your auto repairs to us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm

HINT: Engine "knock" consists of the rattling and pinging sounds that the engine makes during detonation.

The Presidents' final two games of the regular season (Nauset last Thursday and North Quincy last Friday) were washed out and will not be made up, leaving them with a 9-9 overall record and their first playoff berth since 1994.

"We're not going to play those games, so we're in," said head coach Michael Draicchio Tuesday morning. "I feel we should have made it earlier and we shouldn't have had to wait until this week. We lost some close games."

Quincy will travel to Barnstable today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. for the first round of the Division 1 South Sectional tournament.

The Presidents had two players selected to the Atlantic Coast League All-Star Team. Senior pitcher Anthony Boyle and senior Jamie Chiocchio each received the honor for the first time.

Boyle compiled a 4-2 record with a 0.67 ERA, 61 strikeouts and only seven walks. The left-hander's most memorable performance was the no-hitter against North Quincy May 1.

Chiocchio finished with a .354 batting average, third in the league, with three home runs and 10 RBI.

The Presidents (12-6 overall) are the No. 10 seed and the Lakers No. 7.

"I don't think they're as strong as they were in the past," said head coach Mike Sedar. "It's a good team for us. I think we can handle them."

Quincy received league recognition this season with three players named Atlantic Coast League first-team all-stars and another receiving an honorable mention.

Junior pitcher Rachel Sorensen achieved the honor for the second straight season, while senior center fielder Diane Gilbody and sophomore first baseman Alysia DiMuzio each earned the honor for the first time. Sophomore left fielder Katie Walsh received the honorable mention.

Sorensen pitched every inning of every game and finished with a 1.40 ERA and 100 strikeouts.

Peak said she met Mr. Adams through his brother, Thomas Boylston Adams, the historian.

Mr. Adams was an active member of the Lincoln Conservation Commission for 29 years after its founding in 1960. He supported the conservation of land in Lincoln and later set his own family's property aside as conservation land in the 1980s.

He was a founder and former president of the Montclair Men's Club and ran their annual Sports Night, when selected national sports celebrities visited the club for dinner, drinks and story-telling.

He worked tirelessly 40 years ago to keep the Montclair marshes as open space for the spawning of the local fish stock rather than see the former Wollaston (now Presidents) Golf Course sold to developers.

He vacationed in White Horse Beach, Plymouth, and was former secretary of the Manomet Sportsman's Club from which post he ran the annual Beachcombers' Ball in Plymouth for many years in the 1960s.

An expert calligrapher, he was called on many times to do hand-lettered political signs for candidates at election time and add names to diplomas for the MIT sports programs.

Mr. Gildea worked for 32 years as a salesman for Coca Cola in Brighton, winning an award as its top salesman nationally in 1959 and 1960. He was president of Local 513 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, AFL-CIO.

An avid sports enthusiast, he worked at the "will call" window at Fenway Park until he was 88, served as press box steward at Red Sox training camps in Florida and at Boston and New England Patriot games at Harvard Stadium, Nickerson Field, Fenway Park and Foxboro for 35 years.

He was statistician for the late Boston Bruins' broadcaster Frank Ryan for 28 years, press box liaison for BC football games at Brave Field and Fenway Park, worked at the annual Baseball Writers' Dinner in Boston and wrote articles for Boxing Magazine while stationed in Natal.

He began his career as a volunteer and sportsman at the age of 18 when he organized the Boy Scouts and football teams at Our Lady of Lourdes Parish in Jamaica Plain in 1926.

He was a former member of the Quincy Park & Recreation Board and, in July, 1996, a plaque was placed and a tree was planted in his honor at Bishop Field, Montclair, during rededication and Family Day.

He was a former vice chairman of the Ward 6 Democratic Committee and a delegate to the Democratic State Convention. He received the Citizen of the Year Award from the Quincy Jewish War Veterans in 1981.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that successful people rarely consider work as just so much labor; they regard it in the nature of an opportunity for service and feel enjoyment in and derive pleasure from it.

Success is not a thing to be acquired; rather it is a spirit. It is not a matter of position or possessions. Success is the satisfying feeling of a life spent in a worthwhile way and a feeling of service rendered. Yes, success is a frame of mind. . .

"Success is in the way you walk the paths of life each day;
It's in the little things you do, and in the things you say.
Success is not in getting rich, or rising high to fame.
It's not alone in winning goals, which all men hope to claim.
Success is being big of heart, and clean and broad in mind;
It's being faithful to your friends, and to the stranger, kind.
It's in the children whom you love, and all they learn from you;
Success depends on character, and every thing you do. . .*

CANDY BARS

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by midweek. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

Task Force Readies Crackdown On Crime

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Councillor Doug Gutro and Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley.

Included in the task force's recommendations:

• Establish a constant police presence in the Quincy Center district from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. The task force recommends that a small group of regularly assigned police officers should patrol the area, make themselves known to local business owners and residents and discourage panhandling. Community police officers should be available by cell phone, also.

• Issue a one-year moratorium on granting new licenses for rooming houses;

• Form a Crime Watch program for Quincy Center residents and businesses with the help of the Quincy Neighborhood Association, the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and the Quincy Police Department.

• Establish a "Citizens Police Academy" tailored to the needs of citizens and residents in the downtown area.

• Advocate for state and local funding and policies that reduce homelessness, and review policies that result in the inappropriate discharge of people in need of services into Quincy.

• Establish a "Quincy Center Campaign," a volunteer effort comprised of business owners, residents, city officials and other interested parties that will seek to clean up and beautify Quincy Center.

• Issue a blight ordinance addressing the aesthetics and appearance of downtown businesses.

• Establish a liaison committee consisting of city officials, local banks, Quincy 2000, the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce to encourage property owners to maintain and upgrade their properties and identify and attract quality tenants.

• Identify and enforce existing ordinances which affect, or could affect, the public peace and order.

• Enforce state and local health codes regarding dumpsters and garbage.

In addition, Phelan said the city will work aggressively with MBTA officials to ensure a safer, cleaner area near the Quincy Center MBTA station.

"We will be working with MBTA officials to make sure the area is kept as clean as the rest of the city," said Phelan.

The mayor praised the task force for its work in drafting the report and was confident the recommendations would have a positive impact on the city.

"I want to thank the task force for their hard work and genuine concern for the city, and in particular, the downtown area," said Phelan. "We've already seen a dramatic improvement in the past couple of weeks with the additional police presence in the downtown area. I expect the task force's recommendations to sustain and improve these initial gains."

SQUANTUM GARDENS senior housing will look like this when it is finished. Groundbreaking for the long-awaited on the abandoned Naval Housing site on Quincy Shore Drive is scheduled for June 23. (Rendering By Sheskey Architect)

223 Affordable Housing Units For Seniors

Groundbreaking June 23 At Squantum Gardens

Ground-breaking for the long-awaited Squantum Gardens senior housing project, armed now with state funding, will be held Monday, June 23, at 11 a.m. on the 14-acre site on Quincy Shore Drive.

The project on the site of what was once Naval Housing when there were Naval bases on the South Shore, cleared its final hurdle when the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency granted a commitment for permanent and construction funding.

Mayor William Phelan, shortly after taking office early last year, committed $250,000 from City HOME funds to the construction of 223 new units of affordable housing for seniors in North Quincy.

The Navy conveyed the land in January, 2001, to the Elder Housing Corporation, Inc. (EHC), a private, non-profit organization, for one dollar through the sponsorship of the Department of Housing & Urban Development (HUD).

"This is a remarkable project and we at EHC are thrilled to see the final piece of this project fall into place," said Arthur Wahlberg, chairman of EHC.

"The redevelopment of the Squantum Gardens site will revive what was once a pristine tract of land, complementing our neighbors and will enhance the lives of many, many seniors from Quincy and throughout the surrounding communities."

The project began in 1997

Smoking Ban Proposed

Smoking in workplaces, bars and restaurants may soon be a thing of the past in Quincy.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele Monday night asked the city council to adopt an ordinance that makes all city workplaces smoke-free, including places people go to eat or drink.

No action was taken because the matter was objected to by Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton. The issue should be addressed at the next council meeting on June 16.

Passing a smoking ban in Quincy may become a moot point because the Senate recently passed a similar statewide ban. The House has yet to take up the matter. If Gov. Mitt Romney signs a statewide ban then Quincy would be forced to follow suit.

Mayor William Phelan indicated his support for a city-wide ban on smoking in the workplace.

"I think the state should step up now and pass a statewide ban on smoking," said Phelan. "This would place all cities and towns on a level playing field."

Scheele said he was disappointed that the city council did not address the matter.

"Second-hand smoke is the number one preventative cause of death out there," said Scheele. "We hear a lot about saving lives and preventing deaths - this is one good way to do that, and it doesn't cost a thing."

Various city departments - including police, fire, inspectional services and health - would enforce the ban.

Fire Issues Trigger Stormy Session

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Controversy took center stage Monday night as the city council tackled the hot-button issue of minimum manning standards for the fire department.

William Ariente, president of the Quincy Firefighters Association, and Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley clashed with Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, over the council's attempts to adopt minimum manning standards for the fire department as outlined by the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA).

Hanley said an ordinance has been drafted that compels the city to adopt minimum manning standards as set forth by the NFPA. Under the proposal, approximately 40 firefighters would have to be hired to staff the city's 13 pieces of apparatus with four firefighters, according to Fire Chief Paul O'Connell. He said it would cost the city an additional $1.7 million - or approximately $250,000 per year - to implement the changes.

Ariente and Hanley said the ordinance would allow the city to phase in the changes over a five-year period. If the city was not able to adequately fund the changes it would have the

Attempt To Block Adams Field Restoration

The order of conditions handed down by the Conservation Commission for the renovation of Adams Field has been appealed to the State Department of Environmental Protection.

Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park Department, said he received notice Monday that William Aylward has filed for a superseding order of conditions from the state.

The appeal process could take up to a year, Koch said, but it does not threaten the National Babe Ruth 14-Year-Old World Series which is scheduled to be played on the field Aug. 15-23.

"It may complicate the World Series but it does not jeopardize it," he said. "Only a first class field is in jeopardy. We'll still meet minimum standards."

Koch said it is "not clear what Aylward's problem is" with work on the field, parts of which are in two wetland buffer zones.

Falco: Increased Police Presence Benefitting Downtown Area

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Residents and business owners can expect to see a greater police presence in the downtown area to combat crime, vagrancy and other safety concerns, according to Quincy Police Chief William Falco.

At last week's Crime Watch meeting held at City Hall, Falco said the police department has stepped up its efforts in patrolling the downtown area. A full-time walking "beat" cop has been assigned to the downtown area from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. A community police officer will patrol the surrounding residential areas from 12 noon to 8 p.m, said Falco. And a police officer has been assigned to the City Hall and McIntyre Mall area from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., he said. Other police officers will rotate in and out when the assigned officers are off duty, he said.

The issue of greater police presence in the downtown area is one of the recommendations contained in a newly released report by the Mayor's Quincy Center Task Force. After months of study and debate, the group unveiled its recommendations for tackling crime, vagrancy and aesthetic issues in Quincy Center.

WILLIAM FALCO

In addition to increased police presence, the task force's recommendations include a one-year moratorium on issuing licenses for rooming houses, the establishment of a "Citizens Police Academy," and a proposal to implement a blight ordinance that addresses aesthetics for downtown businesses. In total, the task force made 26 recommendations for improving the downtown area.

Falco said the department's assignment changes – implemented in early May - have had positive results thus far. Approximately 65 arrests have been made in the downtown area over the past four weeks, he said. The arrests stem from such activities as public drinking and disorderly conduct, he said.

"We've made a lot of progress since the last meeting," Falco told the audience. "I have heard from many of the merchants and they have noticed an improvement."

Falco told more than 70 residents and business owners that greater police presence in the downtown area should continue because Mayor William Phelan requested a $1.4 million budget increase in the police department's budget for fiscal 2004. The city council approved the budget request over the weekend.

"We are the only city or town that I know of that has actually increased the police department budget," said Falco.

Residents and business owners will be able to contact the police officers by cell phone, Falco said. The phone numbers will be broadcast on Quincy Access Television as well, he said.

Despite the changes, some residents and business owners continue to report problems, according to Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, who co-sponsored the Crime Watch meeting along with Council President Dan Raymondi and Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley.

"The information we heard from Chief Falco is encouraging," said Gutro. "But I'm still getting telephone calls from residents and merchants indicating troubling behavior," he said.

Ron Affsa, owner of Hairplace One in Quincy Center for 31 years, said conditions in the downtown area have deteriorated. Recently, he found an individual urinating near the dumpster of his establishment. He said it is becoming more common for customers to request an escort back to their cars.

"It seems like things are getting worse, especially since the weather is getting better," he said. "I am very concerned about the upcoming summer season."

Gutro said it is important for the police department to come up with definitive patrol boundaries for the community police officer.

"A community police officer is a welcome addition," said Gutro. "In my judgment, the coverage area should be all the neighborhoods that surround Quincy Center and are considered a part of Quincy Center. There are no physical barriers that separate the downtown area from Quincy neighborhoods. A community police officer must make sure that the activities do not trickle down from the downtown area to the neighborhoods."

Reaction to the task force's recommendations was generally positive.

"I think it's a step in the right direction," said Ward 5 resident Linda Monaco. "But I would like to see police presence in the downtown

Task Force Recommendations

At last week's Crime Watch meeting, the Mayor's Quincy Center Task Force unveiled its recommendations for improving conditions in the downtown area. They include:

- Establish a Citizens Police Academy tailored to the needs of citizens and residents in the Quincy Center area;
- Propose and encourage a one-year moratorium on new licenses for rooming houses;
- Work with the Quincy Center Neighborhood Association, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Quincy Police Department to establish a Crime Watch program for downtown residents and businesses;
- Identify and enforce existing, underutilized ordinances with affect, or could affect, the public peace and order;
- Propose and endorse a blight ordinance;
- Enforce state and local health codes regarding dumpsters and garbage;
- Enforce all sign ordinances;
- Ensure a police presence in the Quincy Center area from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. A small group of officers will patrol the area, make themselves known to local merchants and residents and discourage panhandling. The officers will be available by cell phone.
- Enforce parking ordinances;
- Establish a "Quincy Center Campaign," a coordinated effort of city officials and personnel, business owners and residents, geared towards the clean up and beautification of the downtown area;
- Improve the Hancock parking lot with more attractive walkways, the planting of trees and arbor and wrought iron fencing;
- Use private and public funding to encourage owners of blighted properties to rehabilitate and redevelop responsibly;
- Work with social service agencies in the downtown area to develop and implement a plan for improving the location and effectiveness of services for the homeless;
- Encourage and facilitate residential uses of the downtown area, including single family, apartment and condominiums;
- Finish the cross-town connector;
- Review the existing rules and regulations of the Thomas Crane Public Library in an effort to identify areas relating to public safety and work with the library's Board of Trustees to ensure that the rules are aggressively enforced;
- Ban smoking on all library grounds and take necessary steps to enforce the ban;
- Explore the possibility of utilizing the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, the Quincy District Court community and Father Bill's Place in the cleanup and beautification efforts in the downtown area.

Council Approves $34M For Fire, Police In 2004

The city council's finance committee Saturday signed off on $34 million in public safety spending for fiscal 2004, including funds for the police and fire departments.

The funds are part of Mayor William Phelan's proposed $204.6 million budget that he says will avoid layoffs and keep services at current levels.

Finance Committee Chairman Kevin Coughlin raised concerns about the proposed $14.7 million appropriation for the fire department.

"My concerns exceed this year's budget," said Coughlin "And it appears to me that the fire department is almost like the poor stepchild. I don't understand it – it is quite disturbing."

Coughlin said the mayor's $600,000 appropriation for overtime may not be adequate. He said it is entirely possible that the administration will be seeking supplemental funding to cover overtime costs later this year.

"We will be delayed in bringing in new recruits again, which may cause problems with the overtime budget," Coughlin said. "We are going to rely on overtime again."

But Tom Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said the fire department's budget will see an increase over last year.

"This is the budget submitted by Chief Paul O'Connell. It is an increase over last year's budget and it includes many efficiencies not previously present, not the least of which is a younger fire department whose employees, because of their lack of seniority, are less likely to require overtime," said Largey.

Council President Dan Raymondi was critical of Phelan's budget proposal for the fire department.

"The public has to realize that this is the second year in which the Phelan administration has intentionally and purposefully underfunded the fire department," said Raymondi. "We lost Rescue One this year and it remains to be seen whether we will lose another piece of equipment this year."

Largey disputed Raymondi's claim.

"Rescue One is in service when those firefighters who are scheduled to work show up," said Largey. "With regard to any claim that this administration intentionally underfunds any budget, it is an entirely inflammatory statement. There are certain folks, and not many of them, who are trying to paint an undeniably positive budget and make it negative. I don't want to comment on the motivation for doing so, but I think the public is smart enough to draw their own conclusions."

The full council is expected to approve Phelan's budget on June 16.

Memorial Bench, 'Walk Of Names' Unveiled At Central Fire Station

A long-forgotten stone was unveiled Tuesday as the centerpiece of a memorial park bench in front of Quincy Fire Headquarters at 40 Quincy Ave.

The bench in turn will become the centerpiece of a "Walk of Names" in which a brick or a block of granite can be purchased and engraved in memory of someone who has worked with a fire department.

The cost of a brick will be $50 and a block of granite $300. All funds raised will be donated to the Fire Department Retirement Fund. Checks should be made payable to "QFD Walk of Names."

The stone was originally the inscribed header on the building next door to the headquarters station, which had been the dispatch office when it was built in 1882.

The building was being razed to make way for an oral surgeon's office and the stone was turned over to Fire Superintendent Robert Campbell, who was unsure what to do with it.

The idea of the bench and the walk of names gradually evolved and soon people began to volunteer to help with contributions of supplies such as blocks of granite, brick and shrubs.

And the Memorial Bench was born.

Keegan Suggests City Clean Up T, Move Soup Kitchen

Joseph Keegan, a candidate for City Council from Ward 1, has some suggestions for improving conditions in downtown Quincy that were not included in the recommendations of the Mayor's Task Force.

For one thing, said Keegan, a veteran of nine years on the Quincy and MBTA Police Departments, the Quincy Center T Station is in need of attention.

"Having worked as an MBTA police officer," he said, "I have witnessed on a firsthand basis many of the problems associated with the Quincy Center Station.

"From my experience.

Phelan's Not Superstitious

Well, Bill Phelan obviously isn't superstitious.

Phelan will officially kick off his campaign for a second mayoral term next Friday -- the 13th.

The event is set for 6 to 8 p.m. in the Tirrell Room at the Quincy Elks Lodge, Quarry St.

PHELAN

And it's people priced: $15 per person, $25 per couple.

Phelan took out his nomination papers last week and will move his re-election campaign into high gear that night.

Meanwhile, Dan Raymondi is still keeping 'em guessing. Will he or won't he challenge Phelan? Some observers think he will. Others aren't too sure.

RAYMONDI

Raymondi filled the spacious Bryan VFW Post hall nearly a month ago at his Patriotic Celebration with tickets at $17.76 in keeping with the theme.

Raymondi has been sending letters out thanking people who attended but no hint about running for mayor.

Unless, it's there somewhere in this paragraph:

"In my 30 years of public service I cannot recall another single moment so joyful, heart warming and encouraging. How can I adequately describe the generosity! So many good people working so very hard on my behalf... and so many kind individuals contributing to my campaign committee."

There has been no sign of Raymondi taking out nomination papers for mayor. But, also no sign of him taking papers for Ward 2 city councillor.

SURPRISINGLY, there so far has been no big rush of candidates for the Ward 4 council seat incumbent Bryan Connolly is leaving after one term to pursue a law career.

At this writing only Atty. Jay Davis is running. He's making his official announcement in this week's Sun and has taken out his nomination papers.

But no one else has been near the city Election Department to inquire about papers.

George McDonald, who held that seat back in the 1960s and went on to become a Norfolk County commissioner, has people urging him to run. But he doesn't appear interested in a comeback bid.

Unlike Ward 4, the open Wards 1 and 6 seats generated early interest. At last count, Ward 1 had six contenders and Ward 6 five.

But things should pick up in Ward 4. There's still plenty of time before the July 29th filing deadline.

JOE KEEGAN has accomplished one of the big goals in his life.

KEEGAN

Keegan, a member of the Quincy Police Department, graduated two weeks ago from the New England School of Law, climaxing four years of studying nights.

He has another goal coming up in July: the Massachusetts Bar exam.

And, of course, another one: As a candidate for the Ward 1 city council seat.

WE MENTIONED LAST week that Alicia Gardner, candidate for the Ward 6 council seat, has a campaign website.

LIANG

Well, she's not alone.

Jimmy Liang, running for the council at-large also has one: www.jimmyliang.com.

It contains info about Liang, campaign announcements, voter registration, volunteering, bumper stickers, yard signs. Or to let him know how people feel about an issue.

Sure beats yelling through a bullhorn.

RON IACOBUCCI has come up with a new fundraising approach in his campaign for the school committee.

IACOBUCCI

He's inviting people to become members of the "100 Club." The first 100 who contribute to his campaign will receive an invitation to a special event.

He's not saying what the event is but promises it will be something special.

Suggested contribution: $100. But he says he will be grateful for smaller contributions, too. Whatever the size, send them to 430 Adams St.

Stricter Seat Belt Law Voted Down By Quincy's State Delegation

A measure strengthening the state's seat belt law was stopped recently when House members, including Quincy's state delegation, refused to reconsider the matter after a deadlock.

Last week's 73 to 73 House vote forced a reconsideration of the matter, but 20 legislators opposed it the second time around. Rep. Bruce Ayers favored changing the law while Reps. Ron Mariano and Stephen Tobin voted against it. All three voted against reconsideration of the issue.

The measure would have allowed police officers to pull motorists over for not wearing seat belts. Current law dictates that police can cite a motorist for not buckling up only if the officer stops the vehicle for another reason.

Mariano voted against the change and subsequent reconsideration of the proposal.

"There is a seat belt law on the books," he said. "The law says you have to wear your seat belt. There are 1,300 reasons why a police officer can pull you over, we don't need 1,301. I didn't feel we needed another reason to pull over motorists."

Tobin echoed Mariano's sentiments, saying elevating the law further would not change people's actions.

"You have to be crazy not to wear a seatbelt, but there are some people who are not going to comply no matter what you do," said Tobin. "There isn't always a legislative solution to every problem. Instituting a primary enforcement law is not going to do any more than the current system and it could cause a host of new problems. If there is non-compliance now you will never been able to elevate it."

Ayers could not be reached for comment.

Quincy Group Shows Support For 'Enabling Act'

Jane Reikard, executive secretary of the Quincy Rent Grievance Board and a delegation of Wollaston Manor residents traveled to the State House recently in support of the affordable housing "enabling" act.

The bill would allow any city or town in the Commonwealth to regulate rents and subsidies in large federally assisted apartment complexes, if the federal government deregulates.

Rep. Bruce Ayers, a co-sponsor of the bill, testified before the Joint Committee on Housing and Urban Development.

This sewer extends from the higher elevation western suburbs of Boston to sea level at Nut Island, which is just out of sight to the left. In the center of this view Island Avenue runs up the hill from right to left, and the cottages on the water are on Nut Island Avenue. On the upper right is the eight-sided lookout tower that once provided spectacular views of Boston Harbor and the Blue Hills. Now that the sewerage processing at Nut Island has ended, some of the upgraded summer cottages on Great Hill are selling for prices that will probably reach $1 million in a few years.

Child Tax Credit Facts

The Tax Act of 2003 increased the child tax credits from $600 to $1,000 for the tax years 2003 and 2004. Based on their 2002 tax returns, taxpayers who are qualified to receive child tax credits will receive an advance payment of up to $400 per child this summer.

The child tax credit is generally a non-refundable credit that is limited to the taxpayer's regular federal tax liability. This means the credit is applied towards a taxpayer's total federal income tax due to the point that the taxpayer's total income tax reaches zero any unused credit is not refunded. However, there are situations where a portion of the credit could be refundable for certain taxpayers.

Many families with an annual income in the range of $10,000 to $25,000 have no federal income tax due and under tax laws existing prior to the 2003 Act are not qualified to receive the child tax credit. The fact that the families in this group would not receive the $400 advance payment of the increase in the child tax credit is not an exclusion written into 2003 Tax Act, but rather the application of the tax law existing prior to the 2003 Tax Act.

By the time you read this the 2003 Tax Act may be amended to include an advance rebate to those families not qualified as the law is currently written. Remember that these are advance rebates and will be recovered on the taxpayer's 2003 tax return. My intent here is not to make a political statement but rather to clearly state the fact pattern pertaining to this issue.

Lindbergh's 'Honeymoon Visit'

This Week
1929
74 Years Ago

An army of reporters descended on Quincy in the wake of reports that honeymooning Col. Charles A. Lindberg and his bride, the former Ann Morrow, were about to land from their 38-foot yacht, Mouette.

Harold T. Dennison, proprietor of the Dennison Airport in North Quincy, said that he had received word to have an airplane serviced and ready to take the newlyweds on to the Morrow summer home in Maine.

Everyone was disappointed when the Lindbergs dropped anchor in Provincetown instead.

Other celebrities at the Dennison field for the Memorial Day weekend included three members of the New York Yankees, George Pipgras, Leo Durocher and Robertson, who took the scenic flight over Quincy.

EMBANKMENT IN BAY

The State House of Representatives voted to create a special commission to study the feasibility of improving sanitary conditions in Quincy Bay by constructing an embankment from Squantum to Pemberton Point in Hull.

Rep. Edward J. Sandberg of Quincy told his colleagues of the increasing pollution of the bay since Boston started dumping sewage into the harbor 50 years ago.

"As the metropolitan sewage system has grown conditions have become worse," he said. "The situation now has got to such a stage where relief is imperative."

TENNIS COURTS ACCEPTED

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath accepted the keys to the new tennis courts in Faxon Park from benefactor Henry M. Faxon, who told the assembled junior and senior high school students:

"In the open air and sunshine of the playfield you will have the opportunity of developing a strong bond and alert mind — two factors so essential to happiness and success in life."

MEMORIAL DAY RITES

Lt. Gov. William S. Youngerman, who was with Teddy Roosevelt at San Juan Hill, was the orator of the day at Memorial Day ceremonies in 90-degree heat in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The six surviving members of the Paul U. Revere Post GAR, led by adjutant James H. Webb, rode in the parade in automobiles.

Colossal Cheesecake

I'm always looking for an easy way to make one of my favorite desserts - cheese cake....it should be called cheese pie though...And I finally found one that is the best one yet and the simplest to make especially if you buy the graham cracker crust already made.

Cheesecake Crust

1 1/2 cups graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
6 tablespoons butter or margarine melted

Filling and topping

32 ounces cream cheese softened
1 cup sour cream
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
4 large eggs
grated rind from 1 lemon
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla

Heat oven to 350 degrees

For the crust, mix the crumbs, sugar cloves. Stir in the butter. Press over bottom and halfway up the sides of a 9 inch pan. Refrigerate.

For the filling, beat the cresm cheese for about minute. Add the sugar and cornstarch and beat until smooth. Beat in the eggs one at a time. Beat in rind, juice and vanilla. Pour into crust.

Bake for 55 to 60 minutes. Spread the sour cream over the top and bake for another 15 minutes. Let cool and then refrigerate it until cold.

When serving, strawberries or pineapple slices are a wonderful addition.

Keenan Candidate To Keep Councillor At-Large Seat

Councillor at-large John F. Keenan announces he will seek to retain the seat in this year's city election.

Keenan, 37, who launched his "Keep Keenan Campaign" this week, has served as councillor at-large since February.

He was elected by the council to fill the seat vacated by Tim Cahill when he became state treasurer.

JOHN F. KEENAN

Keenan is chairman of the council's Library Committee and a member of the Finance, Ordinance and Education Committees.

Keenan is the executive director of the Norfolk County Retirement System, a system with approximately $330 million in assets and nearly 9,000 active and retired members. He previously was the financial coordinator for the Norfolk County Advisory Board and before that served as executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets for nearly four years, starting in 1997.

Keenan said that the focus of his efforts as a councillor at-large has been on the city's finances. He introduce a home rule petition relative to the financing of the city's pension obligation, which could, according to Quincy's bond counsel, save the city approximately $1.5 million a year for the next 16 years, he said. The council passed Keenan's proposal and it has been filed with the state legislature.

"We're facing tough times financially," Keenan said. "The proven potential for large savings with this initiative means more books and teachers for our students, more police and fire protection, and it improves our ability to better provide essential city services. It can be a win for Quincy's taxpayers."

Keenan said he recently took the lead on the $10 million Natural Resources Investment Initiative, strongly advocating for renovations to Veteran's Memorial Stadium. Adams Field and parks throughout the city.

"Providing modern, safe recreational fields and facilities for our citizens, young and old alike, is so important, especially in our urban environment," Keenan said.

The initiative also included $5 million for the acquisition of open space. Keenan cited Lot 23 at Marina Bay and the Baywater Road/Parkhurst Salt Marsh as key parcels for acquisition.

Keenan said he has supported the re-zoning of the Houghs Neck Maritime Center land to open space, as well as land at the top of Penn's Hill.

"Open space preservation, through acquisition and re-zonings, is critical," Keenan said. "I am proud to have played a role in this effort, and look forward over the coming months to re-zoning to open space several additional parcels throughout the city."

Keenan attended the Wollaston Elementary School, Central Junior High School and graduated from North Quincy High School in 1982. He studied government at Harvard University and graduated with honors in 1986. He is a 1989 graduate of Suffolk University Law School.

As a graduate of the Quincy Public Schools, Keenan said he is committed to providing essential resources and state of the art facilities at teachers and students.

"I feel the city council has an obligation to work with the School Committee to provide the resources needed to guarantee our students quality education," he said.

Keenan lives at 37 Hobomack Rd., Merrymount, with his wife, Dr. Jeanne Hopkins, and their three children, Christopher, 9, Timothy, 7, and Kevin, 2. He is a member of the Merrymount Association, the Ward 1 Democratic Committee, the Quincy City Club, Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, and the Harvard Club of Quincy. He served as a member of the Board of Directors of Quincy Neighborhood Housing, and served for seven years as a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals. He is also a coach in the Sacred Heart Youth Basketball Program.

With his experience as executive secretary and service on the City Council, Keenan brings a unique background to the Council.

"We continue to face tough times in local government," he said, "but whether you are a young family like mine, or seniors like my parents who call Quincy home in retirement, we all want the same things. We want good schools, clean parks, tree-lined side streets, programs for our children and seniors, vibrant local business communities, police and fire response just seconds away, the efficient delivery of services like trash collection and street and sidewalk repair, and reasonable taxes.

"I'll put my experience to use, work hard every day, and continue to push new ideas. I'll do everything I can to ensure that Quincy remains a great place to live and work."

"I make healthy choices for Helena everyday. Eating in smoke-free restaurants is one of them."

Melissa and Helena Martin

Quincy is surrounded by smoke-free communities. Restaurants and bars in Boston, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton and Hingham protect their employees and patrons from the dangers of secondhand smoke while working or dining out.

Quincy workers and patrons deserve the same protection.

A recent survey of 1000 registered voters in Quincy showed that most people prefer smoke-free workplaces, including restaurants and bars.

Please show your support for smoke-free workplaces in Quincy. For more information call (617) 471-8400 x 176.

Quincy College changed my life.

Judith McDevitt loves boats. She's a U.S. Merchant Marine License Master and a tugboat captain. She also loves painting and is a Fine Arts major at Quincy College. Judith is not your conventional student; like many of Quincy College's students.

Judith lived on Peddocks Island for many years and always dreamed of going back to college. Finally, after buying a house on the main land, she was able to start her journey at Quincy College.

She began studying English, but once the Fine Arts Program was launched she saw an opportunity to hone her love of painting. Her goal is to one day write of her life experiences on the sea and illustrate her stories with her art. Her works published in the College's arts and literary journal prove she's on her way. Judith knows the value of life-long learning.

Quincy College has changed her life and given her the confidence to reach for her dreams.

St. Ann's Youth Program To Hold Car Wash June 7

The St. Ann's Youth Program is sponsoring a car wash Saturday, June 7, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at St. Ann's School.

The fundraiser will help defray the costs for the group's transportation to participate in the Appalachia Trip and Gospel Road service projects this summer.

A can and bottle drive will also take place at the same time.

Brian Buckley Candidate For School Committee

Brian Buckley of Wollaston has officially announced his candidacy for School Committee after filing with the Quincy City Clerk's Office.

Buckley, who is the former Council on Aging Director in Quincy, is currently the coordinator of Intergenerational Programs for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

"The city of Quincy has been a great place for me and my family," Buckley said. "I've lived there my whole life and worked for the city in various capacities since 1967. I hope to utilize my experience as a lifelong resident, as a public servant and as a department head in the city to make the difficult decisions that must be made during tough fiscal times.

"Quincy has a great school system and I look forward to the opportunity of representing our parents and students to maintain that high standard."

Buckley was born in Quincy and attended Furnace Brook School, St. Ann's School and Archbishop Williams High School. He received his college degree from Boston State College. He also attended Boston State College Graduate School, taking secondary education courses from 1975 to 1979.

In 1974, he worked for the Quincy Public Schools as a substitute teacher before being appointed by Mayor Walter Hannon as assistant director of the Quincy Heritage, a Bicentennial Commission.

In 1979 Buckley was appointed by Mayor Arthur Tobin as the youth coordinator for Quincy, after serving in the town of Holbrook as its youth coordinator.

BRIAN BUCKLEY

In 1981 Buckley was appointed the director of Quincy Council on Aging as well as the head of the Youth Commission. He served as head of both departments until 1989 when Mayor Frank McCauley appointed Buckley the assistant director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department.

In 1991 Mayor James Sheets appointed Buckley to the position of Council on Aging director, which he held until 2000 when he was hired by the Quincy School Committee as the first-ever full-time athletic director at North Quincy High School. He held that position until joining the staff at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office in October 2002.

Buckley has also been involved with the Quincy Recreation Department for 35 years working as a youth instructor in the city-wide program. He is the former director of Eagle-Eye Basketball Camp and Nightcourt Basketball School.

He also coached the men's varsity basketball teams at Quincy Junior College, Curry College and Boston College High School. His teams won league championships at all three schools and received Coach of the Year honors four times.

Buckley also coached girls' basketball at Archbishop Williams High School, Emerson College and this past year coached the freshman boys' team at North Quincy as well as assistant coach for the boys' golf team.

Buckley served as the head of Elder Services in Quincy, during which he said the Council on Aging became known as one of the best in the state receiving the highest award, the Rose Award by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs

During his three years at North Quincy High School, Buckley was instrumental in starting the first-ever Quincy-North Quincy girls' hockey team, a girls' golf team, boys' lacrosse and the North Quincy Women's Athletic Hall of Fame, as well as hosting "North Nightly," a weekly show featured on local cable TV highlighting high school students.

Buckley has been involved in a number of community events and organizations over the years as the director of the Broom Classic Charity Golf Tournament, the Dry-Run Road Race and the Home-Run Road Race.

He served on the Germantown Neighborhood Center Development Committee, the Mass. Electric Company Customer Advisory Board, the Houghs Neck Committee Advisory Board and the Quincy Senior Olympics Advisory Board. He also was the vice president of the Mass. Association of Council on Aging and Senior Center Directors.

Currently, Buckley is the vice president of the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association, the former chairman and now member of the Massachusetts Senior Games Executive Board and he is a member of the South Shore Chapter Board of Directors for the American Cancer Society.

"I hope to bring my sense of community involvement, a new enthusiasm and some well-earned experience to the school committee if I am elected," Buckley said. "I just want to play a roll in making the Quincy Public Schools the best it can be for our students."

Jay Davis Candidate For Ward 4 Council Seat

Jay Davis of Shawmut Street, West Quincy, a practicing attorney, announces his candidacy for the Ward 4 city council seat.

He is the first to seek the seat incumbent Bryan Connolly is leaving to pursue a law career.

"During the upcoming months, I look forward to the opportunity to meet with as many voters of Ward 4 as possible so that we can discuss the issues that they want their next city councillor to address," Davis said.

"I believe my work experience as an attorney and businessman, my education and my involvement in the community have prepared me well to serve the needs of the residents of Ward 4."

Davis and his wife, Honor, have two daughters, Madison, 5, and Megan, 2.

A graduate of Syracuse University and Suffolk University Law School, Davis has been practicing law in Quincy for more than seven years. He is currently the managing partner in the law firm of Graeber, Davis & Cantwell, P.C. — a general practice law firm with more than 40 employees that recently expanded its office space in downtown Quincy.

Davis is currently a board member of the non-profit Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore. The agency works with families and individuals on a number of housing initiatives on the South Shore including: low-cost and interest free home improvement loans; affordable housing; and first-time homebuyer workshops. It has been particularly effective in Ward 4 neighborhoods, Davis said.

"Neighborhood Housing Services (formerly Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services) has grown while many agencies have been forced to downsize in this poor economy," Davis said. "I believe I can apply what I have learned in the private sector, from my own business and from Neighborhood Housing, to benefit everyone in Ward 4."

In addition to his involvement with Neighborhood Housing Services, Davis is a member of the Beechwood Knoll PTO, founder of the Community Commitment Fund — an organization that raises scholarship money for seniors in Quincy schools who volunteer in the community, and a volunteer fundraiser for the annual campaign of the South Shore YMCA.

JAY DAVIS

For 10 years, he was a coach for Quincy Youth Baseball. He has also been a volunteer Big Brother, a pro bono (volunteer) lawyer for both DOVE, Inc. and the Volunteer Lawyers Project, and served as a councilor as well as a member of the program board for the American Legion Boys' State program.

Council Approves Petition For Senior 'Safety Zones'

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council Monday night unanimously approved a home rule petition that seeks to establish "Senior Citizen Safety Zones" near publicly or privately owned senior citizen facilities throughout the city.

Introduced by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the proposal would set up safety zones similar to school zones, with changes in speed limits, signalization, signage and re-striping of roadways.

"I think it will be a very positive step for enhancing public safety for our senior citizens," Coughlin said. "This is an offshoot of what we are doing to protect our children. I think our seniors are just as vulnerable, if not more so."

Coughlin said he was prompted to act because he has received numerous complaints about vehicles traveling at high rates of speed near such facilities.

"Seniors have a greater propensity for getting injured in pedestrian-vehicle accidents," he said.

According to the proposal, a safety zone could be established near any publicly or privately owned facility such as senior housing, a hospital, community center, nursing home or assisted living facility.

The proposal would affect such areas as Pagnano Towers, 1000 Southern Artery and housing facilities on Clay St. and School St., Coughlin said. In total, about 17 locations could be designated as safety zones, he said.

Coughlin said the traffic rules would not be uniform for every location. Each site would be addressed individually, he said.

"Clay St., for example, is different from Granite St., regarding the amount of traffic and the speed of traffic," said Coughlin. "The home rule petition gives us a great sense of flexibility, which I think is important, in order to appropriately address each individual location."

Cities such as Holyoke and Malden have established senior citizen safety zones, he said.

The home rule petition moves to the state Legislature for approval. If passed, the proposal would go to Gov. Mitt Romney's desk.

Coughlin said he was confident the Legislature would approve the home rule petition.

The 52nd annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration will be held Saturday evening, June 14.

The event, including the parade, a flag raising ceremony and a fireworks display, is sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Koch Club and the Quincy Partnership..

The parade will step-off on Coddington St. in Quincy Center at 7 p.m. featuring marching bands, drum corps, color guards, floats, clowns, military vehicles and 1,500 flag-waving youngsters.

The Grand Marshals will be Quincy's :"Blue Star" families, those with an immediate family members currently serving in active military duty. The American Legion, through the Veterans' Service Department, distributes a Blue Star flag to all families with a son or daughter in active duty during time of war or conflict. Families are encouraged to fly their flag or display it in their window until their son or daughter returns from active duty.

"We are proud to honor the families of our active servicemen and servicewomen," said Mayor William Phelan. There are close to 70 Quincy families with sons or daughters on active duty right now and we praise the sacrifices of our enlisted residents and their families. Historically, Quincy's veterans have had a storied record of military service and the Grand Marshal designation hopes to recognize those that are continuing our city's great record of service."

The parade will proceed from Coddington St. to Hancock St. and head north before proceeding down Merrymount Parkway, where it will end at Adams Field.

"With the events of the past year, another generation has seen the sacrifices necessary to protect and encourage the freedoms that our flag represents. We honor both the cloth that is the flag itself, but all that our nation's flag has come to represent, freedom, liberty and opportunity for all," said Ed Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership.

The flag-raising ceremony will be conducted directly after the parade's conclusion at Pageant Field. the highlight of the ceremony will be the arising of a giant 40 foot by 60 foot version of Old Glory. Ladder trucks from both the Quincy and Boston fire departments will raise the flag followed by a National Guard Howitzer salute.

The night will culminate with a 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek. Atlas Pyrotechnics, which as performed at Flag Day and First Night Quincy in the past, will be conducting the Flag Day show.

"Each year as the parade grows in size and stature, we still hold onto the true meaning and original intent of the parade, to give Quincy's children and chance to march in a parade and instill in them a sense of how important it is to respect our nation's flag. After 52 years, this parade is still about the children," said Thomas Koch, Chairman of the Flag Day Parade Committee.

The Flag Day Parade began in 1952 when Richard Koch, Sr. led a group of children from the Koch Club through Norfolk Downs, each with their own American flag. Koch conducted a flag-raising ceremony at Cavanaugh Stadium in North Quincy that became the inspiration for today's gala ceremony at the conclusion of the parade each year.

Fixing Toilets Without Flushing Time, Money Down The Drain

(NAPS) — Fixing your toilet doesn't have to mean sending your day — or your money — down the drain.

That's because while ailing toilets have many symptoms, and many causes, there are ways to avoid the aggravation of multiple "maybe this will work" repairs.

Many home improvement stores now carry kits that include all the parts people need to make their toilets flush like new. So instead of replacing one part at a time and hoping for the best, homeowners can update all their tanks' flush components with one try.

For instance, Fluidmaster's Complete Toilet Repair Kit comes with all the parts a tank needs to flush flawlessly for years: A fill valve, tank lever, flush valve with adjustable flapper plus gasket, bolts and screws.

Every toilet needs these parts because they perform three vital tasks. The parts either fill the tank, flush the tank into the bowl or connect the tank to the bowl. Replacing them all at one time can save years of nagging problems and mysterious malfunctions.

The complete repair kit can overhaul most two-piece toilets by fixing common problems like corroded ballcocks, warped, misaligned flappers, deteriorated drain seats and damaged tank levers.

Step-by-step instructions are included and no special tools are needed to install any of the parts. Look for toilet repair kits in the plumbing aisle of hardware or home improvement stores, or ask store personnel for more information.

Surface Preparations, Measuring Key

Tips Help Make Wallpaper Hanging Easy

(NAPS) – Wallpaper can add style and elegance to any home's décor. With new products – and a few tips from the pros – hanging wallpaper has never been easier. Just follow these simple steps:

• Start with surface preparation. Wash the walls with ammonia and allow them to dry thoroughly. Repair cracks and remove loose paint and any high points or old paint drips to prevent bumps under your new wallpaper.

• If you're hanging wallpaper on new drywall, porous paint, spackled or taped areas – or, if you're hanging it over a colored or patterned surface – prime with a prewallcovering primer like SHIELDZ Universal Pre-Wallcovering Primer. This helps wallpaper go on easier, makes it easier to remove at redecorating time and creates a smart surface for hanging any type of wallpaper. Tip from the pros: If there is old wallpaper on the wall, remove it by scoring the wall with the PaperTiger Scoring Tool and applying a wallpaper stripper, such as DIF Liquid Concentrate or Ready-To-Use Gel.

• Carefully measure the wall and cut the wallpaper to length. If you are hanging prepasted wallpaper, use a product such as PREPZ One Step Wallpaper Prep & Adhesive. It eliminates messy water trays, special adhesives, activators and the need for sizing with one easy step. Just brush or roll it on the back of half the length of the wallpaper, fold the wallpaper back to itself (paste to paste) and continue to apply to the balance of the strip. "Book" wallpaper as per the manufacturer's directions.

• You're ready to hang! Align the wallpaper to your plump line, overlapping the ceiling molding by a few inches. Let the other edge hang loose to make positioning easier. After hanging the wallpaper, smooth it out using a plastic smoothing tool, such as the WalWiz 3-In-One Wallpaper Tool. This features a patented edge designed to smooth, seal and set seams and trim wallpaper with just one tool. Trim the overhanging paper. Then you're ready for the next sheet.

Tips On Choosing A Moving Company

(NAPS) — Whether you're moving across town or across the country, the moving company that packs and totes your belongings can play a large role in how pleasant the experience is.

The following tips can help consumers select a moving company that gets the job done right — and at the right price:

• Start your search as early as possible. Ask friends, employers and co-workers for recommendations, and try to book with a company five to eight weeks before the move.

• Tell the company whether you're moving locally (less than 100 miles within a state), intra-state (100-plus miles within a state) or inter-state (between states). Local moves are billed at an hourly rate whereas intra- and inter-state moves are billed according to the size and weight of your shipment.

• Get at least three written estimates. Companies will generally give free estimates, but confirm this before an estimator comes to your house. If you can get an NTE (Not To Exceed Price) estimate, do so. This means that the price cannot go above the estimate; it may be less.

• Make sure you discuss insurance coverage with your mover and understand the level of coverage you decide on.

• If one or more of your items — such as a piano — requires special handling, inquire whether the mover has the experience and equipment to do the job. Find out what they won't move. Some companies choose not to handle high-value items and/or dangerous substances (corrosives, explosives, flammables, etc.).

In addition, many people feel more secure when they stick with well-known, brand-name companies — companies that have been in business for years and have built up a reputation for quality service.

"When you contract with a mover, there are certain things you expect," said Laura Cap, president of Allied Van Lines. "Your belongings should arrive on time, in good condition and hat the agreed-upon price."

Keep Water Out! Keep Mildew Away!

(NAPS) Rain may be good for the flowers but it's bad for basements.

Excessive moisture in basements and foundation walls can cause structural rot and decay and high humidity levels throughout the home. Even small amounts of water or moisture can create perfect conditions for mold and mildew, which can be smelly, ugly and if left unchecked can cause masonry to crumble. That's why it's important to take care of water problems immediately to prevent problems before they occur.

Fortunately, homeowners can take advantage of state-of-the-art waterproofing technologies, such as ZINSSER'S new WATERTITE Mold & Mildew-Proof Waterproofing Paint, to cure basement water problems effectively and economically. The paint was developed to keep water out and mold and mildew away. Here's how to apply it:

• First, clean the surface of dirt, grease and other contaminants. Remove efflorescence (a powdery white deposit found on many concrete surfaces) with muriatic acid or concrete etching solution and remove mold and mildew with a solution of bleach and water. If the basement is already painted, remove as much of the existing paint as possible and remember to patch all holes and cracks, especially those that show signs of active water leaks.

• Liberally apply the first coat of WATERTITE using a thick synthetic brush – or use a large nap roller to apply it to a small section of the masonry. Use the brush to work the coating into the pores of the masonry to produce a continuous pinhole-free film. Apply the second coat with a brush or roller.

• Enjoy your basement. WATERTITE dries quickly to a beautiful, smooth, bright, white finish that can be tinted to off-white and other colors, so homeowners can transform a dingy, leaky basement into a beautiful living space. Perhaps most importantly, the paint is guaranteed to prevent growth of mold and mildew for up to five years. If does more than beautify; it helps keep the surface of basement masonry clean and fresh looking longer.

For more information on WATERTITE and other mildew-proof paints, contact ZINSSER at 732-469-8100. Or visit www.zinsser.com for more helpful home improvement tips.

369 Receive Degrees, Certificates

Quincy College Graduates Largest Ever Class

QUINCY COLLEGE PRESIDENT Sean Barry presents an honorary degree in public service to Dr. Kathleen Morris, principal of the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, in recognition of her 33 years as a public educator in Quincy at Saturday's commencement.

MUSIC SENSATION of the 1970s, Tavares, received honorary degrees in music arts at the Quincy College commencement Saturday. College President Sean Barry presents the degree which celebrated the accomplishments of the singing group of brothers, from left, Ralph Tavares, Feliciano (Butch) Tavares, Antoine (Chubby) Tavares, John Baptiste, Perry (Tiny) Tavares and Arthur (Pooch) Tavares.

It was like no other commencement in Quincy College's 47 year history.

On Saturda, an early summer sun broke through the clouds just as the 369 graduates, became the Colleges largest graduating class in recent history. Led by members of the College's faculty, staff, Board of Governors and President Sean L. Barry, they joined a select group of men and women who are proud to call themselves Quincy College Alumni.

With the blooming flowers that adorned the platform, and colorful balloons that blew in the breeze, the event was a festive celebration of accomplishments: a celebration of music, of education and of Quincy College, the city's very own public institution of higher education.

Leading the procession and carrying the ceremonial college mace was Faith Evans-Tucker, the coordinator of the Surgical Technology program at Quincy College and President Barry's choice for the 2003 Professor of the Year. Honored for her commitment to the institution and the revitalization of her allied health program, Professor Tucker joined honored guests and fellow faculty on the dais in front of the College's historic Coddington Hall.

Spanning the building was an American flag, that along with the Posting of Colors prompted a moment of silence to remember not only deceased members of the college community, but also service men and women who died protecting the freedom of our country, as well as the nearly three dozen nations from which our graduates hail.

Proud graduates who also served as color guard included four Quincy residents: Nicole McCabe, Peter Olivieri, Peter MacDonald and Lois Nutley.

Guests from Albania to Zambia descended on the campus for graduation, as did families from Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Plymouth and countless surrounding towns.

List of Graduates In Last Week's Quincy Sun

Quincy resident Nicole McCabe was awarded a certificate in Saturday's program and is one of the newest surgical technologists to join the staff of the hospital where she did her clinical studies.

When asked her thoughts graduating, McCabe replied "Quincy College changed my life and helped me get on the right track. I am looking forward to beginning a new career where I can make a difference in other peoplesí lives. I'm so proud of what I have been able to accomplish and thrilled that my son, who was here today, can be proud of me now as a college graduate."

In addition to the nearly 300 students in attendance, seven individuals were also granted honorary degrees by President Barry. Associate Degrees Honoris Causa were awarded to both Dr. Kathleen M. Morris and six members of the musical group Tavares.

"Our Commencement is a celebration of our students and our community," Barry said. "In addition to recognizing our students accomplishments, we're proud to present awards to distinguished members of our community who have continually set an example of excellence in their fields; an example that our students can follow as they lead their own path to continued success."

Dr. Morris, the principal of the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, has been an educator for 33 years in which time her enthusiasm for learning and love for her students has never waned.

An inspiration to nearly every student who she has taught, Dr. Morris embodies the characteristics that are essential to an educator. Her strong mind, soft heart, and passion for learning, has allowed her to forge educational frontiers, most recently exemplified in 1999 when while working, she attended school part-time in pursuit of her doctoral degree.

For her persistence, affection, and sincere appreciation for the students and educators of Quincy, she was awarded an honorary degree in public service.

In choosing the second honorary degree, President Barry said it was an obvious decision. The musical sensation who began their careers in the clubs of Southeastern Massachusetts and spread their passion for music all across the globe, six brothers from the group Tavares were given the first honorary degree in music arts among dozens of family and friends.

Individually, as a family, and at their peak as Grammy-winning recording and performing artists, Ralph, Pooch, Butch, Chubby, Tiny, and John held their family as a stronghold during their rise to success. Their hits from the 1970s include "Heaven Must be Missing One Angel" and the ever-popular "More Than a Woman". Reflecting on how thrilled they were to receive the recognition, the brothers, some moved to tears, each read part of an acceptance speech.

Daniel Raymondi, member of the Quincy College Board of Governors and Quincy City Council President, announced a special recognition for Paul A.M. Hunt, one of the founders of the College and a member of Colleges Courses, Inc. who will be stepping down as Chairman.

In his address, Raymondi lauded the dedication and passion of this special group of people and specifically the tireless contributions of Mr. Hunt who will be honored with the dedication of the Barbara and Paul A.M. Hunt Reading Room at the College Library.

The graduates were enthusiastic, the honorees were grateful, and the skies remained clear.

An a cappella performance from Tavares in honor of their mother and an impromptu round of applause from the graduates honoring the College's faculty, staff, and their personal support systems, marked a commencement ceremony unlike most in the College's history.

As the newest assets to the community mingled with the educators and administrators who helped guide them to their new heights at a reception hosted by President Barry in a tent on campus, it was easy to see that the pomp and circumstance was more than well-deserved.

Quincy Point Alcohol License Transfer Approved With Restrictions

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After considerable oppoisiton from a substantial group at City Hall Tuesday, the License Board approved a request from Peter and George Pepdjonovic for the transfer of the common victualer all alcoholic license held by Brigadoons, 520-530 Washington St., but rejected their request for a cabaret and video license.

The Pepdjonovics are proposing to open a restaurant at the former Brigadoons which would seat about 80 persons. It will be renamed the Atlantic.

Police Chief William Falco questioned the seating arrangements for what he considered a discrepancy from the numbers showed on the plan. He asked how many seats were on the restaurant side and on the lounge side. The board requested a new seating plan be presented before an occupancy permit is issued.

Falco and Fire Chief Paul O'Connell questioned why a family restaurant had to be opened until 1 a.m.

However, George Pepdjonovic said he never called it a family restaurant, but an upscale eatery with a bar and restaurant.

At the request of Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi, and Falco, the hours of operation were restricted to a 11 p.m. closing from Sunday through Thursday, and an 12 midnight closing on Fridays and Saturdays.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he thought the shortening of the hours of operation from 1 a.m. to 12 was "extremely restrictive" especially he said for a new business venture. He commended the Pepdjonovics as two people who have "proved themselves" and the fitness of the applicant"

The Pepdjonovics were former owners of the Eight Ball Billiard Parlor and are presently the owners of Mystic Lounge, next door to Brigadoons.

Abutters attending the meeting, all complained of late night noise and litter, persons urinating around the restaurant, and parking along other streets surrounding Washington St.

One neighbor, who is a nurse who works sometimes at nigh,t said other owners have not been successful and said "this will never ever be a success." She called the "same scene with different players."

Atty. Jon Aieta, representing the Pepdjovonics said for 50 years, the location has been a restaurant, and the Pepdjonivics "believe it can work."

Raymondi said the area had been "relegated to a barroom status for the last 30 years.

Raymondi spoke of a neighborhood meeting held over the weekend attended by more than 30 persons showed an "overwhelming concerns."

He said for the past several years, there has been a change of character on Washington St. from residential to retail and called Quincy Point the "gateway to Quincy."

Before the board voted, Raymondi asked that the owners abide by four restrictions: no live entertainment, reduce hours of operation, hire a full time lot attendant, have a police officer on Fridays and Saturdays, and to make sure that all delivery trucks park on Washington Street and not surrounding streets.

Sister Joanne Westwater of St. Joseph's Convent said many times, cars from the restaurant are parked in the convent yard and called it a "serious problem."

Shea called the issue "great owners in a bad location."

According to Pepdjonovic the problems that the abutters were speaking about had to do with the owners of Brigadoon's and were not is responsibility until he takes over the property.

Some problems he said are from Bill Shea's Formica who have a shop in the same area as Brigadoons.

After a loud applause from the neighbors, who seemed pleased that the board rejected the cabaret and video license, Det. Lt. Robert Perchard explained the hours: On Fridays and Saturdays, no liquor will be served after midnight and all patrons are to be off the premises by 12:30. from 12:30 to 1 a.m. anyone who is cleaning the establishment must notify the police if they are to be longer than 1 a.m.

During the week Perchard added, Sunday through Thursday, the last call will be at 10:30 p.m. and 11:10 all patrons are off the premises. Cleaning can be done from 11:30 but police notification if later than 1 a.m.

Fire Issues Trigger Stormy Session

option of delaying it for one year, Hanley said.

The issue set off a heated debate between the city and the firefighters union.

Assistant City Solicitor Jay MacRitchie submitted a memorandum asking the city council to refrain from taking action on the matter because the city is currently engaged in contract negotiations with the union over minimum manning standards.

"If the NFPA 1710 standard is to be adopted for the Quincy Fire Department, it should be as a result of negotiations in response to the union's request," the memo stated. "This office respectfully requests that the City Council not complicate ongoing negotiations and refrain from taking formal action on (the council order)."

The memo prompted an angry response from Ariente, who said it was "another slap in the face to the Quincy Fire Department."

"We are trying to save lives here – we are not trying to politicize the safety of my men or the safety of the citizens of Quincy," said Ariente.

"And if that's what the mayor wants to do then let him come down here and let him say it to the men. And if one of my men goes down out there let him go to the families," he said.

Largey called Ariente's reaction "offensive on many levels" and "it's made more offensive by the attempt of the president of that union to somehow suggest that politics are not in his mind tonight as he stages this outburst."

Ariente said the union has been without a contract since June 30, 2001. But Largey disputed that assertion and said the firefighters union entered into a legal contract with the then-Mayor James Sheets administration in 1999. That contract is scheduled to expire in 2004, he said.

Largey asked the union president whether he had signed a document indicating that the union was under contract through 2004.

"To the best of my recollection I have not signed such a document," Ariente replied.

But Largey strongly disagreed, saying the agreement is public record and gives the city the authority to deal with a number of issues.

Hanley called the timing of MacRitchie's memo "troubling" because the city has had many opportunities to weigh in on the subject.

"This is not a matter of negotiation for a contract. I am infuriated at this opinion being thrown at us," said Hanley.

The discussion over manpower generated support for conducting a detailed study of the fire department and its needs. In April, Councillor John Keenan introduced a resolve asking the mayor to undertake such a study. To date, the council has not taken action on the resolve.

The council placed the NFPA ordinance on the public safety committee's agenda for June 16. The full council is expected to vote on the issue later that evening.

Smoking Ban Proposed

would be hit with substantial fines. A $100 fine would be given for a first offense. A second violation within 24 months of the first would result in a $500 fine. Three or more violations within 24 months of the second would result in a $1000 fine.

Each calendar day represents a separate violation, so the fines could pile up in a hurry.

But Scheele said he is confident a smoking ban would not hurt city businesses.

"If an establishment is well run then they are not going to lose business," he said. "If every city and town in the state has a ban where are people going to go?"

Scheele said he will continue to press the council to act on this issue.

"If nothing happens this year we will propose it again next year, which is not an election year," he said.

the Black's Creek buffer zone and parts of the outfield are in another wetland zone.

He said work on the field will continue in areas outside the buffer zones.

"We're working on improving an existing field," said Koch. "It's not like we're filling in a new wetland.

"But under the law, anyone can ask the state for a superseding order of conditions. All they have to do is put $50 down."

Disaster Preparedness: A Checklist*

Following the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, Americans are eager to make preparedness a part of their daily lives. The following checklist will help you take the necessary steps to protect yourself, your family, and your neighbors in the event of a future terrorist attack or other emergency.

• Make a list of important phone numbers, such as non-emergency numbers for the police and fire department, FBI field office, and local emergency management office, and post it by your telephone. Make sure children known how to dial 911 or "0" in an emergency.

• Develop a communications plan for your family. Chose someone who does not live with you (preferably out-of-town) that you and other family members can contact to check on each other in the event that you are separated during a disaster. Carry the number in your wallet.

• Establish a meeting place for family members if home or neighborhood evacuation is necessary. Pick one place near your home and one outside your neighborhood in case you can't return after a disaster.

• Assemble an emergency preparedness kit that contains the following supplies:

* three-to-five day supply of water (one gallon per person per day)
* food that will not spoil and requires no cooking
* first-aid kit and needed medicines
* emergency tools, such as battery powered radio, cell phone, flashlight
* personal items like toilet paper and plastic garbage bags
* change of clothing and blankets for each person
* portable generator if possible

• Take a basic course in CPR and first-aid.

• Learn how to turn off water, gas, and eletricity at main switches.

• Learn about emergency plans for your children's school or day care center.

• Draw a floor plan of your home and mark two escape routes from each room. Practice your evacuation routes.

• Know your community's evacuation routes.

• Work with yor Neighborhood Watch group or civic association to create a community disaster preparedness plan.

If you would like someone to speak to your group about Disaster Preparedness, call Officer Bob Hanna at (617) 745-5719.

For more detailed information on disaster preparedness, see www.fema.gov or www.redcross.org

A Season Of Firsts For Proud Presidents

SOFTBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School softball team's exit from the Division 1 South Sectional tournament Monday afternoon signaled the end of an era.

A handful of seniors played their final game for the Presidents — five girls who were instrumental in turning the program around and for its success the past couple of seasons.

Quad-captains Diane Gilbody, Shannon Paine, Stacey Andrew and Liz Campbell, along with classmate Jen Gropp, backboned the team to many program firsts.

Consecutive tournament appearances. A tournament victory. A share of a league championship.

"I'm awfully proud of the girls, especially the five seniors," said head coach Mike Sedar. "Without them we don't win the games we won and the program isn't where it is now. They're great girls and I'm going to miss them."

After a thrilling, come-from-behind victory over Silver Lake in the first round, No. 10 Quincy (13-7) seemed out of synch in Monday's quarterfinal, suffering an 8-2 loss at No. 2 King Philip.

"We beat ourselves up," Sedar said. "We didn't play well and we deserved to lose. We didn't bring our A game. There's a big difference between our A game and our B game. The letters are close but we play a lot different."

King Philip (21-2) put the leadoff hitter on in every inning and scored in six of the seven frames. It built a 5-0 lead before Quincy struck in the fourth inning with a pair of runs.

Gilbody — the Atlantic Coast League's leading hitter and an all-star center fielder who will continue her career at Wheaton College — ripped a two-run single that plated freshman Leanna Lam and sophomore Katie Walsh.

A comeback was not in the cards, though. The Presidents were unable to slow down King Philip's top player, Amy Kern, who finished the day a perfect 3 for 3 with five RBI.

"We knew where she was in their lineup," Sedar said. "We were supposed to pitch around her but she ended having a big day. If you can shut down the other team's top player you have a great chance of winning. We were able do that all year."

Junior two-time all-star pitcher Rachel Sorensen didn't have her usual great stuff. "Rachel wasn't on," Sedar said. "She was throwing at half her speed and was all over the place. She kept throwing inside, inside and the ump wouldn't give it to her."

In the first round against No. 7 Silver Lake, the Presidents trailed 3-1 before rallying for a 5-3 victory.

Campbell delivered the clutch hit, smashing a double to center field that scored Paine with the go-ahead run in the sixth inning.

Quincy pounded out 14 hits, with Gilbody (2 for 4, RBI triple) and Andrew (2 for 3, RBI) leading the attack. Sorensen was in top form on the mound, allowing no earned runs in a complete-game performance.

"I honestly believed we could've went to the states and won it this year," Sedar said. "But I'm thrilled with the season. We've progressed every year. Next year we'll see what we can do."

Quincy Volleyball Bows

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School boys' volleyball team completed the hat trick against Weymouth this season: three loses, the latest coming in last Tuesday's Division 1 South Sectional quarterfinal on the road.

The fourth-seeded Wildcats (16-3) knocked off the fifth-seeded Presidents, 3-1, with scores of 30-22, 27-30, 30-26 and 30-18.

Quincy, which ended the season with an 11-6 overall record and a second-place finish in the South Alliance, had dropped a 2-1 decision to Weymouth in the regular season finale and a 2-0 decision in the first meeting May 2.

"They beat us twice earlier in the year, but you can usually throw that away in the tournament and start fresh," said head coach Christine Barrett. "We knew for them to beat us three times in a row would be difficult. We worked on a game plan for a week. Unfortunately, we didn't execute it the way we wanted to. It was a great match."

"It was like David vs. Goliath," she added regarding the height difference. "They averaged about 6-2, 6-4. Our tallest player is 6 fe et. They had an advantage on net."

Senior outside hitter Anthony Sandonato turned in the best game of his career with 14 kills. He was an honorable mention to the league all-star team.

"He played out of his mind," Barrett said. "He really rose to the occasion. He played like a leader and gave his heart and soul out there. It was a great way to end his career."

Junior middle hitter Gideon Endeshaw, a league all-star, paced the Presidents with 12 kills, 15 blocks, 10 digs and three service aces.

Senior outside hitter Erald Sejdini, a league all-star, registered 10 kills and nine digs, while senior middle hitter Kevin Hanlon, an honorable mention to the all-star team, had eight kills and four service aces.

Senior setter Matt Lavery and sophomore setter Stephen Smith, a league all-star, each racked up 18 assists. Senior Phwe Sein Tham had five digs.

"I said to the kids after the game, 'You've exceeded all expectations, including your own.' We lost a lot of kids last year and we got off to such a good start. We played very well."

"These seniors were a special group," she added. "They're the type of kids that you want to coach."

A MATTER OF CONTRAST

Daytime running lights (DRLs) have been a fixture in Canada and Scandinavia for years as a means of preventing crashes by making vehicles more conspicuous. At a sufficient level of intensity, DRLs increase visual contrast between the vehicle and its surroundings. Studies show that DRLs can make vehicles more noticeable and detectable in the central and peripheral fields of view. Research also indicates that DRLs reduced daytime crashes involving more than one vehicle by 7%-18% and reduced an even higher percentage of left-turn crashes. DRLs go on when the ignition is started and are overridden when regular headlights are activated. Typically, DRLs are high-beam headlamps at reduced intensity or low-beam headlamps at full or reduced power.

DRLs are a great idea. If your car doesn't come equipped with them just turn on your low beams. If you are having any problems with any of your car's lights depend on LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment and the best ASE Certified service technicians in the area. We also use the All-Data CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Contest Winner Meets Boston Bruin Hal Gil

Erik Johnson Makes 'Education A Goal'

Erik Johnson, son of Barbara and Phil Johnson of Squantum, a seventh-grader at Catholic Memorial, was the grand prize winner of the WBZ and Boston Bruins "Make Education A Goal" essay contest.

Selected from over 1,200 entries, his essay emphasized how hard work and determination are necessary to achieve the goals you set for yourself.

By following these principles, Johnson achieved a 96 on his French midterm exam and netted a hat trick for his Quincy Bantam hockey team, which eventually went on to play in the state championship.

The grand prize included: four tickets to a Bruins game for next season, a WBZ radio broadcast interview, limited free digital cable/Internet service, a WBZ/Bruins prize pack, and a chauffeur driven limousine ride to school with three classmates and Bruin defenseman Hal Gill.

ERIK JOHNSON of Quincy recently took a limousine ride with Bruin Hal Gill and three Catholic Memorial classmates to school as part of the grand prize for winning the WBZ and Boston Bruins "Make Education A Goal" essay contest.

Accompanying Johnson and Gill were Chris Rooney of Quincy, Bob Flaherty of Waltham and Kyle Thompson of West Roxbury.

Following the ride, Gill addressed Johnson's class, emphasizing how he also had to work hard to achieve his goal of playing for the Boston Bruins. The event concluded with questions and answers along with an autograph session over breakfast.

Quincy Baseball Season Ends In Barnstable

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School baseball team finally got a taste of the state tournament last Thursday afternoon.

Unfortunately, the Presidents only got to sample a bite.

In the preliminary round of the Division 1 South Sectional tournament, No. 24 Quincy traveled to No. 9 Barnstable (14-7) and left the Cape with an 8-3 loss — the most runs it has yielded all season.

"We played very well to be honest with you," said fourth-year head coach Michael Draicchio, who guided the Presidents into the state tournament for the first time since 1994. "We had plenty of opportunities but we didn't get it done in key situations."

Quincy finished the season with a 9-10 record — the nine victories matching the total from the three previous seasons combined.

"We had a great season," Draicchio said. "We received praise throughout the season from the other coaches. We played a lot better than our record."

"You have to give credit to the seniors," he added. "They're all great kids and they've been through it all. They had some tough seasons and they really wanted to get the team back on the map. They definitely did that."

Anchored by strong pitching throughout the season, Quincy believed it had a staff that matched up well against Barnstable. Draicchio's scouting reports said the Red Raiders couldn't hit the fastball and the Presidents had a couple of flamethrowers.

So what happens? It turns out Barnstable could hit the fastball, at least last Thursday, reaching senior starter Anthony Boyle, an Atlantic Coast League all-star and owner of a no-hitter, and sophomore John Folino for eight runs (four earned) on nine hits over five innings.

"That was the most runs scored against us all year," said Draicchio, whose team gave up a previous high of six runs once this year. "When they hit the ball they crushed it."

Barnstable jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning. After Boyle gave up a walk, the defense failed to turn a double play and the Red Raiders followed with three straight hits, two singles and a double.

Quincy scratched out a run in the second without a hit. Junior Dan Cosgrove walked, stole second and third and crossed home plate on a passed ball. In the bottom half, the Red Raiders tacked on two runs with a walk, a triple and a Quincy error. They made it 6-1 with a run in the third fame.

The Presidents cut the deficit to 6-3 with a pair of runs in the fifth inning. Senior Mark Dondero walked and seniors Ryan Conley (2 hits) and Jamie Chiocchio each singled to load the bases. Senior Liam Powers hit a slow roller to the third baseman, who overthrew the catcher allowing Dondero and Conley to score.

In the bottom half Barnstable added two more runs on four hits for an 8-3 lead. Conley relieved Folino and blanked the Red Raiders over the final three innings.

"If we had a few more hits, it would've been a different ball game," Draicchio said. "We had people in scoring position in five out of the nine innings and only scored three runs."

Irish Emigrant Soccer Cup At Varsity Field Friday

It's not Major League Soccer, but it's not too far from it.

The state's top amateurs, including a number of ex-professionals, will strut their stuff in the Irish Emigrant Cup Friday at 6 p.m. at Varsity Field.

There will also be a half-time penalty competition involving kids from Quincy Youth Soccer and trophy presentation which, it is hoped, will feature a personality from the New England Revolution.

Few of those who saw last year's championship game will forget the high level of play between Bohemians and Irish Village.

Irish Village led 2-0 with five minutes remaining in the game before Bohemians scored two late goals to even the score, eventually winning in a penalty shoot-out.

Irish Village of Brighton is the perennial runners-up, having lost three previous finals since the competition's inception in 1997.

Bohemians boast strong ties to Quincy with a number of their players living in the city, including Graham Stafford who has been involved in coaching with Quincy Youth Soccer for the past season.

The current Men's Amateur Champions of Massachusetts, Bohemians were founded in 1987 and have seven state titles to their credit. Irish Village, founded a year earlier, has one state title.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Summer's Almost Here:

Protect Your Skin From Sun's Ultraviolet Rays

Skin cancer, the most common type of cancer in the United States, is a long-term effect of over exposure to the sun's ultraviolet (UV) radiation. UV rays damage skin cells, which can lead to one of three types of skin cancer: basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma and melanoma. Fortunately, skin cancers are preventable and highly curable if found and treated early.

"Protecting your skin from UV rays is a must all year-round, but especially during summer months when the sun spends the most amount of time directly overhead," said Lily Lai, M.D., skin cancer expert at City of Hope Cancer Center in Los Angeles. "That is when UV radiation levels are highest." UV radiation levels are at a maximum when the sun is high and the skies are cloudless, but it is also reflected or scattered by different surfaces. Even with cloud cover, the UV levels can be strong due to scattering, while sand may reflect as much as 15 percent of UV rays and sea foam as much as 25 percent. People taking tropical vacations should also use caution because UV levels are highest near the equator. Feeling pale? Trips to tanning booths expose you to ultraviolet rays just as the sun does. Having a tan, natural or artificial, is a sign that the sun has already damaged your skin. Using a sunless tanner is a good way to get tan without damaging your skin.

"While certain risk factors increase the chance of skin cancer, everyone is at risk of developing it and needs to wear sunscreen, even people with darker skin tones," said Dr. Lai. Some of these risk factors including having fair skin that freckles easily; living in warm climates with high sun exposure and/or high altitudes; occupational exposure, such as working outdoors, overall lifetime exposure to the sun; and have many moles.

Here are some tips to protect your skin from harmful UV rays during the summer months:

Avoid exposure too midday sun, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., when UV rays are most dangerous.

Use sunscreen with a sun protective factor (SPF) of 15 or higher whenever you spend time outdoors. Remember to reapply sunscreen every 1 to 1 1/2 hours.

Wear protective clothing such as hats and long-sleeved shirts that block the sun's rays.

Protect children from the sun's rays as soon as they are born. The damaging effects of UV radiation can begin in childhood.

Be careful when taking certain medications that may cause the skin to burn more easily. Check with your doctor or pharmacist to determine if your medication could be a problem.

Avoid sun lamps and tanning booths.

Skin cancer, especially melanoma, has the potential to be deadly. By taking steps to prevent sun damage and detect symptoms early you can protect yourself. Remember to ask your doctor to evaluate your skin during your yearly physical.

Stay Healthy With A Strong Immune System

(NU) — If you have resolved to improve your health and well-being, strengthening your immune system may be a good place to start.

A strong immune system is the backbone of good health, helping to fight off common viruses like colds and flu, while also helping to defend the body against the threat of more serious illnesses.

According to Dr. Jennifer Nissen, a naturopathic doctor and author of the popular booklet "7 Rules to Maximum Immune Health," there is an endless number of safe, natural immune enhancers available today. However, she said, most need to be "cycled off" so the body does not build up a tolerance and make the enhancer ineffective.

"Our immune system is made up of white blood cells," Nissen said. "The three most vital to a well-functioning immune system are T and B cells and the Natural Killer (NK) cells."

T and B cells mobilize the immune system against an invader by producing cytokines and antibodies while NK cells are the body's first line of defense, Nissen said.

Nissen works for the company that makes MGN3, a natural immune enhancer supplement that she recommends in her booklet to give the immune system a healthy jolt.

MGN3 is a patented formula of rice bran extract hydrolyzed with Shiitake mushroom enzymes. In human clinical trials, MGN3 has consistently and dramatically enhanced several critical components of the immune system. MGN3 is sold in health food stores.

"It is the only natural immune complex proven to triple your body's NK cell activity and has also been shown to increase T and B cell production," Nissen said. "Studies also have shown that MGN3 can be used indefinitely without cycling on and off. People with immune systems weakened over time would find MGN3 very useful."

While it is common knowledge that calcium is essential for the development of strong bones and teeth, recent research points out that consuming sufficient calcium may help prevent the tooth loss that results from gum disease. According to the study, men between ages 20 and 60 who took in the most dietary calcium were only about half as likely as those who consumed the least to have gum (periodontal) disease. Getting enough calcium may play a role by strengthening the bone that serves as an anchor for teeth in the jaw. Researchers found that those who took 800 mg. of calcium were 25% less likely to have gum disease than those taking 500 mg. of the mineral.

If you are having a hard time eating a diet that provides adequate calcium, consider taking a calcium supplement. We'll be sure to review your oral and general health history and give you the options available to you. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Your dental health is our number one priority. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for quality dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Researchers in the above mentioned study found that the same benefits accorded to men who take sufficient amounts of dietary calcium extended to women between ages 20 and 40.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

On Flag Day, June 14, let us fly 'Ole Glory' proudly. Let us take pride in the knowledge that when OUR flag was born it brought into the world a new concept of government; a government OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE, and FOR THE PEOPLE. That concept could be based on no other principle than that of which our flag is the symbol; the PRINCIPLE OF FREEDOM.

Let us prove our loyalty and appreciation by believing, loving and maintaining in our minds and hearts that founding principle of our great and precious symbol. The LAW OF HUMAN FREEDOM.

Let us salute that flag, and pledge allegiance to it; let us never fail to remember that fundamental and universal principal of Freedom, of which our symbol is:

THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER

Falco: Increased Police Presence Benefitting Downtown

area beyond 8 p.m. I have a daughter and I would like to feel she is safe to walk through the downtown area with her friends. Right now I don't feel she is safe."

Councillor John Keenan, who attended the meeting, called the recommendations "a work in progress."

"The recommendations are solid but also a work in progress," he said. "I think the city has an obligation to address issues such as graffiti, cleanup and lighting in public areas. It sets the tone for the city. We want to send a clear message that this is a place to live and work, but not to hang out," said Keenan.

Some residents expressed concern that the MBTA police has not properly patrolled its grounds at Quincy MBTA stations.

Gutro said future crime watch meetings will be devoted to examining and implementing the task force's recommendations. He said he hopes the city council can pass a blight ordinance before the summer recess.

The next Crime Watch meeting has been scheduled for June 26. Gutro said DPW Commissioner Jay Fink and MBTA officials would be invited to the meeting.

Unused Penn's Hill Water Tank Coming Down

The water storage tank off Viden Road on Penn's Hill is being dismantled and will be removed from the site within the next week.

North American Site Developers Inc. has been awarded the contract and will be performing the work.

The Penn's Hill improvement project, which included water main improvements and the construction of a pumping station in 1999, made this tank unnecessary. The tank has not been in service for over two years.

Originally there were two storage tanks on the site. The other tank was dismantled in 1997. Paint chips from the former demolition migrated from the site on to abutting private properties and residential homes. This triggered neighborhood complaints that resulted in the intervention of the Health Department and clean-up of the site to remove lead contaminated soils.

Neighbors of the site still recall the frustration with the city that the project was undertaken and commenced without properly communicating the potential environmental impacts due to the lead-contaminated soil. Contaminated soil was removed from the site in 1997 and the site was reanalyzed for lead last fall and meets regulatory standards. The proposed construction will not degrade the "clean" status.

"The mission of this project is to remove the tank with minimal impacts to private property and keep the residents informed every step of the way," Mayor William Phelan said Tuesday.

He cited a meeting this past fall to make residents aware of the proposed construction and another meeting earlier in May to discuss the project construction with the engineers and the contractor.

"I am very confident that the residents are satisfied with the level of effort that we have put in to communication and will be relieved once this tank is gone. Our hope is to return this site to a place where the neighbors can commune," he said.

Kim DiBona, whose backyard contains a swimming pool that is situated only a couple of yards from the legs of the tank, said: "I've been very pleased with the city this time around. Commissioner Jay Fink has been great. Communication is very good, checking with us to make sure everything is OK. When you have something so big beside you, it can be scary. This project can't even compare with the last time."

Keegan Suggests City Clean Up T, Move Soup Kitchen

youths loitering and other quality of life type crimes at this location are among the worst at any station in the whole T system."

Keegan suggested that the two police departments work cooperatively to address the situation and that the next meeting of the task force should include the MBTA police chief.

"The two departments need to work in conjunction, not just the command staffs, but the patrolmen and detectives as well," he said. "We need to make the area an unfriendly place for people who have an unlawful intent or want to use the station as a hangout."

Keegan also advocated the relocation of the soup kitchen currently housed in the Church of the Presidents.

"We are trying to promote tourism in Quincy, especially around the square but at the same time we are attracting the homeless to the same area during the midday," he said. "It seems to me the two ideas are in direct conflict."

"EHC wishes to express it appreciation to HUD, Senators Kennedy and Kerry, Congressman Delahunt, Mayor Phelan, Senator Morrissey, Representative Ayers and the City Council for their steadfast commitment to the project," said Wahlberg.

From Marriage Licenses To Building Permits

Fee Hikes Planned In Two More Departments

The City Council's Ordinance Committee Tuesday night was expected to address proposed fee increases in the City Clerk's Office and Inspectional Services Department, including the costs associated with obtaining a birth certificate or marriage license.

As a result, it may cost a bit more to have a child, get married, or die.

Under a proposal submitted by Mayor William Phelan, the cost of obtaining a birth certificate, marriage license or death certificate would jump from $5 to $7 each. All items are obtained through the City Clerk's office.

In addition, the Clerk's office has proposed a $1,200 fee for obtaining a Planned Unit Development application.

Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley, chairman of the ordinance committee, said the fee increases in the Clerk's office most likely would be approved, but the fees proposed in the Inspectional Services office would be more controversial.

Board Backs Mayor's Proposal

Atlantic Center Moving To Renovated Library Garage

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The Atlantic Neighborhood Center should have a new home by the end of the year.

On Monday, the Thomas Crane Public Library's Board of Trustees endorsed Mayor William Phelan's proposal that calls for moving the Center to the garage of the North Quincy Branch of the library.

By a 4-0 vote, trustees signed off on a plan to move the Atlantic Neighborhood Center from the privately owned building at 11 Hayward St., to a renovated garage that previously housed the library's bookmobile.

The bookmobile will be stationed at the DPW yard and the garage renovated to fit the Center's needs. Funds for the renovations will come from the sale of a city-owned building that once housed a girls' school at 595 Hancock St.

Thomas Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said he is hopeful that the Hancock St. building can be sold during the summer. Renovations to the garage would begin soon after the sale of the Hancock St. building, he said. The entire move should be completed by the end of the year, he said.

In addition, Largey said renovations to the garage would not affect services at the North Quincy branch library.

School Committee member Linda Stice and Constituent Services Director Tom Fabrizio conducted a site assessment and cost study for relocating the Center. They looked at 19 sites throughout the city and concluded that the library branch was the most feasible and cost effective.

The estimated costs associated with renovating the garage total approximately

For Women Only Audience

Coming Attraction? Exotic Male Dancers

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Don't look now, but exotic male dancers may be coming to Quincy to perform for women only.

The License Board Tuesday continued a hearing on the request of Jim Pansullo, owner with Kevin Ryan of Club 58 (the former Shooters).

Pansullo requested a floor show license for one night for a group similar to "The Chippendales" called "Men in Motion" consisting of five exotic dancers who will perform on stage for women only.

The show would be held from 8 p.m. to 9:45 p.m. July 10, and then be open to the public at 10 p.m.

Although Pansullo stressed "no nudity" and no "G strings", board members from Fire Chief Paul O'Connell to Police Chief William Falco both questioned the "women only" and said a license could not be issued that excluded one gender.

However, a license could be issued for a floor show and then Pansullo could designate who could attend.

Walter White, director of inspectional services said he felt as though the show would start a precedent and "open a Pandora's Box."

Det. Lt. Robert Perchard, who is liquor agent for the board said he had "mixed feelings and concerns about a female and male mix." He suggested that two women from the legal department view the show before July 10. He said he also had con-

Firefighters throughout Massachusetts will take part in a four-day convention at the Boston Marriott Quincy beginning Monday, June 16.

Special Council Meeting Called For Tonight

Mayor Attempts To Block Appeal On Adams Field

At Mayor William Phelan's request, Council President Dan Raymondi has called a special city council meeting tonight (Thursday) at 6 p.m. in the council chambers to debate a home rule petition that would prevent William Aylward from appealing the order of conditions handed down by the Conservation Commission.

Last week, Aylward appealed the order of conditions decided by the Conservation Commission for the renovation of Adams Field.

Tom Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, confirmed the administration's intention to introduce a home rule petition if the city and Alyward cannot "work out our differences."

"In the event we are unable to work out our differences with Mr. Aylward, it is the administration's intent to move forward with the home rule petition and ask the Legislature and the governor to make certain concessions with regard to the Adams Field site that would allow for the refurbishing of the site prior to the Babe Ruth world Series in mid August," Largey told the Quincy Sun.

"Good faith negotiations are always the best course of action, but the public benefit implications of this project are significant enough that we feel that aggressive action is necessary if those negotiations fail," he said.

Largey called Aylward's concerns "genuine but unfounded."

"I don't think the ultimate result of his appeal of this case will be successful, from his standpoint," said Largey. "But we remain open to his concerns in a manner that stops short with going forward with the world series."

According to Raymondi, the home rule petition would seek to take away Aylward's right to appeal in this matter.

"It is my understanding that the appeal is designed to strip him (Aylward) or any individual from taking an appeal relative to the matter," said Raymondi. "I support the Babe Ruth World Series, but its unfortunate that the mayor's inaction over the past year has caused this problem. None of the renovations to Adams Field was ever in question. Why the mayor refused to take action last summer, who knows. The delay at the mayor's office has led the city to this problem."

Raymondi said he was concerned about whether the home rule petition would take away the legitimate rights of citizens.

"We will have the discussion and debate and see where it goes," said Raymondi.

Penn's Hill Water Tank Comes Down

BEFORE – The Penn's Hill water storage tank near Viden Rd., as it stood before being dismantled last week. The tank had become unnecessary due to the Penn's Hill improvement project, which called for water main upgrades and the construction of a pumping station.

AFTER – The water tank is partially dismantled by North American Site Developers Inc. Originally, there were two storage tanks on the site. The other tank was dismantled in 1997. Paint chips from the former demolition impacted abutting private properties and residential homes. Mayor William Phelan said the mission of this project is "to remove the tank with minimal impacts to private property and keep the residents informed every step of the way."

Park User Fees Proposed To Help Fund Upkeep

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Councillor Frank McCauley want to establish user fees for the city's parks to help pay for the continued maintenance of those facilities.

At last week's city council meeting, Gutro and McCauley introduced an order seeking to institute user fees for parties that wish to use the city's parks or recreation facilities, such as Veterans' Memorial Stadium and Pageant Field. Only private parties and organizations would be charged a fee, according to Gutro.

Gutro said the park user fee would set up a dedicated revenue stream to be used for the continued maintenance of the city's parks and fields.

Revenue from park user fees would augment the city's hotel/motel tax, which will be used for Mayor William Phelan's $10 million open space plan.

"It is just another tool we can use to alleviate some of our reliance on the hotel/motel tax," said Gutro. "Having both items will ensure that we will have open space acquisition and well-maintained parks."

The Worcester Tornado

(And Eddie's Diner)

The Worcester Tornado and old Eddie's Diner in Quincy had absolutely nothing in common.

But, you might say, there was a link for one reporter and two Quincy police officers.

This week's 50th anniversary of that awesome twister that took 94 lives, injured nearly 1,300 and caused an estimated $53 million damage as it tore through Worcester and Central Massachusetts on an 80-minute rampage, brought me back to that night of terrible devastation June 9, 1953.

The fury has never been matched in New England since or before.

It was one of New England's biggest ever news stories, and one, that for the three of us ended the following morning with an unexpected humorous footnote in Eddie's Diner.

I was the reporter, Arthur Duffy and Dante Pettinelli the police officers.

Debris fell here in Quincy and the South Shore, carried airborne all the way from Worcester, alerting us to the tornado.

I was working at the then Quincy Ledger and got a call at home to go to Worcester to cover the story — if I could get there.

I checked the Quincy police department to see what they knew and learned they were going to send a cruiser to Worcester to help police out there. Figuring I might have trouble getting through sure-to-be roadblocks in my own car, I hitched a ride in the cruiser with Pettinelli and Duffy.

We got off to a bad start.

We had hardly left the police station parking lot when a tire went flat.

"Don't worry, I'll take care of that," said Pettinelli. He hopped out and it seemed only a minute before he had the spare on. And off we sped.

As we approached Worcester, there were roadblocks, but being in a police cruiser we were waved right through.

We arrived at the Great Brook Valley and Curtis Apartments veterans housing project about four miles north of Worcester center that had caught the full force of the tornado's wrath.

We could hardly believe what we saw.

The area, with brick apartment buildings occupied by more than 500 families with hundreds of children, looked like it had been bombed.

Duffy and Pettinelli quickly began helping to police the area and I started gathering information for my story. There was a lot to gather.

The clocks in the apartments were stopped at 5:20 p.m., pinpointing the time the tornado roared through that area on a zig-zag course.

It was a wild scene.

Blankets and sheets were ripped off beds by the force in some apartments and dangled from shattered windows. Yet, in other apartments, dishes and half-eaten suppers were left undisturbed on kitchen tables.

Roofs on some of the buildings were sheared off, copper flashing rolled into twisted balls on others. A kitchen sink hung from branches of a tree.

A row of single-family homes on a slope were mowed down — boards and beams driven across the street and pounded into piles of splinters.

All that was left of one house was the bathtub. A national guardsman said a man and woman were blown out of the house and carried 75 yards down the street to their deaths.

There was also a report of a baby being blown out of its mother's arms.

Cars and a bus, too, were picked up by the tornado's force, flipped over and slammed down on their roofs. A two-by-four beam was speared through a refrigerator.

A witness and survivor said the tornado, with winds over 300 miles per hour, made the famed Hurricane of 1938 look like "a summer breeze."

Pettinelli, Duffy and I spent the night there and headed back to Quincy in the early morning. We hadn't eaten all night and were hungry.

"Let's get some breakfast," one of them said.

Cops always know where the good food is. So we pulled into Eddie's Diner, a landmark eatery at Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery, now the site of the South Shore Savings Bank.

"I'll buy," I told them, grateful for them getting me to and back from Worcester in the cruiser. And thinking they might go for a blueberry muffin and a cup of coffee or something like that.

Duffy and Pettinelli were longtime partners and good cops. With good appetites and a good sense of humor.

And, as I remember, one of them said: "Well, if you're buying, I'll have juice, coffee, a nice big steak and a large order of eggs."

"Sounds good to me," said the other.

"What the hell," I told myself. "I might as well have the same."

And we enjoyed every bit of it.

But then the check came, and the moment of truth. I didn't have enough money. Reporters didn't make much money back then. Still don't, today's reporters will quickly tell you.

I promised the waitress I would be back. Duffy and Pettinelli vouched for my honesty — after they stopped laughing.

Off to the Ledger — then on Temple St. — I went and filled out an expense slip. I handed it to either John Herbert, the editor, or Don Wilder, the city editor. Which ever one it was, he laughed, too. But he okayed the amount, I don't remember how much. He said that the tornado story was at least a three-steak story.

I drove back to Eddie's and settled up.

Pettinelli and Duffy never let me forget that breakfast.

Eddie's Diner is no longer here. It was closed in 1993 after a fire. And in 1998 was carried off to New Bedford on a flatbed trailer where plans were to have it restored by American Diner Museum volunteers.

I've lost track of it since. Maybe it has a new life somewhere.

Whenever I think of the Worcester Tornado I always think of Eddie's Diner.

I'd like to see it back here. But I would never want to ever see a tornado like that one in Worcester touch down here in Quincy.

• Each additional $1,000 of estimated building costs, from $12 to $20.

• Change of occupancy, from $60 to $75.

• Zoning board of appeals petition for 1-2 family residential dwellings, from $100 to $200. All others would jump from $200 to $400.

• Zoning ordinances, from $15 to $20.

• Builder's licenses, from $100 to $200.

• Reinspection fee, from $15 to $25.

• License board inspections, from $25 to $50 per application.

"Fees are supposed to cover the costs of the services provided," said Hanley. "If a fee creates revenue that exceeds the service then it becomes a tax. I want to make sure that the administration and department heads can explain the reasoning behind these fee increases."

Hanley said it is important for Quincy to have fee schedules that are comparable with other cities and towns of the same size.

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce opposes the fee increases in the Inspectional Services Department, according to Ron Cogliano, manager of Community Development for the Chamber.

"The South Shore chamber is against any increase in the building permit fees," he said. "We are not talking about small potatoes here. Any increase in the building permit fee is a tax and not a fee. It shouldn't be used as a revenue stream for the city or to pay for other expenses within the department. This would affect homeowners, as well as small and large business owners."

White said the fee increases in the department could generate an additional $300,000 to $400,000 annually.

Last year, Phelan asked department heads to investigate ways to increase fees as a means of bringing in additional revenue to the city's coffers.

White and City Clerk Joseph Shea submitted their proposals last Spring, but the council has not acted on them until now.

Last month, the city council approved the administration's request to increase certain fees in the health department.

New City Hall Proposed At Adams Academy

This Week
1945
58 Years Ago

The Veterans Memorial Committee, ignoring the recommendations of the Planning Board, selected the Adams Academy grounds at Hancock and Adams Sts., as the best available site for a proposed new City Hall.

The Committee, headed by Rep. William W. Jenness, also suggested that adjoining land north of the site, valued at $45,000, be taken all the way to the edge of the South Shore Buick property.

The Planning Board had already held public hearings on proposals to locate the new City Hall in the so-called "Apex" at Hancock and Washington Sts., site of the Bargain Center, and the Hardwick Estate.

Jenness noted that those sites could cost the Quincy taxpayers as much as $325,000 in land damages, or $2.50 on the tax rate, a sum that would be unfair to newly returned veteran homeowners.

QUINCY BAY CLEANUP

Mayor Charles A. Ross, testifying before the House Committee on Ways and Means, argued that construction of a sewage treatment plant at Nut Island "will clean up the terrible mess on the shores of Quincy Bay."

The Committee was hearing an $18 million bill directed at cleaning up pollution in Boston Harbor and adjacent waters.

Howard E. Porter of the Health Department condemned "the wholesale dumping of raw sewage into this beautiful recreational area."

"On hot days," he said, "we get hundreds of calls and our answer is the same: 'Don't go in if the water is dirty. If it looks clean and you go in, take a shower immediately when you get home.'"

Marine Maj. Everett P. Pope, son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence E. Pope of 155 Billings Rd., North Quincy, became the first man to win the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism in the Pacific war.

"I would rather have this medal than be President of the United States," said President Harry S. Truman in making the presentation to Maj. Pope on the steps of the White House.

LORALEY GRIFFIN of Braintree (left) and Joan Ross of Quincy are co-winners of the annual parade theme contest held by the Quincy Festival Committee. Their winning theme, "Let There Be Peace On Earth," will be the focus of floats and marching entries for the 51st Quincy Christmas Parade Nov. 30. Both will receive appreciation gifts and ride in the parade as guests of honor. (Robert Noble photo)

Two Women Submit Identical Theme For Christmas Parade

There are two winners in this year's Christmas parade theme contest, both of whom submitted identical entries.

Mrs. Joan Ross of Quincy and Mrs. Loraley Griffin of Braintree both submitted "Let There Be Peace On Earth" as the theme for this year's 51st annual parade to be held Nov. 30.

George White, Festival Committee general chairman, said the theme is "appropriate because of the world situation today with U.S. military men and women deployed in the war against terrorism in the Middle East."

There have been two other occasions, since the public was invited to submit suggestions for a parade theme in 1982, that identical entries have been chosen by the festival committee. In 1989, the theme "A Storybook Christmas" was suggested by Barbara Hooper of Quincy and Robert Castaldo of Braintree. In 1993, Linda Sacetti of Weymouth and Sheila McKenna each suggested "What Christmas Means to Me." The 1993 parade was cancelled after two postponements due to torrential rains. Awards, however, were still presented to floats and parade theme contest winners at a special presentation.

Selecting a parade theme at this time of the year allows ample time for float builders to plan and design their floats based on the winning theme, White said.

Both Ross and Griffin said the theme "just popped into their heads." They both felt the theme had great potential, never dreaming they would be selected as the winning entries.

Ross and Griffin have fond memories of Quincy's Christmas parade. As a student attending St. John's School, Ross recalls the late Father Thomas Tierney organizing the first parade in 1952, comprised of several units including many students in the school.

In later years, her sister participated as Mrs. Santa Claus in one parade. For many years the children and grandchildren of Mrs. Ross have been associated with the parade as costume characters. Generations of Quincy grade school children and teenagers have returned annually to don the costumes.

The popular costume characters mingle with the children and pass out free candy canes. They also participate in the turning on of the holiday season lights and decorations, and the arrival of Santa Claus and elves by parachute at Faxon Field.

Former Quincy Girl Scouts Hold 65th Annual Meeting

Six former Quincy girl scouts recently renewed friendships and reminisced about the good old days during the group's 65th annual meeting.

For the past 65 years, former Quincy girl scouts from Troop 8 have come together during the annual event. The troop was formed in the 1930s by Marie Spang of Milton. Meetings were conducted at the former Cranch School near Quincy Center.

Troop 8 took part in many activities, including camping at Cedar Hill in Waltham, hiking in the Blue Hills in Quincy and Pond Meadow in Braintree.

Through the years, the girl scouts participated in many other activities, such as trips to Harvard Museum, cookie sales to benefit the Quincy Council on Scouting and marching in the Quincy parades.

The women remembered Bertha Ford, a former leader of the troop. Her sister, Evelyn, was a former assistant leader of the troop.

At one time the aunt of Lee Remick, Quincy's famous actress, taught the girls for the merit badge for drama.

When the girls outgrew the scouts they formed Troop 3, the first Senior Girl Scouts troop in Quincy.

Baby showers, children and grandchildren entered the picture, but the women managed to meet once a year.

Among members of Troop 8 for 50 years or more are: Barbara Barton, Melba Conrad, Roverta Cooney, Rita Braun, Dorothy Ekblom, Ruth Hedman, Jacquline Kennedy, Claire Morris, Doris Raleigh, Emma Rand, Margaret Rand, Virginia Skogland, Annie Taylor, Barbara Wallace, Alicia Pyle, Catherine Roher, Mary Griffin, Mary Sullivan, Barbara Pierson, Ruth Higgins, Jean, Bergen, Dorothy Faunce, Phyllis Papani, Dorothy Papani, Margaret Taylor, Geraldine Pyle, Eleanor D. Nancy McArdle Memorial Foundation Raises Money For Allerton St. Playground

After two and a half years, the Nancy McArdle Memorial Foundation has raised enough money to start the rehabilitation of the Allerton Street playground.

The foundation was founded in December of 2000 when Nancy lost her battle with cancer.

"One of the things that we know Mrs. McArdle would be especially proud of is the way funds are being raised for the foundation; family and friends coming together for a day of fun," said Sean McArdle, her son and co-founder and trustee. "Nobody ever said that charity had to be boring."

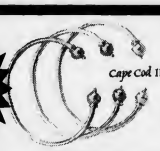
To that end, the foundation will hold its annual golf tournament tomorrow (Friday) at Pine Oaks Country Club in Easton.

The foundation has been established to achieve two primary goals: the rehabilitation of her neighborhood playground and to help enrich the community through academic scholarships.

"Thanks to the generosity of family and friends, we are happy to report that the playground equipment has been installed and the rehabilitation work is in progress," McArdle said. "We are planning for the dedication, which we know will be the start of many fun days at the park for lots of families."

The playground will be dedicated in Mrs. McArdle's name in the next few weeks. More details will be provided as they are finalized.

With the park rehabilitation well underway, the foundation is focusing its attention on the scholarship fund. Starting in the spring of 2004, the foundation will be awarding two scholarships annually to a boy and girl from Quincy High School.



"My mother was a firm believer in higher education," McArdle said. "Our hope is to help young people realize their dreams of attending college and achieving great things."

"We have come a long way in the last two and a half years since the foundation's inception," he added. "Our family is very appreciative of everyone who has contributed to this worthy cause. We could not have accomplished our goals without the generosity of the people who attended fund-raising dances and golf tournaments."

SEAN McARDLE, co-founder and trustee of the Nancy McArdle Memorial Foundation, stands in front of new equipment installed at Allerton Street playground. After two and a half years the foundation has raised enough money to start the rehabilitation of the playground in memory of his mother.

However, Pansullo assured the board that the men would be wearing boxer briefs.

Chairman Joseph Shea said because of a good relationship between the board the and Pansullo, and his "excellent record" said the board would vote on the issue June 24.

Pansullo said he has been in business for 14 years, and doesn't want to do anything other than "one of taste."

Shea recalled a similar show held at a Quincy yacht club two years ago which he called "successful and uneventful". He noted however, that they failed to get a license at the time

O'Connell asked if a video was available to be shown to the board in which Pansullo said he would inquire and report to the board. He asked how many would be viewing the show. P{Pansullo said the club holds 525 patrons, and he expected about 250 persons to attend

It was suggested that if the board gives an affirmative vote, that two female officers should be hired for police detail and then after 10 p.m. two male officers.

Atlantic Center Moving To Library Garage

$177,500, according to the planning department.

Sandra McCauley, chairperson of the Library Board of Trustees, expressed concern about whether the garage would have adequate space to conduct the Center's activities. But Stice and Largey said the Center's new home would be more than adequate. After renovations are completed the garage would contain approximately 945 square feet, Stice said.

Largey stressed that trustees would continue to manage and control the garage at the branch library.

At the board meeting, Jimmy Liang, a candidate for councillor at-large, urged the city and trustees to reconsider plans to move the Atlantic Neighborhood Center to the garage. Instead, he said, the city should expand the library to accommodate a cultural center.

But Liang praised Phelan for being "proactive" and moving the Center to the North Quincy area.

"I think the mayor's plan is wonderful," Liang told the trustees.

In a letter addressed to the mayor last week, Liang said expanding the North Quincy Library would better suit the needs of residents, and in particular, the asian community.

"The North Quincy Library is in the heart of the city's largest asian neighborhood," Liang wrote. "If public money is to be spent renovating a city building to better serve the North Quincy community, then this should be an opportunity to bring together a variety of community groups to create a plan for a community center which will serve the needs of the entire North Quincy community, including the many thousand Asians."

The trustees agreed that Liang's proposal would be too costly in light of the city's tight fiscal situation.

Library Director Ann McLaughlin called Liang's proposal "interesting."

"We are anxious to find ways to better serve the asian population," she said. "I think it would be good for the city to sit down with asian community groups and look at ways to combine city services and community entities."

Largey said the mayor is making a concerted effort to reach out to the asian community.

"We intend to aggressively seek out ways of embracing this growing segment of the community and ensure that their needs are attended to appropriately," he said.

Final approval of the move is contingent upon both sides signing off on a memorandum of understanding within 30 days.

Three Unions Endorse McNamee For Ward 6 Councillor

Brian McNamee, candidate for Ward 6 city councillor, announces three unions have endorsed his candidacy.

The endorsements came from the Boston Allied Printing Trades Council, the Graphic Communications International Union (GCIU) Local 600-48M, and the Roofers and Waterproofers Local Union No. 33.

The endorsements cited McNamee's dedication to the citizens of Quincy and his commitment to the concerns of organized labor as well as the issues affecting working men and women.

"I am very appreciative of this early support from Organized Labor," McNamee said. "The responsibility assumed by a candidate who receives these endorsements is great.

"I pledge to the respective memberships to do my utmost to support and promote the ideals of Organized Labor --hopefully my efforts will prove me worthy of these endorsements," he said.

Quincy College changed my life.

If it weren't for Quincy College, William Lydon is sure he would have never have gone to college.

A resident of Quincy and graduate of Quincy High School, he was always challenged by school. After graduation he entered the work force, but was told time and time again he didn't have the credentials to move up the corporate ladder. So challenged once again, he was welcomed to Quincy College and earned an Associates Degree in 1999.

William credits the professors at Quincy College who helped him succeed. To him, they were more than instructors, they were friends who cared about him in and out of the classroom. They encouraged him, supported him and never gave up on him. They taught him never to give up on himself.

This past month, William earned his second degree from Quincy College and is currently taking summer courses to prepare for his journey to earn a bachelor's degree this Fall. Quincy College not only gave him the confidence to succeed in the classroom, it gave him the confidence to succeed in his life.

Parade Starts 7 PM Saturday

Giant Flag-Raising To Highlight Flag Day

A giant 40-foot by 60-foot version of Old Glory will be raised at Pageant Field by fire trucks from the Quincy and Boston Fire Departments this weekend.

The ceremony will be a highlight of the 52nd annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration Saturday evening, June 14, sponsored by the Koch Club and the Quincy Partnership.

Grand Marshals of the parade will be Quincy's "Blue Star" families, those with an immediate family member currently serving on active military duty.

The American Legion, through the city's Veterans Services Department, distributes a Blue Star flag to all families with a son or daughter on active duty during time of war or conflict.

The families are encouraged to fly their flags or display it in their windows until their son or daughter returns from active duty.

The traditional Flag Day parade will step off on Coddington Street at 7 p.m., complete with marching bands, drum corps, color guards, floats, clowns, military vehicles and 1,500 flag-waving youngsters.

It will proceed from Coddington Street to Hancock Street and head north before proceeding down Merrymount Parkway, ending at Adams Field.

The flag-raising ceremony will then take place on Pageant Field, followed by a National Guard Howitzer salute and a 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek conducted by Atlas Pyrotechnics, which has performed on Flag Day and First Night Quincy in the past.

Quincy's Flag Day Parade originated in 1952 when Richard Koch Sr. led a group of kids from the Koch Club through Norfolk Downs with each youngster waving his or her American flag.

Koch conducted a flag-raising ceremony at Cavanaugh Field in North Quincy which became the inspiration for the gala ceremony that takes place at the conclusion of the parade each year.

For more information on the Flag Day Parade, call 617-376-1254.

Robert Foley To Receive Koch Youth Service Award

Robert Foley of Merrymount, a coach in Quincy Youth Baseball for the past 45 years, has been named to receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award.

The award will be presented to Foley Saturday, June 14, at 8 p.m. at Pageant Field following the annual Flag Day Parade and prior to the fireworks display over Black's Creek.

Foley is being recognized by the Koch Club and the Flag Day Committee for his work with Quincy's children. The award is named for Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and the Flag Day Parade.

Foley, who currently coaches Quincy Youth Baseball's Keohane Funeral Homes team. He coached the Foley-Chrysler team for many years, as well as Hurley Insurance, Local 444 and many tournament teams.

He has also served in various official capacities for Quincy Youth Baseball.

"Bob Foley has given a countless amount of time and effort to instructing the children of Quincy," said Thomas Koch, director of the Koch Club and chairman of the Flag Day Parade Committee. "He is more interested in teaching the game to children than he is about the outcome of any particular game.

"The Koch Club's motto has been 'The participation of the youngster is paramount — and the competition secondary' and I believe that Bob Foley has brought that philosophy to coaching for four and a half decades.

"Our city is a greater city because of Bob and people like him."

Foley lives in Merrymount and has seven children, 29 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren. He is retired after 45 years with Boston Edison.

"I am truly flattered by this honor," said Foley. "Dick Koch was a great man and to receive an award in his name is quite an honor.

Glasses To Be Repaired, Distributed In Developing Countries

Quincy Lions Club Collects 1,350 Pairs Of Used Eyeglasses

More than 1,350 pairs of used eyeglasses were collected by the Quincy Lions Club recently as part of the service club's annual "Lions Week" eyeglasses collection drive.

Glasses were collected in specially marked boxes located at local businesses around Quincy, said club President Christine Cedrone.

"Once again, local residents came through and generously donated the gift of sight to those who are less fortunate," said Cedrone, noting that 1,000 pairs of glasses were collected during last year's drive. "The World Health Organization estimates that a quarter of the world's population have eyesight that could benefit from corrective lenses, but for many people a pair of eyeglasses are either unaffordable or inaccessible.

"Thanks to the generosity of Quincy and South Shore residents, thousands of people in developing nations will now be able to see better."

Youssef Abdouh, chairman of this year's Lions Club eyeglass drive, said residents don't have to wait until the annual collection drive to donate their used eyeglasses or sunglasses.

"Several businesses have generously agreed to keep their Lions Club eyeglass collection boxes up all year long," he said. "We encourage everyone to drop off their glasses at these locations during the year, and the Quincy Lions Club will make sure that they are repaired and distributed around the world."

Used eyeglasses and sunglasses may be deposited in specially-marked Lions Club collection boxes at local businesses listed below:

South Shore Quest Season Opens For Nature-Lovers

Those adventurous souls who enjoy nature and are always on the lookout for new hiking trails are welcoming the start of the 2003 South Shore Quest season.

Quest is a new way for adults and youngsters to observe the flora and fauna and learn the history of the South Shore while following clues to a treasure.

To begin with, the quester will need a Quest book, available at Abigail's Crossing for $4, which provides directions to the Quest site, clues and a map to help locate the treasure box.

In the box are a guest booklet and pen for the quester to sign and a rubber stamp and inkpad so he or she can stamp the Quest booklet and document the accomplishment.

There will also be a "Questions for the curious," designed to whet the appetite for more information on the flora, fauna, terrain and history of the area and enhance the visit.

For those who complete 10 Quests, there is information on how to send away for a South Shore Quest patch.

This year's booklet contains 20 quests located in Quincy and other communities around the South Shore. Last year there were more than 2,000 visits to the Quest sites.

The South Shore Quest Committee, , sponsored by the Appalachian Mountain Club, designs the new quests and is looking for new members to design or monitor quests.

Questions should be directed to Kim Juric at 781-749-6121.

'Operation Day's Work'

Quincy Students Give Up Vacation To Aid Bangladesh Youngsters

OPERATION DAY'S WORK youngsters from Quincy plant a children's garden at the Thomas Crane Public Library as family and friends pledge donations to fund an education project in Bangladesh.

About 40 Quincy students from four different schools gave up a day of their spring vacations in a national effort to raise money for and learn something about the young people of Bangladesh.

They came away with $2,007 locally and about $30,000 raised by the 18 schools across the country that are members of a service project known as "Operation Day's Work-USA."

The Quincy youngsters raked up debris and wielded shovels to plant a colorful "Children's Peace Garden" at the Thomas Crane Public Library in exchange for family and friends' pledges of donations in the morning.

The donations will help provide 240 four-year secondary school scholarships to the poorest boys and girls in Bangladesh, the poorest of the poor developing nation's in teeming southeast Asia.

Then the students from Broad Meadows Middle School, Quincy and North Quincy High Schools and Archbishop Williams High School moved inside the library for an afternoon seminar on the history and culture of Bangladesh.

Their instructors were local resident Bangladeshis Dr. S. A. Rahman of Quincy's SAR Engineering and Professor Huq of Quincy College, and Patti Gray, a former UNICEF worker stationed in Bangladesh.

Dr. Rahman's wife and sons helped by sharing information from recent trips to their homeland.

So everyone came up winners on "A Day for Bangladesh" — the library which got its grounds cleaned up, the kids from Bangladesh who got their scholarships and the kids from Quincy who got an insider's look at life in a Third World country.

GUEST INSTRUCTORS leading a seminar on the history and culture of Bangladesh include (left to right) Patti Gray, former UNICEF worker in Bangladesh; Dr. S. A. Rahman, president of SAR Engineering of Quincy; and Professor Huq, instructor at Quincy College.

In all, 18 schools in nine states a Day's Work for Bangladesh. They included Oregon, Vermont, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Connecticut, New Hampshire, North Dakota and Iowa. It's the fifth year in which they have banded together to help youngsters in an economically deprived country.

Last year the American students raised enough to build an elementary school in Ethiopia, the year before they donated their "day's pay" to educate 252 girls in Nepal and before that it was an orphanage in El Salvador and the children of Haiti.

The ODW schools across the country have raised more than $100,000 for the education of more than 3,000 children in selected developing countries.

The students from Quincy listened while guest speakers told them about Bangladesh's fight for independence from Pakistan in 1970 and its determination to develop equality between men and women. The last two prime ministers have been women.

The government has made primary education mandatory but few children go on to secondary school, primarily due to poverty. It has the worst teacher-student ration in the world, 59-1. Almost two out of three girls cannot read or write. For boys, the ratio is only slightly better.

During the rainy monsoon season, 70 percent of Bangladesh is under water. The capital, Dhaka, is as modern as a European city but the rural areas contain most of the extreme poverty and the highest illiteracy rate. The ODW funds will be used mostly in rural areas.

The Quincy students were startled to learn how modern some aspects of Bangladesh life have become in these days of hi-tech.

"What is the number one movie right now in Bangladesh?" asked Dr. Rahman's son, Stephen, who returned a month ago from Bangladesh.

Only Jordan Huskins, an eighth grade student at Broad Meadows, knew the answer — Harry Potter — which indicated that children are children all over the world.

The aid project has already connected one Quincy youth, sixth grader Kristin Bloomer, to her peers, two sisters, in Bangladesh.

Kristin asked them via e-mail about hair styles, poverty, games, family and school in the Asian nation. The sister wrote back, in precise English, the importance of those subjects and even included in great detail how to play games popular in Bangladesh.

Kristin and several classmates stayed after school to try out the Bangladeshi games and pronounced them "really, really fun."

One of the biggest supporters of Operation Day's Work-USA in Quincy is Congressman William Delahunt.

"Your tireless efforts and generosity of spirit shared with those less fortunate is commendable," he wrote in a letter to the Quincy ODW members. "Your dedication assisting the needy in developing countries is truly impressive. You can feel proud of the significant difference you continue to make in the lives of others."

"It's amazing what a thousand U.S. youth can do in a day," said ODW member Laura Bloomer, 13. "We are kids helping kids to help themselves. This isn't just handouts. It's a gift that lasts a lifetime. It's education."

Wollaston Boyhood Chums Now Share Healthy Kidneys

Dan Kelly and Matt Breslin shared a childhood friendship growing up as next door neighbors on Fenno Street in Wollaston.

Now they share a life-saving kidney.

Doctors at Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston last week transplanted one of Matt's healthy kidneys into Dan, whose own kidneys had failed.

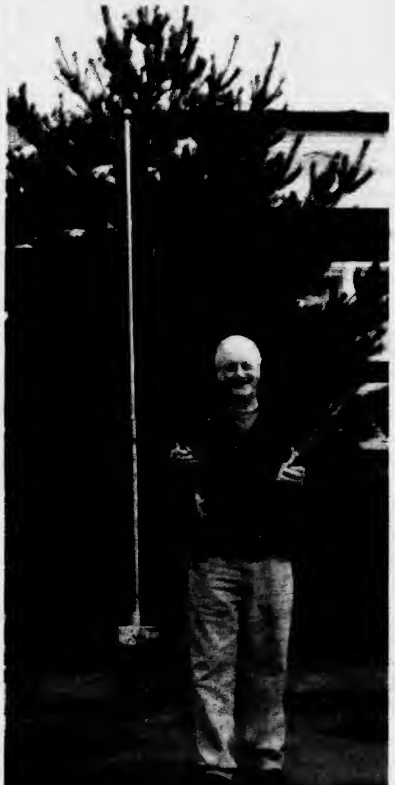
Kelly, 44, who now lives on Amesbury Street, North Quincy, was diagnosed with nephritis at the age of 21 but it was only a year ago that his kidneys shut down completely.

"Dan had just finished working — he's a Globe truck driver — when they called him," said his mother, Mary, who lives in North Falmouth. "They had seen his latest blood test and they told him to get to the hospital right away for dialysis."

The call went out for a new kidney. There were no takers. It was then that old friend Matt Breslin, now 44, married and a resident of Stoughton, stepped forward. Last fall, he passed the donor's test.

But there was one proviso. He had to lose 27 pounds and over the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, too. He also gave up drinking beer. It was a tough job in a season of turkey and stuffing and parties but he made the weight.

He also cleared it with his wife, Sandra, and their children, a son, Matt Jr. and a daughter, Alex.



Last Thursday at 5 a.m., Matt and Dan entered Brigham & Women's Hospital for the transplant operation that lasted through the morning. It was a success.

Breslin went home Monday, still a bit uncomfortable from the surgery. Kelly is still recuperating in the hospital.

"Matt's not feeling too great either," said Mary Kelly. "But they tell me that's a common reaction to a kidney transplant. We still say thank God for Matt Breslin!"

My, How They Grow !!

NEARLY 1,000 10-inch evergreen saplings were distributed to residents recently as part of the city's 14th annual Quincy Evergreen program. Here Leo Kelly (left), chairman, presents one to Peter Turowski. Residents turn in their Christmas trees instead of discarding them and receive a coupon for a sapling in the spring. The trees are chipped and used for mulch by the Park Department at city flower beds. And those saplings really grow as evidenced in photo showing Kelly standing in front of one planted 12 years ago in the yard of Dr. Carl Goodman on Revere Road. The once 10-inch sapling is now nearly 16 feet tall.

Park User Fees Proposed To Help Fund Upkeep

Gutro has not drafted a fee schedule yet, but he is researching the rates for other cities and towns to determine a comparable fee schedule for Quincy.

"I think most coaches and parents will agree that instituting a nominal fee for each entity that uses the fields is a good idea if it will ensure they are well maintained," said Gutro. "This is something that other cities and towns are using. It may not cover the costs for maintenance at every field, but it certainly provides a foundation for that."

Park, Cemetery and Forestry Director Tom Koch said he is open to any new idea that will help to maintain the city's parks and fields.

"I am open to new ideas, but we have to be careful not to penalize youth groups and non-profit organizations that use these fields," said Koch. "People already pay taxes and these are part of the services they expect in return. But I appreciate the councillors' input and look forward to more deliberation about this subject."

The item has been referred to the finance and parks and recreation committees. The park and recreation board is studying the issue also, Koch said.

How To Reduce Energy Costs Year-Round

(NU) — If your walls could talk, what would they tell you? Just take a look at your last energy bill and that will give you a clue.

Energy costs continue to skyrocket. They have increased 25 percent since 1998 and are predicated to rise as much as 60 percent this year.

Home heating and cooling bills are the single largest payments for families after their mortgage payment. But there is a lot you can do to minimize your heating and cooling bills whether you are building a new home or renovating your existing one.

One culprit behind these escalating energy bills is energy loss due to uninsulated walls. In typical wood-frame construction, batt insulation is installed in the cavity of the wall. However, wood studs account for approximately 25 percent of the wall surface.

Think about it. This is the equivalent of not insulating one whole wall of a square house. This exposes your house to the elements — allowing hot and cold air to seep through the exterior, creating an uncomfortable living environment for you and your family.

But, this energy loss is preventable if you build energy efficiency into the structure of your home. For little or no additional cost, you can add a layer of Styrofoam extruded polystyrene insulated sheathing, manufactured by The Dow Chemical Co., on your walls.

It can be added in addition to your existing noninsulated sheathing or can replace the noninsulated sheathing altogether. It covers the entire wall, including the many areas where cavity insulation is limited or can't be used, thereby reducing heat loss or gain through the wood studs and enhancing the thermal performance of the entire wall.

Insulated sheathing is easy for builders to install during new home construction. And for home remodels, it goes on right over the old siding and its rigid panels provide a smooth, level surface for mounting new siding.

Best of all, insulated sheathing is a smart, sound investment that not only cuts your utility bills, but typically pays for itself within a few years and keeps on paying back for the life of your home. Insulated sheathing can actually reduce the potential for damaging moisture problems in your walls. What other type of investment can do all of this and provide a return-on-investment year after year?

There is no reason for your family to feel the pinch of growing energy bills, nor should they suffer the discomfort caused by poorly insulated walls. Insulated sheathing protects your home year-round from energy loss; it reduces your family's energy bills; and it is a smart investment that continues to pay back year after year. Insist on energy-efficient Styrofoam insulation on the walls of your new home or under your new siding.

A Bright Way To Clean The Bathroom

(NAPS) — For the nearly three-quarters of all Americans who admit they would rather do almost anything than clean the bathroom, there's new hope.

A new line of bathroom cleaning products now has Teflon Surface Protector.

"Teflon non-stick coatings gave us the non-stick frying pan, now Clorox products with Teflon Surface Protector are giving us a non-stick bathroom," said Rowena Singer, Clorox marketing manager. "With Teflon Surface Protector, the dirt, grime, stains and soap scum that make cleaning the bathroom such a frustrating, thankless job will have a harder time sticking around."

The material used in Teflon non-stick coatings was discovered by Roy J. Plunkett in 1938 and trademarked by DuPont under the Teflon brand in 1945. It's commonly used as a soil and stain repellent for home furnishings, carpets and clothing and makes its debut in bathroom cleaners this year with Clorox Teflon Surface Protector line.

These new products — Clorox Bathroom Cleaner with Teflon Surface Protector and Clorox Toilet Bowl Cleaner with Teflon Surface Protector — have the cleaning "smarts" to eliminate toilet stains and tough dirt, grime and soap scum all around the bathroom.

Plus, an invisible Teflon barrier protects bathroom surfaces from buildup without leaving a residue, so tough bathroom grime won't stick. The result? Your bathroom stays cleaner longer and new dirt is easier to remove.

It all adds up to a guest-ready bathroom — good news for those who feel as if they're always cleaning their bathrooms. They just might be. A recent survey revealed that although nearly half of those surveyed (43 percent) said cleaning the toilet is their most dreaded task, the toilet is the most consistently cleaned item in the house.

Testing Your Home Only Way To Determine If Radon Is Present

Is Radon Placing Your Family At Risk?

(NU) — Radon — it's an odorless, colorless and radioactive gas. It's a carcinogen and detrimental to your health when found at levels in your home. So how to you know if your family is at risk from radon gas?

Testing your home is the only way to determine the level of radon gas present. Radon is dispersed in outdoor air, but when trapped in buildings, it can pose serious long-term health effects.

Exposure to radon is the second leading cause of lung cancer in the United States. Radon can be inhaled into the lungs where it undergoes radioactive decay and can damage DNA. Radon is estimated to cause 15,000 to 22,000 U.S. lung cancer deaths annually. Smokers exposed to radon substantially increase their risk of lung cancer in comparison to exposed nonsmokers.

The primary source for high radon levels in homes is the surrounding soil. Radon enters the home through cracks in the foundation floor or walls, basement floors, hollow-block walls, and openings around floor drains, pipes and sump pumps. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimates that as many as one in 15 homes across the United States has elevated radon levels.

Radon levels can vary from house to house, even on the same street. The only way to know whether radon exists at elevated levels in your home, and to protect your family from radon, is to test.

Testing for radon is easy and inexpensive with a do-it-yourself radon test kit, available at home improvement stores. Use home test kits labeled "meets EPA requirements." Most test kits cost less than $25 — a small price to pay to ensure your family's health. You can also call 1-800-SOS-RADON for a reduced-cost test kit and further information on testing your home.

State radon offices are ideal resources for information about radon testing and mitigation in your area. Find your state radon office at www.epa.gov/iaq/contacts.html.

If levels of radon above 4 picocuries per liter of air are found in your home, call the Consumer Federation of America Foundation at 1-800-644-6999 or visit www.radonfixit.org for information on how to reduce these radon levels.

Nancy Bonoli, Kelly Cahill Join Century 21 Annex Realty

Art Foley, Broker/Owner of Century 21 Annex Realty, announces that Nancy Bonoli and Kelly Cahill have joined the company's team of real estate sales agents in the company's Quincy office.

NANCY BONOLI

KELLY CAHILL

Bonoli was introduced to real estate, and Century 21 Annex Realty, in 1984 when she worked with Mary Dawson, owner and sales manager, to find her first apartment in Quincy. This sparked an interest in the buying and selling process that prompted Bonoli to achieve her real estate license in February 1987.

Bonoli spent several years practicing real estate part-time while working full-time in investment banking. She has worked as an accountant, bookkeeper and controller at Meridian Investments and Beacon Hill Financial.

"I have an accounting background in real estate development," Bonoli said. "That experience has helped me understand the industry's financial side. I can give solid advice to people as they make a tremendous investment."

An avid golfer, Bonoli lives in the Penn's Hill neighborhood of Quincy with her husband, Daniel.

Cahill, who has seven years of experience in real estate sales, began work at Century 21 Annex in March. The South Shore native had previously worked for with Central Real Estate. She said she based her decision to join Century 21 Annex Realty on the company's reputation as a national industry leader, as well as her professional relationships with owners Mary Dawson and Phyllis Rudnick.

"I feel very at-home working at Century 21 Annex," said Cahill, who grew up in Wollaston. "As a working mother who needs a more flexible schedule, this is the ideal job." Cahill also cites honesty and the ability to listen to clients' needs as key attributes for success in real estate sales.

Cahill lives in Braintree with her husband, Bob, and their sons, Brendan, 16, and Bobby, 20. The couple also has a daughter, Shauna, 19, who lives in Florida.

"We are very excited to welcome Nancy and Kelly to our Quincy office," Foley said. "Their combined experience and knowledge includes and extends beyond the real estate industry. This will greatly benefit our client base throughout the South Shore and greater Boston."

Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., has provided comprehensive real estate services to the South Shore since 1978. The company has offices in Quincy and Hanover and a staff of more than 50 professional Realtors serving the South Shore.

Century 21 Annex Realty is one of only two South Shore-based real estate companies which made The Boston Business Journal's 2003 list of the area's largest residential real estate firms.

For more information about Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., call the Quincy office at 800-345-4614.

Board Grants License For Chinese Herbal Wines

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

As License Board members were inspecting the bottles of Chinese herbal wines at last week's meeting, Jeffrey Brids, counsel for Michelle Chi, manager of Wah Cheung Hing, an Asian store at 406 Hancock St., was explaining the goodness of the wines.

The License Board approved the license, but after Chairman Joseph Shea reminded the board that when a license of this type is issued such as a sacramental wine license recently given to a religious store, once the license is issued, the owners are eligible to sell beer and wine.

It was then that Walter White, director or inspectional services asked that a affidavit be signed surrendering the license if the store is sold years down the line.

However, Brids, said the owners had no intention of selling American beer and wine, and after a brief meeting with the owner, it was agreed that they would sign an affidavit surrendering the license in the event they sell the store.

Brids said the variety wines have health benefits including helping back pain, fatigue and kidney problems to mention just a few. Chi's husband Dr. Can Ping, an acupuncturist with offices over the Asian store said he highly recommends the wine.

Brids said a person only needs one or two teaspoons of the therapeutic wines.

Brids read a letter from Rev. James Robertson of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy who called the owners of the store "assets to the community: and recommended to the board that they grant them the license.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), in expression her approval said the store is small ethnic store and clearly focused on Asian products."

The hours of operation are from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. six days a week and will no longer be open on Sundays.

Prolonged Exposure To Ultra Violet Rays Can Cause Significant Eye Damage

Sunglasses: More Than A Fashion Statement

Although sunglasses can help you look cool, you'll be looking smart this summer when you protect those baby blues from the sun's harmful rays.

According to Dr. Jeff Smith, vice president of professional services at Pearle Vision, sunglasses and prescription sunglasses with adequate UV protection are more than just a fashion accessory.

"Prolonged exposure to ultra violet rays can cause significant eye damage," Dr. Smith said. "Studies have shown that cumulative unprotected sun exposure may also cause cataracts, premature aging and even skin cancer around the eyes."

Here's what to look for when shopping for your next pair of shades.

UV Protection

For optimum protection, lenses should block 99 to 100 percent of UV rays. UV rays are strongest between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. and are stronger at high altitudes and closer to the equator.

Going to the beach? The reflective qualities of sand and water amplify the effects of UV radiation, potentially harming unprotected eyes even over a brief period of time. Clouds may block brightness, but still allow 80 percent of UV light to reach eyes and skin.

Photokeratitis, a painful sunburn of the cornea, can result from too much time in the sun without adequate protection. Symptoms include discomfort, blurred vision and light sensitivity. Cataracts, a common vision problem, are also thought to be a result of unprotected, long-term sun exposure.

Children's eyes can be particularly sensitive to the sun, so make sure that your kids are wearing their sunglasses when they are outdoors. A wide-brimmed hat for babies and toddlers is also a wise idea.

Polarized Lenses

Sun glare, a problem that can cause eyestrain and impaired vision, can be addressed by using polarized lenses. Ideal for outdoor activities and driving, these lenses use polarized filtering to deflect and diffuse concentrated light waves, eliminating 99 percent of reflected glare.

Sun glare can be a real danger when driving, as bright sunlight or reflected light off a vehicle or roadway can be temporarily blinding. In addition, polarized lenses can increase visual clarity and enhance depth and color perception.

Hip To Be Cool

It's a smart move to protect your eyes from the sun's damaging rays year-round. And of course, who doesn't crave the latest look when it comes to sunglasses?

Pearle Vision carries a wide selection of prescription and non-prescription sunglasses including trendy designer lines such as Maui Jim, Ralph Lauren, Calvin Klein, Gucci, Tommy Hilfiger, DKNY, Ray Ban and others.

You can even turn any eyeglasses frame into a custom pair of prescription or non-prescription sunglasses with UV protection and your choice of tinted, polarized or mirror-coated lenses.

Ask your eye care professional for advice about sunglasses or prescription sunglasses that best suit your needs. Through July 12, Pearle Vision stores are offering free prescription sunglasses with the purchase of a complete pair of prescription eyeglasses.

New Liquid Supplements Help Reduce Joint Pain

(NU) — Freedom of movement is something we should never take for granted. Whether it's a walk in the park, a game of catch with the kids, gardening or the challenge of a long-distance road race, we need to treat our bodies right if we want to remain active and healthy for years to come.

Osteoarthritis is a major cause of limitation in daily activities. This breakdown of the joints in the body is often called "wear and tear" arthritis.

Research indicates the glucosamine supplement may improve symptoms in some patients who have been diagnosed with osteoarthritis and also may help athletes maintain healthy joints or may assist in healing joint injuries. Other studies have shown some patients have found even greater relief with a combination of glucosamine and chondroitin.

And now there's a liquid combination supplement that speeds delivery of key nutrients. Drinkables Joint Care also includes collagen — a principal protein in the skin, tendons, cartilage, bone and connective tissue — and methy sulfony methane (MSM). It also has vitamin C, which may help speed up absorption, according to experts.

In fact, liquid supplements may be the key to getting the nutrition you need. According to the United States Pharmacopeial Convention Inc., supplements need to dissolve within 30 minutes to an hour. Anything remaining in solid form after that time will not reach organs and tissues within the body, according to Dr. Gerhard N. Schrauzer, professor emeritus at the University of California San Diego.

"In liquid supplements, the vitamins and minerals already are dissolved and therefore are immediately bioavailable," Schrauzer said in a 1998 article published in the Journal of Medicinal Food.

If you suffer from joint pain, try Drinkables Liquid Joint Care. It provides a full day's dosage of glucosamine HCI, chondroitin sulfate, MSM and collagen in a single daily dose.

Jane Winkler, 74, of Georgetown, Texas, said until recently she was taking a prescription medicine and 16 ibuprofin every day for her arthritis in her fingers and spine. Then she tried Drinkables Liquid Joint Care and stopped her other medications to see if only one would help. Now, she said, "I have a great deal of energy and do not hurt.

"In fact, a short time ago I went skydiving with my daughter and grandson for his 18th birthday. We liked it so much, we went again."

Is Your Body Absorbing The Calcium It Needs?

(NU) — You may think you're getting enough calcium in your diet. But are you retaining it?

Calcium is considered an important part of a child's development, but many people don't realize how much calcium is worth to adults.

This essential nutrient is required for healthy bones. And, while it's true that getting enough calcium benefits both the youth and old alike, your body's ability to absorb calcium decreases with age. According to the National Dairy Council, growing children can absorb as much as 60 percent of calcium, whereas adults can expect only 25 percent to 30 percent retention.

Thus, adults should know not only what foods contain calcium, but also which nutrients maximize their calcium intake and what factors hinder it.

A high-sodium diet, cigarette smoking and some prescription mediations can reduce calcium absorption. Some good sources of calcium include milk, cheese, yogurt, legumes, and some leafy vegetables and fortified cereals.

Consuming recommended amounts of vitamin D is a good way to help your body absorb calcium. If you find you're still not getting enough calcium in your diet, one way to increase intake and retention is through supplements.

A new liquid supplement called Drinkables Coral Calcium is believed to release calcium into the bloodstream easier and quicker than a pill. The coral calcium in mined from ancient coral beds in Japan, where the calcium is more porous and therefore more absorbable.

"Depending on the manufacturing process, pills and tablets often do not dissolve quickly," said William Steele IV, president of Remington Health Products LLC, which produces the Drinkables liquid nutritional supplements. "With a liquid, the supplement can move directly from the stomach into the bloodstream."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

BUILDING BRIDGES

If you have missing teeth and have good hygiene practices, you should consider filling the gap with a dental bridge. This prosthetic device is, essentially, a false tooth, which is known as a pontic. It is fused between two porcelain crowns that are attached to the two teeth on either side of the gap. The resultant fixed bridge cannot be removed, as one might do with a removable partial denture. In areas of the moth that are under less stress, such as the front teeth, a cantilever bridge may be used. This is an option when there are teeth on only one side of the open space. Bridges prevent teeth from drifting into open spaces and restore function to the bite.

Often used when one or more teeth are missing, a bridge consists of a replacement tooth that is attached to crowns on the adjacent teeth. We are dedicated to preserving your teeth and offering you the best care with the least amount of risk to your health. If you have oral health questions for yourself or a family member, please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Bridges can reduce the risk of gum disease.

Neighborhood Housing Golf Tourney Friday

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore (NHS) will hold its fourth annual Mulligan Golf Tournament tomorrow (Friday) at 1:30 p.m. at the Pembroke Country Club.

Daniel J. Quirk, president of Quirk Auto Dealers, recently donated $10,000 to the tournament, which is co-sponsored by Father Bill's Place.

Quirk's donation, along with proceeds from the tournament, will support the creation of affordable housing for working people in need of a home on the South Shore. Over the last three years the tournament raised over $50,000.

"We are very excited to receive this gift and are proud to have Dan's support," said Normand Grenier, executive director of NHS. "It will provide us with the means to expand and support our Second Step Housing Program which helps working people rent a safe and affordable apartment in local neighborhoods. We hope that the generosity shown by Dan Quirk will encourage others to participate in this community initiative."

Quirk owns Quincy Auto Auction, the Fore River Shipyard and Quirk Auto Dealerships. In addition to Quirk's donation, he is sponsoring a hole-in-one contest during the tournament. Quirk will donate a car to a golfer who gets a hole-in-one on one of Quirk Auto's sponsored hole.

"Through our donations we hope to show our support for the fine work of Neighborhood Housing Services," Quirk said. "These funds directly impact people living in our community and can make a significant difference in their lives."

NHS invites interested individuals and companies to sign up to play in the tournament, encourage co-workers and friends to sign up, sponsor a hole, donate a prize for the raffle or silent auction, and join the NHS staff for dinner.

BIG MACS

MacPherson struts combine the functions of shock absorber, spring, and upper control arm in one component. The top of the strut is secured to the body or frame with a rubber mounted bearing plate that provides the upper pivot point. The design saves size, weight, and cost, and it provides better roll control for a more comfortable rise. The shock absorber functions like a standard tube shock, and many struts can be rebuilt with a new insert. If there is a leak and the whole tube is wet, it is time for a replacement. The bearing plate and upper rubber mount are critical for maintaining correct wheel alignment and should be replaced at the same time as the shock.

Is your car's ride getting a little rough? Have the shocks and struts checked. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be informed about everything in your car whether or not your car is leased. Our friendly, professional, ASE Certified service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: It is not uncommon for the piston rod or tube of a MacPherson strut to become slightly bent from hitting a pothole, which can be checked by putting the vehicle on an alignment track.

Quincy Sweeps Brockton

GRANITE BASEBALL

The M.I.B.L. Quincy Granite baseball club swept the Brockton Cubs Sunday morning at Pond Street Field to boost their overall record to 3-4 this season.

"Our hats off to the Quincy Park Department," said coach Jason Riley. "After rain all night Saturday I didn't think the field was playable, but when I inspected it at 7 a.m. Sunday morning there were chalk lines and broom marks already. The field was playable and in excellent condition."

Quincy's next game is this Sunday morning at 9 when it takes on the Taunton Titans in a nine-inning single game at Pond Street Field.

In the first game, Quincy rode the arm of all-star lefthander Sean MacLean to a 2-1 victory. MacLean allowed one run on six hits over six innings with six strikeouts and a walk.

In the seventh, Riley called on closer Joe Flynn, who struck out the first batter but then walked the bases loaded. After a brief visit by Riley, Flynn found his control and blew fastballs by the next two hitters to seal the win.

Flynn, who excusably arrived late after pulling a 16-hour overnight shift at work, singled, stole second base and scored the go-ahead run in the sixth inning.

In the second game, the Granite prevailed, 6-4, as starter Shawn Hall notched the win. Hall threw five innings, allowing four runs on nine hits while striking out six and walking two.

Brian Deptula pitched the final two innings, giving up three runs on two hits, for the save.

"This team is a fun bunch of guys and their talent is great," Riley said.

Robert Baker Tosses No-Hitter, Strikes Out 9 For Quincy Firefighters

Robert Baker tossed a no-hitter to lead Quincy Firefighters to a 10-0 win over Local 1139 at Colletta Field in recent Babe Ruth House League action.

Baker, 15, struck out nine and walk none, missing his bid for a perfect game when two Local 1139 batters managed to reach base on fielding errors.

Shortstop John Orlando reached on a first-inning error, stole second but was stranded. Shane Carlyle reached base in the third inning on a misplayed ground ball, but was gunned down at second base by 14-year-old catcher Kevin Bossart.

At the plate, Baker went 3 for 4 with three RBI doubles — the first one nearly leaving the park. He also scored three runs on balls put in play by 13-year-old Brian Mahoney, who played strong defense at first base.

Rules prohibit players who pitch for their high school team from also pitching in Babe Ruth games until the conclusion of the high school baseball season. Baker was a member of the Quincy High School freshman team, which recently ended its season with a 4-6 mark. He played third base and pitched in relief, allowing five runs over 17 innings.

Quincy Firefighters improved to 4-2, placing them in a five-way tie for first place in a league that is showing great parity this year. Sharing first place with them are Golden Print, Morrisette, Play-It-Again Sports and Sons of Italy.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cheer up, Lamb. Your emotional impasse will lift once you allow your highly tuned sense of justice to guide you on what to do about an associate's questionable behavior.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) News about a project you hoped to work on might need more clarification. Take nothing just on faith. Draw up a list of questions, and insist on each being fully answered.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulate yourself on getting that difficult job done to everyone's satisfaction. This could be the first of many such challenges you might be offered down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) With your enthusiasm soaring again, you feel ready to tackle a tough new assignment. Good for you! And remember: Don't be too proud to accept help when it's offered.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Cupid rules the week for single Virgos eager to make a romantic connection. Meanwhile, Virgo couples experience renewed commitment in their relationships.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Home and work issues vie for your attention through early next week. Rely on your Libran sense of balance to keep you from being overwhelmed by either side.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creative projects might have to go on standby as you tackle other matters making demands on your time and energy. Things should ease by the middle of next week.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your energies are high, and so are your aspirations. But be careful not to let work dominate the week. It's also important to spend time with family and friends.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good time to set aside your pride and stop nursing those hurt feelings. Instead, consider restoring relationships you want to have back in your life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might be miffed at not being shown more appreciation for your hard work. But don't brood over it. Recognition comes in its own time and in its own way.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With your inner creative juices starting to boil and bubble, this is a good time to launch a new arts-related project, or go back and restart the one you had set aside.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of seeing the best in people, which helps encourage them to live up to your perceptions.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Next Sunday is Father's Day. It has a nice sound doesn't it? But you will find that fathers are also know by other names such as Dad, Daddy, Papa, and others. They all have special meaning.

This "Letter to Dad" says some of the things that most of us would like to say to our Dad. "There are so many things I'd like to tell you face to face . . .

I either lack the words or fail to find the time or place . . .
But in this special letter, Dad, you'll find, at least in part. . .
The feelings that the passing years have left within my heart. .

The memories of childhood days and all that you have done . . .
To make our home a happy place and growing up such fun. . .
I still recall the walks we took; the games we often played. . .
Those confidential chats we had while resting in the shade. . .

This letter comes to thank you, Dad, for needed words of praise.
The counsel and the guidance, too, that shaped my grown-up days.
No words of mine can tell you, Dad, the things I really feel. . .
But you must know my love for you is lasting, warm and real. . .

You made my world a better place and through the coming years. . . .
I keep these memories of you as cherished souvenirs! . . . *

Phelan Vows Veto On New Ordinance As 'Too Costly'

Council Votes For More Firefighters

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Mayor William Phelan said Tuesday he intends to veto a city council-backed ordinance that dramatically increases the number of firefighters in the city.

Phelan said he would veto the controversial measure after it was adopted Monday night by the council on a 7-2 vote. Councillor Frank McCauley and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro dissented.

"I haven't looked at the council order but I intend to veto it and explain my reasons for that veto at the appropriate time," Phelan said Tuesday.

Bucking the wishes of the mayor and Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, the city council voted to adopt minimum manning standards as outlined by the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA). If enacted, the city would have to hire approximately 40 firefighters to bring the fire department in line with the standard according to the NFPA. It would make Quincy the first city in the state to adopt such an ordinance.

Currently, the department staffs one officer and two firefighters for each piece of apparatus. The ordinance would add one firefighter on duty for each piece of equipment in service. Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick estimated the proposal would cost the city approximately $8 million by the time it is fully implemented.

If vetoed, the proposal would return to the city council for an override vote. The council would need six votes to override the mayor's objection.

Phelan said he must convince two councillors to vote against an override because "it is bad for the overburdened taxpayer, bad for pub

In Key Role For Adams Family Memorial

Political Farewell, New Challenge For Sheets

By TOM HENSHAW

After 28 years in the rough and tumble of Quincy politics — a record 12 of them as the city's mayor — fate has reserved one more challenge for Jim Sheets.

He'll be the New England manager for fund-raising and assist in the design of the Adams Family Memorial that will share the most hallowed location along with the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

"It will be a thrill to me to have my grandchildren go to Washington and see the Memorial and know that their grandfather had something to do with it," said Sheets.

The former Mayor's new lic safety, and bad public policy because it does not allow the fire chief to manage his own department."

During Monday night's meeting, several councillors argued that the staffing standard is necessary for a chronically under-manned department. In addition, the city is spending too much money on overtime to cover for an under-staffed crew, they said.

"This department has been perennially underfunded," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. "We need to set our own standards. I want to see a department that is fully complemented and addresses the safety of firefighters and the citizens."

Council President Dan Raymondi echoed those sentiments, saying the city should be spending more on the fire department.

"We should not be talking about cutting back on public safety," said Raymondi. "Are we going to tell people that we couldn't get to your loved ones because we had a ladder out of service, or Rescue 1 out of service?"

Before the meeting, Phelan wrote a letter to Raymondi, saying the costs associated with enacting the ordinance would force the city to close fire stations and place apparatus offline.

"The passage of this measure would have significant negative implications on the residents of Quincy," Phelan wrote. "The city council will be responsible for the closing of fire stations, taking existing fire equipment out of service, increased response time for emergency services and diminishing the safety of the residents of Quincy."

O'Connell wrote a similar letter to the council, saying the costs associated with instituting the NFPA standard were "unobtainable," and the city may have to close two fire stations.

"In these fiscal times I believe this increase to be unobtainable, and thus, the reduction in apparatus would occur," O'Connell wrote.

The ordinance would be phased in over a five-year period so it would not impact the budget all at once, according to Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley. The costs of excess overtime in the department would more than make up for the price to implement the ordinance, he said.

Traditionally, the mayor has appropriated some $600,000 annually for overtime costs in the fire department. Over the past several years, overtime costs have topped $1 million annually, councillors said.

Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton went so far as to call the mayor's response a "scare tactic."

In his dissent, Gutro said the measure is too costly and "handcuffs both the mayor and the city."

"I will not aid and abet the closing of the Wollaston Fire Station," Gutro said.

In a related issue, Assistant City Solicitor Jay MacRitchie said the ordinance may overstep the council's authority regarding spending. According to municipal finance laws, the mayor has the sole authority to appropriate money, he said. The council may approve or cut funds, but the body cannot add to an appropriation, he argued. "The council cannot force an appropriation," MacRitchie said during the meeting. "You can't force the mayor to fund a certain level."

Quincy Firefighters Association Local 792 President William Ariente said at least 10 other departments in the state use the NFPA standard as a guideline. But he admitted that no other city or town has adopted the standard as an ordinance.

Hanley said the NFPA standard was drafted less than two years ago, and therefore most departments have not had sufficient time to institute it.

Tom Largey, the mayor's executive secretary, said the city would have to raise taxes or override Proposition 2 1/2 to pay for the costs associated with the proposal. "The mayor will do everything in his power to avoid either scenario," he said.

But Coughlin said the department relies too heavily on overtime. "You can spend the money on overtime and have a force that is less than adequate, or you can have a young, vital force that will be able to respond to a fire in a safer, more efficient manner. I truly believe that implementation of this will provide greater safety for the firefighters and the citizens. It's all a matter of priorities."

In addition, the council signed off on a full study of the fire department and its needs.

Raymondi said the council is prepared to set up a special meeting to vote on an override.

Work Continues On Schedule

City, Activist Broker Deal On Adams Field Renovations

The show will go on.

City officials and environmental activist William Aylward last week settled their differences over renovations at the Adams Field ballpark, thus enabling the city to host the national Babe Ruth World Series in August.

Aylward dropped his appeal to an $800,000 plan for new bleachers, lights, restrooms and concession stand at the Merrymount Park. In return, the city agreed to make improvements to the area surrounding Blacks Creek.

Last week, Mayor Phelan proposed a home rule petition that would have nullified Aylward's appeal. The measure was withdrawn at a special city council meeting last week after the two sides brokered the deal.

Initially, Aylward filed a state appeal to a decision by the Quincy Conservation Commission approving the Adams Field project. In his appeal, Aylward argued that the concrete foundation for the bleachers clearly intruded on an environmentally protected area. Certain construction couldn't continue while the appeal was pending with the state Department of Environmental Protection.

In return for withdrawing his appeal, Aylward won concessions from the city, including the approval of a wetlands study of the Blacks Creek area and environmental improvements in the area.

Mayor William Phelan said one of the items calls for the city to improve a storm water drainage system that will prevent pollution from cars traveling on surrounding roadways from seeping into Blacks Creek.

"We appreciate Mr. Aylward's input on this project," said Phelan. "And we also appreciate his understanding that we were under time constraints that needed to be addressed."

Council Approves $204.5M Budget For FY 2004

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

After administering only minor cuts, the city council Monday night signed off on Mayor William Phelan's $204.5 million budget for fiscal 2004.

Final approval of the budget came after the council's finance committee unanimously accepted a number of appropriations, including the school department's $65.7 budget.

Despite an estimated cut of $4.7 million in state aid and a floundering economy, the city will not suffer layoffs or decreases in services, Phelan said.

"The hard work in the past year and half, reining in spending and doing more with less on behalf of the taxpayers, has paid off," said Phelan. "But we couldn't have done it without the work of the city council and the state Legislature."

Overall, the fiscal 2004 budget will increase about 5 percent, or $10 million, over last year's $194 million blueprint.

The council did not see fit to dramatically slash Phelan's budget; rather, the cuts were more obscure. For example, the council voted to cut the salary of the Chief Plumbing Inspector by $8,500. They cut their own expenditures for out-of-state travel by $8,000. And, they carved out $22,500 for the costs of uniforms for the Water, Sewer and Drain Department. The council also cut the position of Assistant Contract Supervisor in the Auditor's Office.

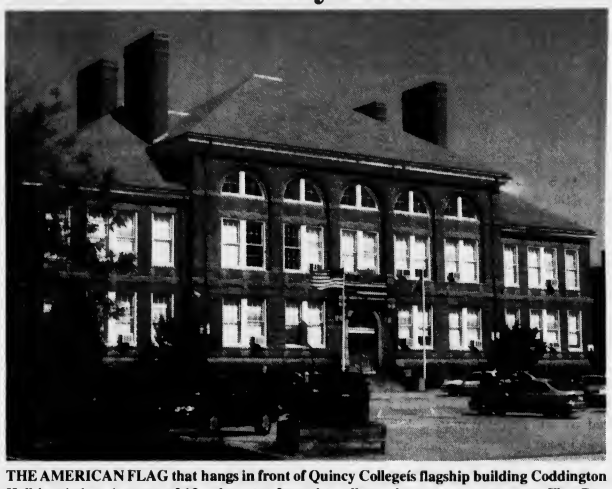
"The fact that the city council voted to cut so little is a clear indication that this is a lean budget," said Phelan. "The taxpayers can be assured that their interests have been addressed."

Earlier in the evening, the city council's finance committee approved the school department's $65.7 budget, an increase of $3 million over last year. The increase includes negotiated pay raises and the hiring of 18 school jobs.

The additional jobs included in the school spending plan for fiscal 2004 are:

- Four high school classroom teachers.
- Three elementary classroom teachers.
- Three middle school health teachers.
- Two elementary school literacy specialists.
- Two high school health aides.
- One middle school foreign language teacher.
- Two high school deans.
- One high school security guard.

Jo-Ann Bragg, school committee member, called the budget "a major step in the right direction."



Finance Committee Chairman and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said he was pleased to see some programs restored for the schools.

"The middle school health program is very crucial," said Coughlin. "In this day and age you want kids to be educated on certain risky behaviors that they can fall prey to."

Overall, Phelan's budget is based on conservative revenue estimates and spending, according to Councillor Frank McCauley.

"From what I can see the budget is pretty well structured," said McCauley. Although the city will spend more money on health insurance for employees and waste collection, those costs will be partially offset by smaller debt payments, he said.

Old Glory Stolen

THE AMERICAN FLAG that hangs in front of Quincy Collegeís flagship building Coddington Hall is missing. A group of 12 volunteers from the college who were on campus on Flag Day preparing for the free hot dog barbecue before the Quincy Flag Day Parade noticed the flag was not on its flagpole adjacent to the Quincy College flag. They assumed that the new American Flag, which was just purchased for commencement ceremonies last month, had been removed by the facilities staff for another campus activity. Upon further investigation on Monday morning, it was determined that the flag was officially missing. The security staff is currently reviewing surveillance tapes seeking clues to the theft. President Sean Barry asks that anyone who may have witnessed the theft call Quincy College at 617-984-1710.

An Emotional Night For Jim Sheets

It was an emotional night for Jim Sheets.

You could see it in his eyes, in all the hugs and in all the accolades as he and his wife, JoAnn, were honored at a reception at the Marriott Quincy Hotel last week.

It was called a celebration for their "Decades of Dedication to Public Service."

It was also a farewell — the official end to Sheets' long, historic political career.

A career that spanned 28 years — 12 of them an historic six terms as mayor, 16 as Ward 4 councillor, four of them simultaneously as state representative.

For those 12 years as mayor, Sheets dominated the local political scene. Now, he was leaving it — apparently for good.

He was the longest serving Plan A mayor in Quincy's history. And was re-elected to three of those six terms without opposition, another footnote in Quincy's political history.

For most of those 12 years it almost seemed that the only way any challenger could get him out of the third floor office at City Hall would be with a few sticks of dynamite.

But two years ago, it happened — without dynamite.

A virtual political newcomer by the name of Bill Phelan did it — with 17 votes.

Phelan, who was invited by Sheets, was among those who filled the Marriott Hotel main ballroom, and came with an accolade.

"I must confess I'm extremely nervous," he began, in apparent acknowledgment that being in the ballroom that night was like being in Sheets Country.

PHELAN

Phelan noted he did not know Sheets very long but after becoming mayor and talking with people Sheets had helped, "I gained a little insight of the individual you are and the caring and considerate individual that you are."

And, he added: "I have big shoes to fill and many lessons to learn from your example."

After Phelan spoke, Sheets stood up and placed his hand on Phelan's shoulder and the two chatted briefly and friendly.

There are those who would liked to have seen a Phelan-Sheets mayoral rematch this year. Simon Chan, Quincy real estate broker, apparently is one of them.

"Both my wife and I wish Mayor Sheets was still in office," he said. "We miss him."

City Council President Dan Raymondi, who may — or may not — challenge Phelan this year, praised Sheets for "his vision and unprecedented achievement" including "saving Quincy Hospital."

RAYMONDI

Ron Kaufman, a well known and respected Republican consultant, who served with President H. W. Bush, recalled his long friendship with Sheets.

Kaufman was one of Sheets' students at then Quincy Junior College and worked in his very first campaign for Ward 4 councillor in 1972.

JOANN AND JIM Sheets thanking those who honored them at the reception. "I love you all," Sheets said emotionally. Quincy Sun Photo Robert Noble

KAUFMAN

And, though he went on to the political big league in Washington, D.C., Kaufman mused: "I learned more about politics sitting in the living room listening to Jim Sheets than from anyone else."

Weymouth Mayor David Madden said Sheets inspired that town to turn to a city form of government by his example as mayor of Quincy.

MADDEN

"You served as a shining example of what a mayor should be for his community," Madden said.

Sheriff Mike Bellotti arrived late but if you're a Sheets fan, he was worth waiting for with this blockbuster compliment:

"You will go down, I believe, as the greatest mayor Quincy has ever had."

BELLOTTI

After serving six terms as mayor and then missing a seventh by a scant 17 votes, Sheets said he consoled himself:

"Don't cry because it's over. Smile because it happened."

His parting words — spoken with emotion at the end of the evening: "I love you all. I miss you all."

Now at age 68 he has a new challenge: heading up New England fund-raising and assisting in the design for the Adams Family Memorial in Washington, D.C.

But he surely will be remembered for his 12 years as mayor.

Like mayors before him, he had his hits and misses.

His biggest miss, no doubt, was his ill-fated campaign to re-open the Fore River shipyard and put Quincy back into the shipbuilding business. He may have put too much faith in one man.

There were many hits those 12 years, but his biggest one has to be the Quincy Hospital — now Quincy Medical Center. He spearheaded the around-the-clock, around-the-weeks, around-the-months effort to keep that community vital facility open.

It was, most would agree, his finest hour as mayor. His legacy for posterity — and history.

Jim, who was like Quincy's Papa Bear watching over his city, was touched by all those nice things said about him the other night. And, you know, even a Papa Bear can have a tear in his eye.

Farewell Jim. But not goodbye.

Scenes From Yesterday

Quincy Homestead, Wollaston, Mass.
Home of Josiah Quincy, first mayor of Boston

THIS ANTIQUE QUINCY POSTCARD was published just a few years after Congress authorized the use of pictures on postcards that could be mailed to anywhere in the US for just one cent. Almost 100 years old, this view is of the Josiah Quincy House and what is now Muirhead Street on the left in Wollaston. This was the home of the third Josiah Quincy. His farm here included much of what was the Massachusetts Field coastal plain to the water's edge. He was a gentleman farmer and reportedly never made money farming except for his salt works along Quincy's shore. He also had a home in Boston and was elected as the second mayor of the city; the postcard label is incorrect. His life included many significant accomplishments including being president of Harvard, but he is most famous for building the Fanuiel Hall Marketplace while he was mayor. Known now around the world in his name as the Quincy Market in Boston.

National Park Service To Recreate Independence Debate On Fourth Of July

Ever wonder what it was like that July day in 1776 when the Continental Congress declared us to be free and independent?

The U. S. National Park Service is planning to give you an opportunity to find out on the Fourth of July 227 years later.

Members of the audience will assume the roles of delegates from the colonies and debate passage of the Declaration of Independence.

There will be three performances on Friday, July 4, at 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m., with the Carriage House at the Adams National Historic Park substituting for Philadelphia's Independence Hall.

John Adams, the "Atlas of Independence," will lead the sometimes heated debate before the final vote is taken.

After the debate, each delegate will sign his or her name to the document, ring the Liberty Bell, and receive a copy of the Declaration of Independence to keep as a memorial and eat a slice of liberty cake.

A candlelight parade, led by the Middlesex County 4-H Fife & Drum Corps, will follow the evening performance, ending at United First Parish Church where the Declaration of Independence will be officially read.

Summer Library Adventure Begins On Thomas Crane Lawn

The Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library will kick off the Summer Library Adventure Wednesday, June 25m at 2 p.m. with a performance by Sarah Salerno-Thomas on the front lawn of the Main Library.

Audience members will also participate in the show providing sound effects to accompany "The Singing Ringing Tree," a fairy tale about the transforming power of love.

In case of inclement weather the performance will be moved into the library's large meeting room.

The Summer Library Adventure will continue throughout the summer with arts themed adventures including storytellers, musical events and other fun activities, some of which require pre-registration.

New this summer is Family Book Bingo, a game for the whole family in which youngsters can win prizes like bright green "Read! Think! Create!" book packs and summer reading certificates.

When a family registers, anytime between June 23 and Aug. 15, each member will receive a bingo card. After each member has completed a card, all the cards will be returned to the library for prizes.

Praise For Cemetery Department

Again, as in past years, the employees of the Quincy's Cemetery Department did an exceptional job to ensure that the City's cemeteries looked beautiful for Memorial Day.

We have a family lot at Pine Hill Cemetery, and we live by Mt. Wollaston. Despite the continuous rain for many weeks and severe shortage of staff, the men worked very hard to keep the grass cut and maintain the beauty of the cemeteries.

Too often the public is critical of City employees. It is important to recognize that these men and the office secretary work hard to make every Memorial Day a special day for our veterans and families who have loved ones buried in these cemeteries.

Thank you to all.

Mayor Allows School Children To Help In War Paper Drive

This Week
1944
59 Years Ago

Mayor Charles A. Ross issued an emergency order overriding the School Committee's refusal to permit school children to take a morning off to help in the city's wastepaper drive for the war effort.

The youngsters were needed to pick up bundles of paper in front of homes and deliver them to the Granite Street railroad siding where 15 freight cars were waiting to take them to Boston.

"The Mayor's order undoubtedly prevented the success of the residential drive from being imperiled," said Clarence L. Edwards, chairman of the salvage drive.

"As we see it a war emergency must take precedence over everything else and this is one of those situations."

Dependable Cleaners Employees Teach Sewing Class At Point Webster School

Two Dependable Cleaners employees went back to school recently in an effort to support the Quincy community.

When Ken Grippi, technical training consultant for Dependable Cleaners, found out that Quincy's Point Webster Middle School could no longer afford to offer students certain extracurricular courses like sewing, he approached Karin Barrett, a top seamstress for the company, and the two went back to school.

Ten students signed up for the course in hopes of learning basic sewing skills. By the end of the program, the children not only learned the fundamentals of sewing, but Grippi and Barrett also guided each student in creating his or her own fleece vest.

"It was such a rewarding experience," Grippi said. "Seeing the children wear their vests at our final meeting certainly made it all worthwhile."

Dependable Cleaners, founded in 1944 and headquartered in Quincy, is actively involved in the communities it serves. Recent community initiatives for local children include the "Read to Ride" summer reading incentive program, beginning again in May, and the Community Care Program, which helps non-profit organizations and local sports teams meet their fundraising goals.

Dependable also donates coupons to local school fundraising activities, such as the school band and D.A.R.E. programs.

A three-generation family company, Dependable Cleaners has 17 retail locations in Massachusetts, nine of which have fully-equipped cleaning plants and three having laundromats.

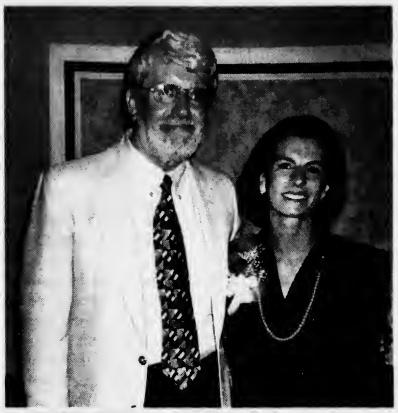
Teacher, PTO President Recognized At NCTA Dinner

Donna Brodeur, president of the Marshall School PTO, was the Quincy recipient of the Norfolk County Teachers' Association Service Award at its 20th annual awards banquet at the Lantana in Randolph.

The award is given annually to a non-teacher in each of the association's member communities who gave outstanding support and interest in education within the school community.

Kathleen Chella, a second grade teacher at the Lincoln-Hancock School, was Quincy's nominee for the top prize, the Laura M. Warcup Distinguished Educator Award, but the final selection went to Amy Kehew of Braintree.

Brodeur's citation said she "exemplified the word 'devoted' for she has given much of her time to developing a strong and thriving PTO.



"Her priorities are providing the children and staff with important educational tools through fund-raising; showing appreciation and recognition to the teachers/staff with special luncheons; organizing Parent/Student Continental Breakfasts for each grade and working on Family Fun Day at the Holiday Market Place as well as organizing the Book Fair.

"Donna has been a dedicated aide in local nursing homes and at Quincy City Hospital, a provider of Respite Care and has held positions as a valued resource person in several area schools."

Chella's nomination as Quincy's entrant for the Warcup Award recognized her as having "dedicated her professional life to the South-West Quincy community for over 30 years teaching at the old Lincoln School and then at the new Lincoln-Hancock School.

"She chose to teach the primary grades. These early years represent the important beginnings of reading and math skills. Mrs. Chella has taken on the task of building a foundation upon which her students can further their learning of these skills while also enjoying the lessons.

"Kathy has researched and embraced new programs helping to provide a sound educational beginning for her students. Her sense of responsibility and unselfish commitment to the children of this neighborhood is admired and commended."

DONNA BRODEUR, president of the Marshall School PTO, was the Quincy winner of the Service Award given to a non-teacher by the Norfolk County Teachers Association. At right is Philip J. Connally, principal of the Marshall School.

Quick Lamb Stew

With these rainy weekends, I've been "home on the range" cooking and hoping for some sunshine, as is everyone else. And instead of cooking out as we would be doing by now, thoughts of hot soup and stews were on my mind. So it was when I took some lamb pieces I had in the freezer and made a quick lamb stew. It tasted awfully good that cool rainy day and cooked in no time at all.

• Sauté the onion, garlic and celery. Add the lamb, sherry, sauté for another few minutes. Then add the water, tomato sauce, the mushrooms and oregano, cut up potatoes and carrots.

• Continue to cook slowly covered until done. It took about 45 minutes for the stew to cook. I left it on warm or simmer for awhile before it was served. It was even delicious the next day.

Quick Lamb Stew

1-1/2 pounds lamb stew pieces (bone in)
2 potatoes
2 carrots
1 large stalk celery cut in small pieces
1 small onion
1 teaspoon oregano
1 clove garlic (cut)
1/2 pound mushrooms or a small can as I used
2 tablespoons or so of cooking sherry (optional)
1/2 cup tomato sauce
1 cup water

COA Board To Discuss Senior Safety Zones June 26

The Quincy Council on Aging Board will meet Thursday, June 26 at 2 p.m. in the Park and Recreation conference room, to discuss the safety zones that have been proposed for the vicinity of high rise elderly housing units.

The safety zone proposal will be submitted to the City Council by Councillor Kevin Coughlin in the form of a home rule petition to the state legislature for permission to enact such ordinances.

They would apply to 18 senior housing facilities throughout the city, including:

Hancock House, 99 Granite Street, Marina Place, River Bay Club, Fenno House, 1000 Southern Artery, Crowley Court, Louis George Village, Sawyer Towers, Tobin Towers, Drohan Apartments, O'Brien Towers, Pagnano Towers, Wollaston Manor, Bauer Towers, Granite Place, Hancock Court and Town Brook House.

John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging, said the CoA board has gone on record supporting the home rule petition.

"Such safety zone protection as 20-mile-per-hour traffic control, blinking signalization and signage is urgently needed for the protection of Quincy's seniors living in these facilities," said Noonan.

He said that during the seven years he served as senior advocate on the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Quincy Center Concourse there were seven pedestrian within a one mile radius, five of them senior citizens.

Daniel Flynn, CEO of Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. of Quincy and a 1981 graduate of Boston College High School, helped the school raise $52,000 at its recently auction.

Proceeds will help fund student scholarships and financial aid.

Flynn conducted the live auction before 240 alumni, parents and friends of Boston College High School, who participated in the annual Mahoney Golf Tournament at the Pinehills Golf Club in Plymouth.

DANIEL FLYNN

The annual golf tournament, under the direction of Matthew Curran, class of 1989, associate director of the B.C. High Advancement Office, is a fund-raiser named in memory of the late Rev. Francis Mahoney S.J., long-time teacher and alumni director at the school.

The day began at 11 a.m. with a buffet lunch donated by The Boston Wharf Company and Robert Kenney, a parent from Milton.

Golf play began at noon with a shot-gun start, followed by cocktails, dinner, live and silent auction and the awards ceremony.

Community Corrections Crew Help Clean Squantum Park

A community corrections work crew recently added some extra muscle to short-handed Metropolitan District Commission laborers at Squantum Point Park in North Quincy, cutting grass and cleaning up the sprawling grounds.

Sen. Michael Morrissey praised the cooperative spirit of Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, who arranged to have the community corrections crew lend a helping hand.

"Sheriff Bellotti has always worked in our communities and supported these kinds of efforts over the years," Morrissey said. "I know the people of Quincy are especially grateful in these times of budget reductions and fiscal challenge."

Morrissey said the MDC has been shorthanded due to recent budget cuts.

"Without this kind of help, we can't get these jobs done," he said.

Bellotti reiterated the importance of collaborative efforts and cooperation.

"Especially now during these tight fiscal times, we have to work together and pool our resources to continue our efforts to keep our communities safe and clean," he added.

STEPHEN P. RYAN received a bachelor of science degree from Cornell University School of Engineering. Son of Gerald and Joan Ryan, he is a 1999 graduate of North Quincy High School.

Increases Approved In Clerk's Office

Council Rejects Various Fees In Inspectional Services Dept.

The city council approved fee hikes in the City Clerk's office but closed the door on increasing various fees in Inspectional Services.

The council signed off on a set of increases for permits issued by the City Clerk's office:

- The long form of birth, death and marriage certificates, from $5 to $8.
- Marriage intention licenses will be raised from $25 to $35;
- A book of resident listings will be raised from $25 to $40
- Business certificates will be raised from $25 to $35.

The new fees will bring Quincy in line with cities and towns of the same size, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Increasing fees in the Inspectional Services Department did not find the same support. Focusing mainly on the building permit increases, the council's ordinance committee voted 6-1 against the hikes.

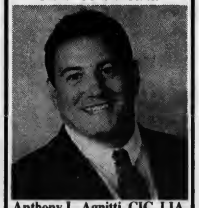
Council President Dan Raymondi said the fee hikes in the Inspectional Services Department were the equivalent of tax increases.

The hikes would have had a "tremendous impact" on homeowners who want to build additions or renovate their houses, he said.

Last month, the council approved a set of fee increases in the health department.

THREE NORTH QUINCY High School students Supicha Kridaratikorn, Kurt Nason and Christine Sullivan received the Edward and Margaret Fasino Scholarship. Shown with them are Edward Fasino, Assistant Principal Pam Mateu, Scholarship Chairman John Perkins and Principal Lou Ioanilli.

Fed Security Funds En Route To Quincy



The state of Massachusetts will receive $388,783 in federal homeland security funds through local Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT) to train citizens to better respond to emergencies.

Massachusetts currently has five active CERT programs operating across the state in Quincy, Braintree, Fitchburg, Worcester and Sturbridge.

The grant is part of $19 million being made available to expend the CERT program throughout the country by the Department of Homeland Security.

"Through the CERT program. citizens are better able to respond to an emergency or disaster," said Michael Brown, the Under Secretary of Homeland Security for Emergency Preparedness and Response. "This is an essential way for citizens to help secure the homeland by supporting the work of our professional first responders."

Happy 54th For Cruiser USS Salem

Several hundred people of all ages showed up at its birthplace in the old Fore River Shipyard recently to wish the USS Salem a happy 54th birthday.

The event was organized and hosted by the Save Our Salem Committee of the Broadmeadows Middle School who picked up an award for their efforts on behalf of the Salem.

City Council President Daniel Raymondi presented a Certificate of Appreciation to Ron Adams of Broadmeadows and member of the Save Our Salem Committee.

"This is an amazing group of young people," said Michael Condon, executive director of the Salem and the Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

"The student organized the event and ran it with very little help on our part. It's exciting to see the future of the ship in these children."

The youngsters have worked hard to keep the 716-foot heavy cruiser in Quincy. They have raised more than 3,000 signatures toward their goal of 10,000.

The MDC recently announced a six-month extension to the lease of the dock where the Salem is berthed.

Also assisting at the party was Margaret LaForest, who was the guiding force behind bringing the Salem to Quincy when she was a student at Broadmeadows.

Highlight of the birthday bash was the cake cutting ceremony in the ship's ward room, where Dr. Bill Anderson, a member of the Salem's original crew, led the singing of "Happy Birthday" and blew out the candles.

The visiting youngsters also enjoyed such fun activities as face painting, the beanbag toss and musical chairs.

Linda Stice Candidate For Re-Election To School Committee

LINDA STICE

Linda K. Stice announces her candidacy for re-election to a fourth term on the Quincy School Committee.

Stice, who has served 12 years, has been vice chairman and has headed the Policy, Budget and Special Education Sub-Committee, said:

"My reasons for running now are the same as they were in 1991: I care about the lives of children and am passionate about the tremendous responsibility that public schools have to kids and their families. The variables that shape their day: the safety of their school, the quality of their teachers, the number of children in their class, the after-school offerings, the special programs to challenge and help every child — these are the business of the School Committee."

Stice cited her role as a strong advocate for small class size, her experience in successfully negotiating employee contracts, her chairing of the Quincy College Governance Committee and her urging the development of cost-saving in-house special education programs among her accomplishments. As chairman of the Policy Sub-Committee, she researched the effect of kindergarten entry age on school performance and recommended a change in start age that the committee subsequently adopted.

Stice noted that with prior certification as a teacher and school adjustment counselor, she has extensive experience in education, guidance and administration. She served as the coordinator of the Quincy Teen Mothers Program, founded the city's Parent-Child Home Program and served on a state-wide Department of Education advisory committee on early literacy assessment.

As executive director of the city's Commission on the Family and in her new role with the Office of Constituent Services, Stice has overseen the founding of the Prep for Success, New Horizons for Youth and 21st Century after-school programs. With the Quincy Police Department, she pioneered a mentoring program for children at the Point Webster Middle School.

"I believe that the challenges facing the Quincy public schools require positive, creative and hard-working School Committee members," she said. "We've been so successful in our building and renovation programs; we now face a special challenge in meeting the needs of Quincy High School and Atlantic, Central and Sterling Middle Schools. Many of our most experienced teachers and administrators are retiring; we must now compete with other systems in attracting and retaining the brightest and most able new staff.

"Our graduating seniors successfully met the demands of the MCAS this year, but our dropout rate has increased. We must now develop more effective programs to help vulnerable high school students stay in school and succeed.

"One of my goals is full-day kindergarten for parents who believe their children would benefit from such an offering. With the cutback in state funds and our lack of classroom space, that goal is very difficult to achieve. As an alternative, I want to research the possibility of offering a year-round kindergarten program, especially for children who need an extra boost before starting first grade."

Stice and her husband, Kenneth Tarabelli, are the parents of Daniel, a 2000 graduate of North Quincy High School, and Madeline, a member of the class of 2004.

Stice is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin. She holds a master's degree in elementary education from the University of Florida and a master's degree in counseling and consulting psychology from Harvard University.

Stephen Golden Candidate For School Committee

Stephen Golden of Ridgeway St., is a candidate for school committee.

Golden recently filed nomination papers and will officially announce his candidacy at a fundraiser Thursday, June 26, at 6 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn at 29 Hancock St.

"I am running for school committee because I want to be part of the team that makes the Quincy Public Schools the best in Massachusetts," said Golden. "With the fiscal crisis facing our cities and towns, the school committee must be more precise and more creative than ever before. Above all, to assure quality public education, the school committee has to step up to be a more active organization that will create a smoothly functioning team of elected officials, parents, teachers, administrators and students."

Golden, a lifelong Quincy resident, graduated from Quincy Public Schools in 1984. He graduated from Suffolk University with a degree in History. Later, he earned a Master's degree in Education from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

STEPHEN GOLDEN

Golden served as Program Director of the Teen Get-Away recreational program in Quincy, President of Quincy's Ward 5 Community Association, and a marine in the United States Marine Corps reserve for eight years. He was honorably discharged in 1996.

With more than nine years of teaching experience in the public schools, Golden thinks he has a strong belief in public education.

"Our public schools have an obligation to prepare all students to reach their maximum potential," he said. "This is especially true in difficult economic times. My years teaching have provided me with first-hand perspective on the services that need to be maintained to ensure our children's future success."

Currently, Golden is finishing his second year as an educator and director of the alternative high school program for the Norwood Public Schools.

Golden lives with his wife, Jennifer, and sons Christopher and Aidan in Wollaston. He is the son of Peter and Delores Golden of Wollaston. He has five sisters, Paula Coleman, Linda Tierney, Mary Pound, Kristen Arnstein and Lori Golden; and two brothers, Peter Golden and Richard Golden, both of Quincy.

Tickets for the fundraiser cost $25. They can be purchased at the door or in advance by mailing a check to the Committee To Elect Stephen Golden, 32 Ridgeway St., Quincy, MA 02170.

FORMER FIRST LADY JoAnn and former Mayor James Sheets thank those who attended the reception honoring them. Reflecting on her husband's 28-year political career, she mused: "It has not been boring at all."

Political Farewell, New Challenge For Sheets

job, which had been under negotiation for six months, was announced last Wednesday by Peter Boylston Adams at a retirement party for Sheets which attracted some 300 friends and former political foes to the Marriott Hotel in West Quincy.

"You folks here in Quincy have lost a mayor but I think you'll be seeing him again in an entirely different venue," said Adams, a direct descendant of John and John Quincy Adams, the second and sixth presidents, and a head of the Adams Memorial Foundation.

The Foundation was created by the U. S. Congress and assigned the task of designing and building a memorial to the Adams Family in a coveted location in the nation's capital known as Area 1 where the most important memorials are sited.

The Congress appropriated $1 million to get the plan off the ground but the rest of the funding is left up to the Foundation, which is divided into two sections, one in Washington and the other, managed by Sheets, in New England.

"The program is still in its infancy," Sheets told The Sun. "It's still evolving. We'll have an office in Boston on the 19th floor of 101 Federal St., but we'll also operate out of Quincy. I probably will be fulltime over time, my major point of interest.

"It will be a real challenge to come up with a design that will catch the spirit of the Adams Family. The other memorials in Area 1 recognize single individuals. How do you roll into one the spirit of a whole family?"

A disparate group of friends and former enemies attended the party at the Marriott, ranging from Lou Gorman, former Red Sox general manager, to Ron Kaufman, a Republican party consultant and close friend of the Presidents Bush, father and son.

Mayor William Phelan, who upset Sheets in his bid for a seventh in 2001, had praise for the man who was his opponent only two years ago.

"I didn't know you, Mr. Mayor, very long," said Phelan. "I do feel, however, that after having gotten into office and spoke with many individuals who you have helped throughout your career I gained a little insight of . . . the caring and considerate individual that you are.

"Certainly I have big shoes to fill and many lessons to learn from your example."

Kaufman, a student of Sheets at Quincy Junior College and later his political aide, asked the rhetorical question: "What do you want in a politician?"

"You want them to be honest," he said. "You want them to tell the truth. You want them to tell it like it is and you want them to be there for all the right reasons.

"Nowhere in America is there a finer politician, a finer man, a finer dad, then my great friend, Jim Sheets."

Dave Madden, the first mayor of Weymouth under the city form of government, credited Sheets with inspiring his community to make the switch.

"Weymouth owes a great deal to Jim Sheets," he said. "They say imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. One of the driving forces that allowed Weymouth to change its government was the way people viewed the city of Quincy over Jim Sheet's tenure. People said, 'Look what Jim Sheets did in Quincy.'"

Elaine Ullian, CEO of the Boston Medical Center, cited Sheets' work in saving the faltering Quincy City Hospital by bringing it under the BMC banner.

"This is the most determined man I ever met," she said. "He refused to lose. He would not give up, no matter what the obstacles were. He parked himself in front of the Congressional delegation and said, 'I'm not leaving until my hospital is saved.'

"I cannot think of a finer legacy that you have given the city of Quincy."

The Red Sox' Gorman, who served as a sailor aboard the USS Salem and was a member of the Salem & Shipbuilding Museum board of directors, recalled that bringing the Salem home to Quincy was an achievement close to Sheets' heart.

"As mayor," said Gorman, "he had the courage to take the Salem to Quincy, to its birthplace. Jim Sheets gave back his life to Quincy."

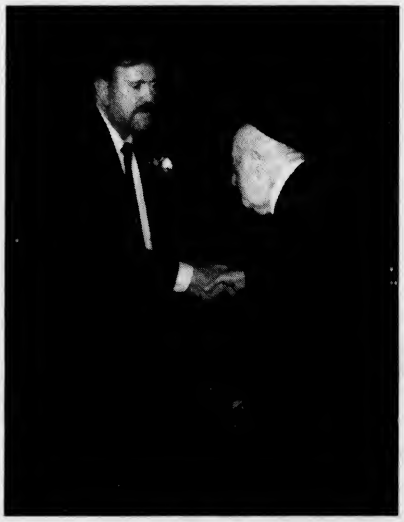
City Council Daniel Raymondi listed the rescue of Quincy Medical Center, and obtaining the Navy's Squantum, Gardens site for senior citizen housing among the former mayor's accomplishments.

"You have served the city of Quincy with vision and unprecedented achievement," he said. "How critical it was for the city of Quincy to have this man's leadership through the 1990s."

One by one, the great, the near-great and the just plain folks of Quincy heaped praise on the man who led the city for longer than any other mayor.

Sheriff Michael Bellotti — "It takes a little time to look in the rear view mirror to appreciate what you have. As we gain a healthy distance from your tenure, you will go down, I believe, as the greatest mayor the city ever had."

State Treasurer Tim Cahill — "He taught me to keep perspective; make politics part of your life but not your whole life. No matter what you succeed in life you'll be judged first and foremost by the family you bring up and raise."



State Rep. Bruce Ayers — "One thing that impressed me was the foresight the mayor had, the love for the city and the planning he had for the city of Quincy."

Simon Chan, real estate man — "I really got to know Jim Sheets and Mrs. Sheets on our trip to China. We both have beautiful, talented, sophisticated wives. Both my wife and I wish Mayor Sheets was still in office. We miss him."

Bob Curry, a member of the Quincy Partnership, told of the impression Sheets made on the natives during a trip to the Amazon region of South America. "He should be an ambassador. He is an ambassador for Quincy. He should be an ambassador for the United States."

RON KAUFMAN, Republican consultant and student of former Mayor James Sheets at then Quincy Junior College, was among those attending. Here he renews acquaintance with former City Council President Jack Lydon.

LONGTIME FRIEND Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue is thanked by former Mayor James Sheets. Rabbi Mann praised Sheets as a man of "religion, honesty and integrity."

Christine Cedrone, vice chairman of the School Committee — "A humble, honest, loving, caring individual who will surely be missed in public office but not forgotten."

Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue — "(Sheets is) a man of religion, a man of honesty, a man of integrity."

Sheets himself noted wryly that he "hadn't planned to leave office as quickly as I did but I will tell you one thought guided me after I left and that is simply, 'Don't cry because it is over; smile because it happened.'

"How many men in their lives are given the opportunity — not many. I wouldn't exchange it for anything else in the world."

The Sheets children, daughter Kim and sons Jimmy, Tad and Luke, honored their mother, Joanna, as much as their dad.

"Many women do noble things but, mom, you surpass them all," said Kim.

"I'm proud and honored to be your son, mom," said Tad. "You've been a tower of power through three decades of public service."

Luke, now a rock musician who lives in Tennessee, compared a politician to a musician in that "the end product of each affects someone. If anyone in my life has been able to affect people its my father."

Jimmy remembered, during the Blizzard of 1978, his father "climbing over a bank of snow seven or eight feet high in the driveway and getting on the snowplow himself to let people know he was there to make sure the streets were plowed."

And to Sheets' wife, Joanna, 43 years of marriage to a politician "has not been boring at all."

"It'll be fun to look back at what we did," she said. "You do so many things you don't have time to really enjoy them. Now I'm going to reflect on that."

The one-day workshop will run from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.. Breakfast and lunch will be provided.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend this educational workshop. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals.

Down payment grants up to $10,000 per family are available. Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

Advanced registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31 or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

NHS Recognizes First-Time Homebuyer

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore (NHS) recently honored a mother of three who purchased her first home on the South Shore with the assistance of NHS.

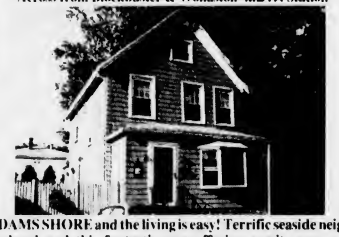
Homebuyer Lauren Crudup was recognized for completing an NHS certified workshop and purchasing her first home in Brockton with the assistance of Citizens Bank's Soft Second Program and NHS' downpayment and closing cost assistance. Crudup received a gift certificate from Home Depot in honor of her accomplishment.

"We are pleased to honor Lauren for taking the initiative to follow her dream," said Kayne Wagner, homeownership center director for NHS. "Her accomplishments should be recognized and set as an example so others who strive for homeownership can achieve the same goal with the help of NHS."

The First-Time Homebuyers Program is sponsored by NHS, an approved Housing Counseling Agency. NHS is certified by Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, the U.S. Department of Housing and Community Development and the Federal Housing Administration.

Once a participant graduates from an NHS certified workshop they are eligible to participate in the many first-time homebuyer mortgage options such as the Soft Second Program and various MHFA downpayment and closing cost grants offered many local municipalities and towns throughout the state.

The First-Time Homebuyer Workshops are open to anyone wishing to purchase their first home. Whether it is a condo, single- or multi-family home, the process can be overwhelming. These workshops are designed to help the first-time homebuyer understand such topics as the buying process and terminology, mortgage options, appropriate price ranges, locating property and downpayment and closing cost grants.



"Being involved in the Brockton Housing Partnership has been very rewarding," said Dwayne Watts, NHS' section 8 to homeownership coordinator. "I'm happy to be working with Brockton residents and professionals as we further explore ways to create homeownership opportunities."

Crudup, with the assistance of Homeownership Center's Assistant Director Janice Tucker, also participated in the Downpayment Assistance Program. NHS has acquired funding from the Department of Housing & Community Development to be used towards downpayment and closing cost assistance for first-time homebuyers.

Buyers can now receive up to 5 percent of the purchase price of the property not to exceed $10,000. This interest free loan is forgiven after the homebuyer resides in the property for five years.

"It was a pleasure to work with Lauren and offer her the funds to make her dream of homeownership come true," Tucker said.

Cleaning Away Allergens In Your Home

(NAPS) For many homeowners the "white glove" has become the ultimate test of whether or not their home is clean. However, the glove only scratches the surface and may not always be a good indicator of a home's true cleanliness.

One thing missed by the white glove test: allergens. Allergens are present in every home and not easily detectable. Whether they come from dust mites that live throughout the house, pet dander that can be spread from room to room even if you don't own a pet, home, managing these allergens can be a real challenge. And, they can be especially hard to reduce in upholstered furniture, bedding, curtains, window treatments, area or throw rugs, and other soft surfaces, which can make up to 75 percent of the surfaces found throughout the house.

"Many people associate allergens only with being outside during the spring and summer months, but allergens are actually present indoors all year long," sayd Bill McLin, executive director of the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America (AAFA). "It is important to take steps to reduce allergens in your home, including those released from fabrics and other soft surfaces."

There are a number of measures people can take to reduce allergens in their homes, many of which can be incorporated easily into an existing home cleaning routine. According to AAFA, homeowners can:

• Regularly replace filters on forced-air furnaces or central air conditioners.

• Frequently dust hard surfaces – including ceiling fans, blinds, floors, and furniture – with an electrostatic cloth that attracts and traps allergens.

• Wash all bedding – pillowcases, sheets, comforters, mattress pads, and blankets – in hot water (130) degrees every week.

• Use an allergen-reducing spray, like Febreze Allergen Reducer, on soft surfaces and upholstered items – like couches, throw pillows, curtains, carpeting, and pet beds – to reduce the amount of allergens from cats, dogs, and dust mites that become airborne from those surfaces.

• Regularly clean rooms in the home that have high humidity, including bathrooms, the kitchen, and the basement.

Tips For Constructing Retaining Walls

(NU) — Each Saturday and Sunday, homeowners flock to local landscape and home centers in hopes of completing projects that will improve the appearance of their home and ultimately increase the resale value.

According to experts at the National Concrete Masonry Association (NCMA), many homeowners are finding that concrete segmental retaining wall units are meeting this objective.

One reason for this, they say, is segmental retaining walls are less expensive than poured-in-place concrete walls and more durable than timber retaining walls. The systems are so easy to install; they do not require mortar or concrete footings.

Here are four tips from NCMA that can ensure the success and long-term performance of segmental retaining walls:

• Contact local utility services to identify the location of underground pipelines, conduits and utility lines.

• Check with local building officials or residential inspection services to determine any requirements for construction certificates or inspection. This is often a requirement when retaining walls exceed four feet.

• Coordinate delivery and storage or materials to ensure unobstructed access to the work area and materials.

• Review the supplier's recommended installation and structural requirements.

For more information on segmental retaining walls, visit www.ncma.org.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

A Total Body Workout For Today's Busy Schedule

A New Dimension In Women's Fitness

When you walk through the doors of Dimensions for Women in North Weymouth, you realize it's nothing like the traditional gyms.

There are no long waiting lines for equipment that is difficult to use. Instead you will find, women of all shapes, sizes and ages, upbeat music, a certified instructor, and a 20-piece circuit of cardiovascular and aerobic equipment that you are able to complete in just 30 minutes.

Dimensions is a recent addition to the South Shore fitness scene with one simple philosophy, a total body workout. The "total body workout" includes a 30-minute workout at least 3 times a week, a healthy diet and education.

GERALDINE STRIVES for her fitness goal at Dimensions for Women, a total body fitness facility located at 300 Bridge St. in North Weymouth.

"We are excited about the prospect of including other resources to complete the package," says Maureen Kiely, co-owner. "We are reaching out to chiropractors, podiatrists, chefs, massage therapists, and others who can bring something special to our members" The newest addition to the staff is Stacy Hadayia, a physical therapist.

Co-owners Anne Welch and Maureen Kiely recently opened the doors. They have always had an interest in fitness and the concept of a 30-minute cardiovascular and aerobic workout was enticing.

"With today's busy schedules, it is often difficult to find time for yourself," Welch said. "They come in, warm up and just 30 minutes later, they are done."

What makes them different from their competitors? Dimensions uses adjustable hydraulic resistance equipment. The ability to adjust the equipment keeps members from hitting a plateau.

The PACEtm equipment, which is also used by the New England Patriots, is simple to use with proven results. Dimensions is working in concert with members to provide more than just the circuit; the plan is to offer lectures and clinics, at no cost to their membership. These sessions will provide an opportunity for members to get their questions answered about everything from nutritious meal planning and proper sneaker fit to low carbohydrate lifestyle and makeup.

Earlier this month, members began receiving a newsletter with informative articles on fitness, recipes, and cost-saving coupons for a local business. It will includes a wellness calendar with scheduled lectures; clinics, circuit times and walkers club times.

Dimensions for Women, open seven days a week, is located (next to Cazeault ACE Hardware) on the busline at 300 Bridge St., Route 3A in North Weymouth.

For more information, call Anne Welch or Maureen Kiely at 781-337-5947.

Common Medications Linked To Dry Mouth

(NU) — Do you take Xanax, Prozac, Claritin or Motrin? Then chances are you are suffering from dry mouth and probably don't even know it, according to Laclede International.

Formally known as xerostomia, dry mouth can result from any one or combination of 400 popular prescription drugs, including diuretics, sedatives and blood pressure medications.

Dry mouth can occur gradually and most people who suffer from it are unaware of its symptoms until they start to develop gum disease. In fact, you can lose more than 50 percent of your saliva production and never realize you are developing dry mouth.

If dry mouth is left untreated, often the result is a significant deterioration in dental health, including gum infections, a higher rate of tooth decay and even tooth loss. The consequences of dry mouth are not only pain and embarrassment, but the condition can lead to expensive dental bills.

If you suffer from dry mouth and need relief, follow these tips to help keep your mouth moist:

- Visit your dentist at least two times a year for cleanings. Your dentist can help identify the cause of dry mouth and recommend treatment.
- Brush and floss daily.
- Avoid tobacco, alcohol, caffeine and spicy or starchy foods.
- Drink water frequently to prevent dehydration.
- Don't use dental products containing the detergent "sodium lauryl sulfate." They increase dryness and can contribute to canker sores. Instead, try products especially for dry mouth relief.

Before dry mouth causes serious harm, call or visit your dentist. To learn more about what you can do to help relieve dry mouth, visit www.laclede.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
A REAL NATURAL

Permanent tooth implants are not new. The jawbones of Egyptian mummies have been found to contain gold-wire implants. What is new is the technology that makes dental implants the most natural tooth-replacement method available today. An implant consists of a titanium screw that is surgically implanted into the jawbone, which will be used as an anchor for a false tooth (or teeth). Because it replaces the root of the missing tooth, a dental implant is as close to the real thing as a dental prosthesis gets. Once a post is attached to the top of the implant to accept the replacement tooth, patients are treated to the real look and feel of their natural teeth.

It's obvious that our smiles (or more specifically, our teeth) are important to us in many ways. Three out of four adults in the United States believe an unattractive smile can hurt one's chances at business success. We'll help you decide if this procedure would be right for you. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer professional dental care including implants, preventive, restorative, and cosmetic services for all ages. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. While age is no barrier to receiving a dental implant, patients need to have healthy, adequate bone to support the implants in order to be viable candidate for the procedure.

Local Team Selected For Babe Ruth World Series

Related Story On Page 27

The kids that will represent Quincy in the upcoming National Babe Ruth World Series were a hit as they marched in last Saturday's annual Flag Day Parade.

"They participated in the Flag Day parade and they were enthusiastically received by the crowd," said Quincy team manager Bob Griffin.

Fifteen players were selected last week to the team that will participate in the World Series to be held Aug. 15-23 at Adams Field in Merrymount Park.

They are listed here with their height, weight, high school, and batting and throwing statistics:

- John Allen, 5'10, 150, North Quincy, right/right.
- Kevin Bossart, 6'0, 140, Archbishop Williams, left/right.
- Wendell Cosgrove, 5'3, 128, Quincy, left/left.

- Zach Stiffler, 5'6, 160, Xaverian, right/right.
- Jared Tucker, 5'11, 165, Quincy, left/left.

"I look forward to the opportunity of coaching the kids and having us represent the city of Quincy in the World Series," said Griffin, whose staff will include coaches Bob Bossart and Wendell Cosgrove.

The team was selected after a two-part process. Last month 29 players attended two workouts where three independent evaluators gave each player a ranking. Griffin, Bossart and Cosgrove then made the final selection after two additional workouts and submitted the roster to Quincy Babe Ruth World Series President Dick Lombardi for approval.

"The hardest thing was cutting some of the kids," Griffin said.

In preparation for the World Series, the Quincy team will participate in the 15-year-old division of the Suburban League starting at the end of the month. After the season, it will play in a series of exhibition games.

Quincy Youth Basketball Registration Saturday

There will be a new game in town this fall — the inaugural year of Quincy Youth Basketball.

The citywide basketball program is for boys and girls in grades 1-10 who are Quincy residents.

Registration for the fall season will be held Saturday, June 21, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Center, 1 Merrymount Parkway. Proof of residency is required along with a certified copy of the player's birth certificate.

Quincy Youth Basketball was formed by a group of seven people, comprising a board of directors, who have shared this idea for some time. The board includes: Michael Covais, Gail Duffy, Moe Duffy, Chris Eleey, Susan Eleey, Jerry Nelson and Jim Triglia. All board members have been involved in youth sports for a number of years.

"Our great city offers all the other youth sports and we thought it was time to make a citywide basketball program available to Quincy's youths as well," said Chris Eleey, president.

"We will have a coed instructional division for boys and girls in grades 1 and 2. Our board of directors feels it is important to offer instruction to children who have never played basketball before. We want a child's first introduction into basketball to be a positive and fun learning experience. We are looking forward to our first season."

Quincy Youth Basketball is unique in its inclusive approach to youth basketball and will benefit both student-athletes and the future of Quincy's youths, Eleey said. This broad-based community sponsored program has the support of Mayor William Phelan as well as other city officials and civic and business organizations.

LATCHING ON

Beginning September 1, 2002, almost every new car and most safety seats were required by federal law to come equipped with a standardized attachment system called Lower Anchors and Tethers for Children (LATCH). New car seats are outfitted with two attachment hooks at the bottom and one at the top. New cars come with fixed metal anchors that correspond to these hooks. If a car does not have lower anchor attachments, most vehicles manufactured since 1989 have predesigned locations for anchors. In addition, most forward-facing safety seats manufactured in recent years have a tether strap even if they don't have lower anchor attachments, so the tether can be used even if the seat is installed with a standard safety belt.

Whatever the age of your car, it is critical for your child's safety that their car seats are properly installed and attached. Many local police departments are offering free checks and help. If you have other problems, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) is your full service center offering customers only the finest in service. We never compromise the wonderful reputation we have earned from our many satisfied customers. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." You can rely on us for the best in automotive service.

HINT: Vehicle manufacturers are only required to provide two LATCH locations in the back seat, and most have opted for outside seats.

Proceeds To Help Pay Pre-Development Costs

Mini-Fenway Auction Fundraiser 'Huge Hit'

A kickoff fund-raiser to help create Mini Fenway Park turned out to be a huge hit last week.

Held in Fenway Park's .406 Club, the event drew a capacity crowd of 500 people who bid on fantasy baseball items and took tours of the real park.

"This is a huge momentum builder," said Ron Iacobucci, who is leading the Mini Fenway Park project. "We have met our goal to raise money to pay some pre-development costs for the project.

"Our fund-raising efforts will continue with our Summer Legend Camps, El Tiante Golf Classic and an auction of the first 100 Mini Fenway Park distinctive license plates."

Project leaders also unveiled a new logo for Mini Fenway Park, designed by Woolfe Associates, with the slogan "Where Dreams Play."

A miniature-sized version of historic Fenway, the park will be built off Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy and will provide baseball, softball and T-ball programs for children ages 4 to 17.

WBZ Sports Director Bob Lobel served as master of ceremonies and he auctioned dozens of baseball items, ranging between $1,000 and $3,000.

Among the items auctioned were: A round of golf with Red Sox pitching great Luis Tiant, four tickets to a Fenway Park luxury box and a visit from Hall of Famer Carl Yastrzemski, a behind-the-scenes tour of the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., and an opportunity for a child to say "Play ball" over Fenway's public address system before a Red Sox game.

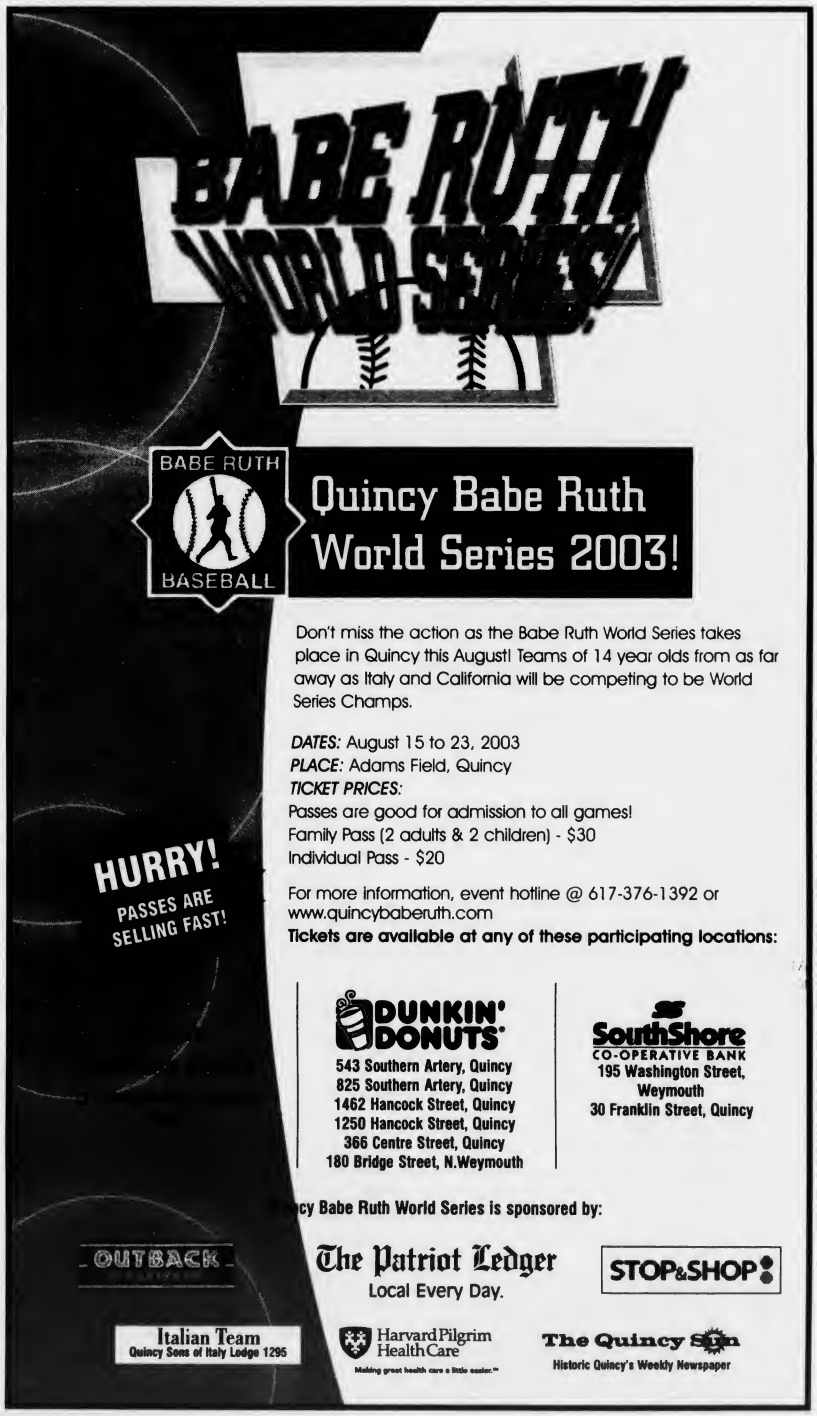
Recreation Dept. Girls' Lacrosse Clinic July 21-25

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces the Girls' Lacrosse Summer Clinic has been expanded to include girls 13 years of age.



The clinic, which will run July 21-25, is being offered for the first time this summer.

"Lacrosse has been growing in popularity in the city and the Recreation Department has both a boys' and girls' program this summer," Welch said. "The girls' program was originally offered for 10 to 12 year olds. However, interest shown by 13 year olds has made us decide to expand the clinic to include this age."

Registration for the program is ongoing at the Quincy Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway. The program will be under the director of Betsy Doherty and will be from 3 to 6 p.m. Cost is $40.

For more information, contact the Quincy Recreation Department at 617-376-1-FUN.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your creative side is enhanced by indulging yourself in as much artistic inspiration (music, art, dance, etc.) as you can fit into your schedule. Take someone special with you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take a little restorative time out of your busy life. Go somewhere quiet this weekend. Or just close the door, turn on the answering machine and pretend you're away.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your advice might be much in demand by family and friends this week. But reserve time for yourself to investigate a project that could have some unexpected potential.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Work-related issues demand your attention in the early part of the week. Family matters dominate Thursday and Friday. But the weekend is yours to spend as you please.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your temper in check as you deal with someone who seems to enjoy showing disrespect. Losing your Leonine cool might be just what the goader hopes to see.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A heated confrontation needs some cool-off time before it boils over. Better to step away than to try to win an argument where emotions overrule the facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone very special in your life finally sends that reassuring message you've been hoping for. You can now devote more time to the tasks you had put aside.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Job pressures begin to ease by the week's end, leaving you time to relax and restore your energy levels before you face next week's emerging challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your spiritual strength helps calm a friend who might be facing an unsettling change in his or her life. An offer to help comes from a surprising source.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) By midweek you could learn some surprising facts about an associate that might cause you to reconsider a long-held view about someone in your past.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) One of those rare-for-you darker moods sets in in the early part of the week. But by Thursday, the clouds lift and you're back doing nice things for people in need.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use that sharp Piscean perceptiveness to reel in more information about a promising offer so that you have the facts to back up whatever decision you make.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you prefer the status quo, you can easily adapt to change when it's called for.

Donald H. Strong, 86

State Elders Official, Co-Founder Beechwood Life Center

DONALD H. STRONG

A funeral service for Donald H. Strong, 86, of Hingham, a minister and former commissioner of the state Department of Elder Affairs, was held yesterday (Wednesday) at Wollaston Church of the Nazarene.

He died June 13 at home.

In 1972, Gov. Francis Sargent appointed Mr. Strong to the position. From 1975 to 1983, he served with the U.S. Administration on Aging during which time he was responsible for planning and monitoring services to the elderly in three New England states.

He sat on several boards and held numerous positions in Quincy and other South Shore towns.

In 1970, he spent two months in Brazil as a consultant to the Brazilian government on the development of community services in low-income communities. In that same year he also assumed the role of executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

He was also a co-founder and past chairman of the board of Beechwood Community Life Center in Quincy.

Mr. Strong graduated from Eastern Nazarene College in 1938 with a degree in theology and philosophy and was ordained a Protestant minister in 1940. In 30 years, he served as pastor at six churches in five states, including Union Congregational Church and First Presbyterian Church in Quincy.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Charity begins at home" is a vastly misused, misunderstood slogan for the reason some people don't realize what charity really is. Charity is not merely giving goods or money to the needy. Such gifts, without love, are merely contributions, a self-levied donation. Charity is love. When you define charity as love, the "Charity begins at home" is an indisputable truism.

Love is silencing the tongue instead of throwing a temper tantrum. Love is being patient, even when another's tongue lashes out. Love is sealing the ear to rumors and scandals. Love is consideration of others; a "do unto others" attitude. Love is courage in showing, by example, a "do as I do" pattern of living, instead of the dictum of "do as I say, not as I do."

When "Charity begins at home" is thought of in this way, the words of Samuel Johnson are especially meaningful -- "It is a most mortifying reflection for a man to consider what he has done, compared with what he might have done." and he might very well have added, the place to start reflecting is right at home! . . .

Quincy College Unveils New Arts And Literary Journal

Strokes of color. Lines of prose. Visions of light.

Creativity and imagination were brought to life recently at the exhibit to launch the new edition of indigo, the arts and literary journal of Quincy College. The event celebrates the talents and accomplishments of students in the Humanities and Fine Arts departments of Quincy College.

In its second year of publication, indigo is an eclectic collection of poetry, short stories, essays, paintings, photography and computer art created by members of the campus community. This year's piece was produced as a calendar with 14 selections chosen from nearly 120 submissions.

According to Quincy College President Sean Barry, who established the first edition last year, the new format was to keep the journal fresh and innovative and to allow people to enjoy the works all year.

"We believe that a calendar, especially one received in April, will have a greater utility than a booklet or traditional journal. From the reactions, the college design team developed a winning concept. This calendar also becomes an introductory piece and potential gift for prospective students," Barry added.

QUINCY RESIDENT Christian Oster stands with his featured poem at the exhibit that launched the new arts and literary journal of Quincy College.

Artists from throughout the South Shore as well as international students from around the world who attend Quincy College submitted their work last Fall to be considered for the journal.

A committee of faculty and administrators juried each submission and presented their selections for publication. Students, whose work was chosen, were invited to bring their families to the event to celebrate their accomplishments in the company of faculty, administrators, staff and community leaders.

BILL HALL and Rose Devito from the Quincy College Financial Aid Office celebrate the release of indigo with Bank of America's Rich Archibald and Julie Menendez, sponsors of the event.

Wollaston resident Christian Oster, a business student at Quincy College, attended the event with his father as well as a few of his professors from the past three semesters. Oster also studies in the Fine Arts department where he hones his skills in screenwriting, acting and writing poetry and short fiction.

His poem "Pacifica" featured on the October page, was inspired by events typical to the life of a college student and young adult. According to Oster it's such real life situations that fuel his writing. indigo served as the ideal outlet for his expression.

"Christian is an enthusiastic student with a great mass of creative energy," said Tom DeSantes, Vice President for Enrollment Management. "His experience is similar to many students, so there is great resonance to his work."

DeSantes formatted the selections and designed the calendar for the committee. The college will submit the piece for consideration in regional competitions.

November's featured artist, Quincy resident Nicole Young is graduating from Quincy College in May. With her associate's degree in psychology, she will be transferring to a four-year school in Boston.

When asked why she uses poetry to express herself, Young said "Poetry completes me. I write only sonnets. I have close to 50 at this point...the reason I love this medium is because it's incredibly expressive and it is able to make sense of what one thinks."

On her selected entry she adds, "I can honestly say that this sonnet would not have been written if it weren't for Quincy College. I have the College to thank for helping me become who I am."

"When people ask what the college experience is all about, we can show them these sonnets, and wonderful works of art," says MaryAnne Hammond, a college administrator and enthusiastic supporter. "We see these students on campus and in classrooms, but now we can see the results of their passion and their studies."

Elizabeth Cannavo graduated last January and returned to the College to celebrate her poem showcased on the March page. Cannavo steers her way through studies while also working as a boat captain; most recently with Harbor Express in Quincy. A Weymouth resident, she will be transferring to the Harvard Extension School and exploring creative writing courses there.

Cannavo says Quincy College gave her the ability to succeed in a college environment. "That's what Quincy College is — the first step to academic confidence."

Quincy College Governor and City Council President Dan Raymondi and wife Sharyn spent time with the artists and guests.

"Here is another reason why the college is an important community resource. In addition to the career programs and traditional courses, students can write, act, paint, draw and celebrate as a community. We're very proud of the students," they said.

Liudmila Selivanova is a Quincy resident originally from Russia. She has worn many hats, including professor of English at the Moscow State Linguistic University and archivist at the Russian Federal Archives.

One of Quincy College's adult students, Liudmila says since childhood she has enjoyed drawing and painting. Starting with pencil and water colors, she now employs acrylics to transform her tranquil, soothing landscapes. Her Indigo entry "Stone Bridge" , placed on the January page, was a favorite among guests at the exhibit for its unusual use of one color to evoke emotion in a finely detailed winterscape.

Barry, who hosted the event at the College's Temple Hall Art Gallery in Quincy Center, said, "The caliber of work collected for the publication clearly reflects the dedication of our faculty who work with our students on a daily basis. indigo is a celebration of the individuals who make Quincy College what it is and the many talents they bring to our campus. We're proud that with the support of Bank of America we can provide this opportunity for our students."

Many professors, administrators and friends of the college made donations to support the production costs and the reception.

Barry also adds that indigo posters featuring one of student paintings are being distributed to administrators, guidance counselors and art teachers at the Quincy high schools and junior high schools to generate interest and awareness of the College's blossoming Fine Arts department.

This new academic program, which will see its first graduates in Spring 2004, was designed to fill a need for a two-year arts degree on the South Shore. Copies of indigo are available by calling Quincy College Student Services at 617-984-1710.

Joe Ceurvels Fires No Hitter For Wollaston P.O.

Babe Ruth International

Joe Ceurvels fired a no-hitter to lead Wollaston Post Office to a 14-0 victory over Screened Image Multimedia in recent Babe Ruth International League action at Bishop Field.

Ceurvels, who mixed a blazing fastball with an occasional curveball, punched out 19 and walked only two. He faced 22 batters, one over the limit as he picked off one of the batters he walked. The only fair ball off him was a groundout to second base.

Ceurvels, who pitched for the North Quincy High School junior varsity team, helped his own cause by banging out a team-high six hits at the plate. Justin Boyd (home run), Dennis Rackauskas, Mark Pepjonovich and Mike Saville all had three hits. Brennan Carey, who caught no-hitter, scored four runs.

For S.I.M., Gary Uvanitte, John Rowland, Tom Henry, Nick Poli and Brendan Murphy played great defense.

Graeber + Davis 6, Everlasting 3

Matt Boyle tossed a one-hitter with 10 strikeouts to notch the win. He scored the winning run by walking, stealing second and third, and crossing the plate on a groundout. Chris Rooney, James Fulti, Mark Demelin and Ronnie MacKenzie had hits. Matt Guerierro and James Sullivan played strong defense.

For Everlasting Engraving, Frank Ricci, Sean King and Zach O'Hara played well. Carl Morris and Dan McAllister led a seventh-inning rally that came up short.

Wollaston 10, Feenan 6

Justin Boyd (3 hits) crushed a towering home run over the left field fence at Pond Street Field as Wollaston Post Office rallied from a 5-0 deficit. John O'Malley and Steve Nelson had two hits apiece and Tony Pepjonovich added a two-run single.

For Feenan Financial, Kenny Patey pitched seven strong innings. Justin Laura, Jason Laura, Scott Richards, Scott Richardson and Laura Leger played well defensively.

Quincy Granite Baseball Bow To Taunton, Play Brockton

The Quincy Granite baseball team was all but happy on Father's Day as it was pulverized by the Taunton Titans, 13-2, at Pond Street Field.

Quincy (3-5) is scheduled to play at the Brockton Red Sox this Sunday, but the game may be changed to Pond Street Field in Quincy at 9 a.m.

Starter Sean MacLean lasted only 3 2/3 innings against Taunton (8-1), allowing eight runs (6 earned) on six hits with three strikeouts and two walks. Brian Deptula gave up five earned runs on five hits in relief.

"Plain and simple," MacLean said, "when you're on, you're on, and when you're not, well . . ."

"These guys (MacLean, Deptula) did what they could," said coach Jason Riley, who was disappointed about his 0-for-3 day and 0-for-7 slump. "We made a handful of errors that, unfortunately, cost us some runs. But the lack of offense displayed did not make it a game to win or lose. We lost straight up."

The Granite did have a few highlights defensively as they turned two double plays. At the plate, MacLean went 3 for 5 with a stolen base and Deptula belted a home run.

"We may have lost this game but our focus is on our next game, the Brockton Red Sox," said second baseman Matt Graham, who has played in all eight games without an error.

NFPA Supports Bill Limiting Damages For Antitrust Suits

The National Fire Protection Agency (NFPA), based in Quincy, is supporting a bill that limits antitrust damages companies can receive when suing agencies that develop safety standards.

The bill, co-sponsored by Rep. William Delahunt, would limit the amount of damages companies can receive in antitrust suits, so long as the standards agencies follow an accountability procedure. The bill mandates that organizations alert the U.S. Attorney General's office when they begin developing or revising a safety code.

The bill passed the House last week.

In 1995, the U.S. Government consolidated the development of technical safety standards, handing the job to private, non-profit agencies like the NFPA. Uniform safety regulations were created across states.

Agencies that develop safety standards seek advice from various builders, enforcement officials, academics and manufacturers, ensuring that the standards are developed collectively and that there is an appeals process.

"There is no anti-competitive motive (among standards developers)," said Delahunt. "It just doesn't exist."

Former Massachusetts Attorney General James M. Shannon, now president and chief executive officer of the NFPA, said the consensus building is where allegations of anti-competitive practices stem from. Companies that must abide by safety standards are increasingly suing the organizations that develop the standards, Shannon told a House Judiciary subcommittee.

Shannon said his organization has spent thousands of dollars fighting what he called "nuisance" antitrust litigation. Although the association has never been found liable for any anti-competitive practices, Shannon said, the lawsuits have been "extremely disruptive to our process."

The bill would allow courts to order plaintiffs to pay the attorney fees of standards development agencies if a lawsuit is deemed unreasonable.

Reps. Barney Frank (D-New Bedford) and Marty Meehan (D-Lowell) are among the co-sponsors of the bill.

223 Affordable Housing Units To Be Built

Squantum Gardens Underway

A groundbreaking ceremony Monday kicked off the beginning of construction of 223 affordable housing units for the elderly at the Squantum Gardens site.

City and state officials joined members of Elder Housing Corporation Inc. (EHC) to commemorate the start of construction.

The project cleared its final hurdle recently when the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency granted a commitment for permanent and construction funding.

Shortly after taking office, Mayor William Phelan committed $250,000 from City HOME funds for the construction of the housing units for seniors in North Quincy.

The city conveyed the land in January, 2001, to EHC, a private, non-profit organization, for one dollar through the sponsorship of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The project began in 1997 when former Mayor James Sheets obtained a designation of "Senior Living Campus" for the closed Naval Housing land. After that, the effort to make Squantum Gardens a reality was a community project.

Mauls Dog, Chases Woman

Coyote Pack In Squantum Attack

A vicious hunting team of four coyotes mauled a 25-pound lap dog for more than 100 stitches and chased a frightened Squantum woman into her house before dispersing early Saturday morning.

"The coyote problem in Squantum has reached critical mass," said Ann Smyth, a nurse who has just moved back to Quincy from California.

Smyth was giving her dog, a white bichon frise named "Henry," an airing in her Landsdowne Street driveway at 3:30 a.m. when the coyotes struck and carried Henry way to a nearby woods.

"This is the time of the year when they are teaching their pups to hunt," she said.

The little dog managed to escape back into the protection of his mistress but the coyotes, she said, came back and stalked her in the driveway. She fled into the house with the wounded dog in her arms.

"I wanted to get into the car and drive Henry to the vets," said Smyth, who is the daughter of former City Councillor J. Vincent Smyth, "but I was too scared. I called the police and they helped me get into the car."

Henry underwent surgery at VCA Hospital in South Weymouth where doctors discovered 25 contusions and applied more than 100 stitches to his wounds.

"He's on narcotics and anti-inflammatory drugs right now," said Smyth. "Already the bill is $1,500 which I can't afford."

Sen. Michael Morrissey, who lives across Landsdowne Street from Smyth, agreed that the coyote problem in Squantum has reached critical proportions.

"I've seen coyotes walking down the street in Squantum bold as anything," he said. "Some have been seen walking on the boardwalk in Marina Bay.

"We've lost a lot of cats in our neighborhood already."

Disputes IG Report

Sheets: Did Nothing Wrong

By TOM HENSHAW

Did former Mayor James Sheets do something illegal when he caused to have removed from his office computers files compiled during his 12 years in City Hall?

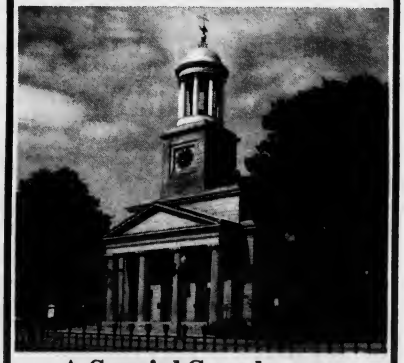
"Yes," says State Inspector General Gregory Sullivan in a 32-page report of his 14-month investigation requested by Mayor William Phelan, who succeeded Sheets in January, 2002.

"No," says Sheets, who told investigators he took with him into retirement only personal files on advice of then City Solicitor Stephen McGrath and sent other documents to their proper departments.

But McGrath told the same investigators that "he could not recall ever giving such advice to former Mayor Sheets."

"It is this office's opinion," said Sullivan's report, "that the removal of the written records from the former Mayor's office and the erasure of the computer records violated the Public Records Law and should not have occurred."

The Secretary of State's office, which supervises the Public Records Law, is looking into the matter.



Eventually, the Inspector General retrieved eight boxes of the missing files, which were turned over to the FBI, which is investigating the possibility of corruption in Quincy's government.

Ahead Of Supreme Court Decision

Quincy Libraries Already Filtering Internet Porn

A recent Supreme Court decision regarding internet pornogrpahy will not affect Quincy's public libraries because the city is already adhering to the law, according to Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

By a 6-3 vote, the high court reversed a ruling by a three-judge panel that the Children's Internet Protection Act, signed into law in 2000, is unconstitutional.

The act requires that public libraries receiving federal aid install commercial filtering software on all terminals or lose the funds.

McLaughlin said the city installed filtering software on virtually all library computers a few years ago.

She said the libraries share a city server that is used by Quincy's schools. Since the schools are required to have filtering software in place, the libraries follow suit, she said.

"We are in good shape with regard to the ruling," said McLaughlin. "It is not going to affect us as far as costs are concerned."

McLaughlin said all but two of the libraries' 90 public computers are filtered.

"If anyone wants to use one of the unfiltered computers we direct people to them," she said. She said children are not allowed to access the unfiltered computers.

McLaughlin said the two computers are unfiltered because sometimes filtering software screens out legitimate sites. In addition, the filtering software is not always effective.

"It is not fool proof, because people can still access pornography even with filters," she said.

The city receives approximately $8,000 annually from the federal government for internet service, she said.

Since Quincy receives federal funding for the internet, the ruling may mean the city must install filtering software on the remaining two computers or lose the money, she said. City officials will be looking into the situation, she said.

Exotic Male Dancers Won't Be Seen Here

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Those women who were looking forward to seeing "Men in Motion" at Club 58 located at 58 Ross Way , will be disappointed.

At Tuesday's meeting of the License Board, Chairman Joseph Shea told the board that James Pansullo, owner with Kevin Ryan of Club 58 had withdrawn his request.

Shea said he had received "lots of calls" both "pro and con" concerning the show which would have featured five exotic male dancers who would have performed on stage on a show for women only.

Shea read a letter from Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, who is chairman of the Quincy City Councils; Downtown and Economics Development Committee. Gutro urged the board to deny the request of Pansullo and Ryan for a floor Show license.

Gutro said he considered the exotic dancing wholly inconsistent with the goal of making the center vibrant and welcoming for families, residents and visitors.

Gutro said he thought the license board would have a difficult time rejecting similar requests from other area businesses.

Shea said he would place the matter on file.

Eddie's And Sophie's Wedding

Eddie and Sophie are getting married.

So?

Well, it's going to be a little different as weddings go.

Eddie, you see, is Eddie's Diner, formerly of Quincy, and Sophie is the old Traveler's Diner from Dover, N.J.

And, they are really going to get hitched in Westport, Mass.

But let me back track a little.

In a recent column I recalled covering the Worcester Tornado 50 years ago this month. And noted I was able to make it to Worcester through roadblocks in a Quincy police cruiser with Dante Pettinelli and Arthur Duffy who were sent to help Worcester police.

And to show my gratitude the following morning after the all-night wild scene in devastated Worcester, I volunteered to pick up the tab for breakfast at Eddie's Diner, an eatery landmark at Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery. Order what you want, I said. And they did: steak and eggs.

I remembered Eddie's being closed in 1993 after a fire. And then in 1998 being carried off to New Bedford where it was supposed to have been restored.

I mentioned I had lost track of it since and wondered if it might have a new life somewhere.

Three readers, Lillian Bolea and Susan Regele of Quincy and Jean Donnelly, formerly of Quincy and now a Hingham resident, quickly let me know Eddie's whereabouts and that it was not in use.

The exact location in Westport is on Hix Bridge Road just off Rte. 88 near Horseneck Beach. It is on the same site as a popular ice cream stand called Handy Hill.

Handy Hill is owned by the Sanford family who now also own Eddie's Diner and the Traveler's Diner.

Bethany Sanford Smith tells us the family has owned Eddie's since 1998 and that it is in need of renovation.

The Traveler's Diner, nicknamed Sophie, was brought up from New Jersey a short while ago.

Plans, Smith says, is to combine the two diners into one large one that will seat 150. It will be designed by professional architects, Smith says.

The merging is being called "Sophie's and Eddie's Wedding."

The work is expected to be completed "a year from now," says Smith. Making it, she muses, a June wedding.

Jean Donnelly says she and a group of her friends would like to be there for the grand opening. They became fond fans of Eddie's some 30 years ago as members of an exercise class that met at the Fore River clubhouse two mornings a week and then headed to Eddie's for coffee and chat.

She remembers the entire back booth at Eddie's being reserved for the group of about 12 on those two mornings.

Members of the group still get together Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at Webster's on Scammel St. "And we are still settling much of the world's problems," she laughs.

They like Webster's. But they miss Eddie's Diner — as do Lillian and Susan and many other who remember it with fondness. The food was great.

Jean says if she and her friends don't make Sophie's and Eddie's "wedding," they would like to hold a reunion there later for old times sake.

In the back booth of the Eddie's section, of course, she says.

Bethany Smith says many people from Quincy stop by when they recognize Eddie's Diner and tell the Sanfords how much it meant to them especially as the last stop on a date night.

"We are going to let everyone in Quincy know when the combined diner is ready for opening," Smith says.

And may Eddie and Sophie live happily ever after.

THAT SAME COLUMN brought back different memories for old friend, Mabel Biagini, the popular Quincy accordionist.

MABEL BIAGINI

Mabel was booked into the Biltmore Hotel in Worcester the night of the tornado and picked up another performer in Boston en route.

"We talked about show-biz and I did not have the car radio on. So we did not know what was happening," she says.

But they started running into roadblocks and detours and wound up in a suburb where she asked a man, "Could you please tell me how to get to Worcester?"

"Lady," he said, " I don't know if you'll ever get to Worcester. There's been a terrible tornado — many people killed and devastation."

"We continued on," Mabel says and soon found evidence of the tornado's wrath.

"We saw 18-wheelers on their roofs, engines embedded in the ground that were once in the trucks. Huge trees up-rooted. Nothing left of houses. Piles and piles of debris. Ambulances going one way and another. I couldn't believe my eyes."

After about three hours, she and her companion arrived at the Biltmore to entertain at a Masonic convention.

"There were about 200 men in the audience," Mabel recalls. "As we were performing the general manager of the hotel would interrupt and stop the show to ask if there were any doctors and undertakers in the audience who were needed.

"This went on until there were only about 25 men left in the audience. It was terrible. Needless to say, none of the acts felt like performing. But as the old saying goes — 'The show must go on.'"

Her mother, Angelina, father, Peter, and sister, Gianna, had watched the devastation on TV and were "worried sick" until she arrived home safely.

"It was an experience that I will never forget," says Mabel.

ON THE POLITICAL front: John Cain has taken out nomination papers for the Ward 3 city council seat held by Kevin Coughlin. Cain ran for the seat in 1999 and 2001.

CAIN

No rush of candidates for the Ward 4 seat incumbent Bryan Connolly is leaving. Atty. Jay Davis is the only official candidate so far.

But there may be another contender. Kevin Worley of Douglas St. has picked up organizational papers.

Observers are somewhat surprised there hasn't been a run on nomination papers for the seat considering Ward 4 is pretty active politically.

Some thought the open seat might bring out a field of candidates such as the six in Ward 1 and the five in Ward 6 where there are open seats.

FABRIZIO

Tom Fabrizio, who lost the Ward 4 seat to Mike D'Amico who in turn lost it to Connolly, has been mentioned as a possible candidate but he's not running. He's quite happy as director of the city's Office of Constituent Services.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1909 real photo postcard view of Apthorp Street in Norfolk Downs. The Barron Souvenir Co. who made many different postcards of Quincy's streets mislabeled this one as Athol Street. There never was a Quincy street named Athol. The view is from the end of Warwick Street on the left looking towards the beach. Many of these houses were built as summer cottages before the Boulevard was built along Quincy's shore.

Today, this street looks substantially different. Not only is it paved, with sidewalks and curbs, and more trees, but also the facades on most of the houses have been changed. Porches have been enclosed and the distinguishable peak roof is long gone from the Victorian style house in the city.

Supports More Firefighters

Four minutes is not a long time. Compared to most things, it is basically a blink of the eye. If you are choking, having a heart attack or trapped in a burning building, then four minutes is literally a lifetime. The Quincy City Council recognized this fact and did something about it. They adopted as an ordinance for the safety of the citizens of Quincy a scientifically established standard by the foremost safety agency in the world. The Quincy City Council assured the citizens of Quincy that when they need help a fully staffed fire truck will be at their home in less than four minutes. The courageous position taken by the council will assure that public safety will be maintained no matter what. The Quincy City Council has done their duty for the citizens of Quincy.

National Fire Protection Standard 1710 was established to supply a community with proper emergency service in an acceptable amount of time. The Quincy Fire Department currently arrives to emergency situations in that allotted time, however, they do not have sufficient staffing to initiate proper fire attack upon arrival. Upon arrival, the driver must operate the pump on the fire truck. The fire officer must size up the emergency and decide whether he can make a rescue or attack the fire first, and with the aid of the nozzle-man enters the burning building praying they do not run out of the 500 gallons of water carried on the truck. By entering this burning building with only one man outside, they are violating federal law and numerous safety codes, but firefighters do not think of their own safety in an emergency, rather, they are more concerned with saving the lives of others and protecting property.

The staffing level of the Quincy Fire Department has been reduced over the years from 280 firefighters in the pre-Proposition 2 1/2 era to 205 today. In that time the city has grown exponentially. Developments such as Marina Bay, Crown Colony, Rose Cliff, Quarry Hills and now Highpoint have increased the fire load in Quincy. Yet the fire department has continued to be funded and staffed at a less than adequate level. Chief Paul O'Connell stated that although the citizens of Quincy are safe, the Quincy firefighters are not. The Quincy firefighters know this and continue to place their lives in greater danger than ever before for one reason, someone needs help.

It has been stated that by implementing NFPA standard 1710 the City of Quincy will have to hire 40 new firefighters. However, if the Quincy Fire Department was staffed at its normal level, a significantly less number will have to be hired. Furthermore, with proper staffing, the first two steps of 1710 could be implemented without hiring one additional firefighter. This fact is important knowing that the first additional firefighters would have to be hired as late as July 1, 2007.

For the first time in Massachusetts, a community has established a level of protection for its citizens. A priority has been set to keep this city safe no matter what. From here on, pet projects and pork barrel items must come after public education and public safety issues. From now on, when budgets are drafted in the City of Quincy, the city council has insured the citizens that their children will be educated, and their lives and property will be safe. After all, isn't that the promise a government owes its citizens?

Time To Smell The Smoke And Ban

The Cambridge City Council recently voted to join Boston and 76 other Bay State communities in banning smoking in all workplaces, including restaurants and bars. The vote was 9 to 2.

The Somerville Board of Health voted for a workplace smoking ban three days later.

The Somerville ban only exempts private clubs where employees are all members. There was very little debate in both communities. Both cities will put the smoking ban in effect Oct. 1.

Meanwhile, the Quincy City Council continues to debate the issue. Kudos to Health Commissioner Drew Scheele for pushing the council to adopt a smoking ban ordinance. He stated he will continue to press the council to act on this issue. Scheele said if nothing happens this year, it will be proposed again next year.

The arguments against the ban get weaker and weaker with time. Most opponents of the measure here and elsewhere say we should just wait until the statewide ban happens. Presently, it's up on Beacon Hill awaiting passage in the House after passing in the Senate.

The question isn't if a smoking ban is coming. The question is only when. Quincy needs to join with the 77 other Massachusetts cities and towns in passing local smoking bans which then will lead to a statewide ban.

Second-hand smoke is public enemy No. 1. Scheele says it "is the No. 1 preventative cause of death." He's right. People have a right to smoke if they so choose. Cigarettes aren't illegal. However, I have a right to go out to dinner without getting someone else's smoke down into my lungs. We all have rights. Smoking bans create smoke-free environments in our restaurants and bars, which will benefit all of us. Freedom to smoke. Freedom from smoke.

Second-hand smoke isn't just nasty, it's unhealthy too. It is time for the Quincy City Council to smell the smoke and ban it.

City Employees Asked To Make Salary Donations

This Week
1932
71 Years Ago

Mayor Thomas McGrath this week called on city employees for further salary donations to help the city weather the bad times.

Employees had earlier contributed two weeks salary.

McGrath said the city's immediate economic was bleak. Revenue was down, and state contributions were below that of 1931. At the same time welfare work had increased in the city.

McGrath asked the city employees for their help while the city made necessary financial adjustments.

NAVY THIEVES CRACK COURT SAFE

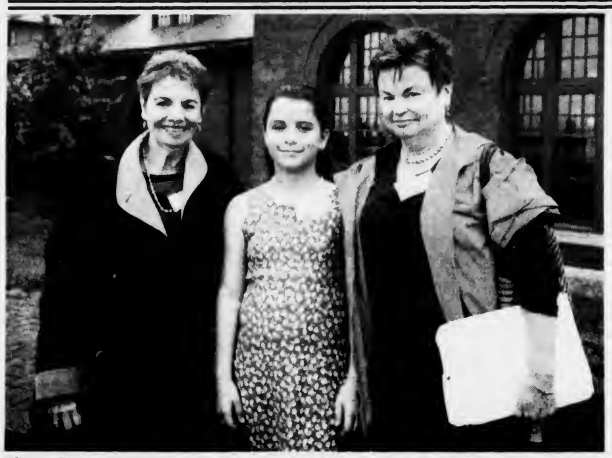
Burglars came into the halls of justice this week to take $350 from the safe in the Quincy District Courthouse. Complaint slips were used as torches to light the work of cracking the safe in the clerk's office.

The break was discovered by John Otto, assistant custodian.

Upon discovery, Otto called the police and various court officials: clerk Lawrence Lyons; chief probation officer Edward Avery; custodian Ted Hunt and court officers Amos Loring and Arthur Hultman.

Police expressed belief the job was that of professionals. And judging from the manner in which they operated the robbers were familiar with the interior arrangement of the courthouse.

O'ROURKE PLAYGROUND DEDICATED



City officials joined local veterans in paying tribute to John J. O'Rourke, disabled veteran, at the dedication of the West Quincy playground in his honor.

The ceremonies were under the direction of Morrisette Legion Post, with the assistance of Councillors Arthur Drohan and George McDonald and members of the park board.

A Peaceful Atmosphere At 15 Quincy Ave.

Allure Spa: Sanctuary For The Body, Soul

By SHEILA HALLORAN

In the heart of Quincy Center, amidst the hustle and bustle of the City's traffic, lies a serene escape from the burdens of every day life.

From the outside, the appearance of Allure Spa may deceive the common passerby. The quaint, home-like appearance of the building could mislead potential customers into perceiving the Spa as limited in amenities and services offered. However, step inside its Quincy Avenue doors and enter an impressive and inviting two-story sanctuary for the body and soul.

According to owner and Trinidad native Sandra Ishmael, Allure is a spa like no other on the South Shore. What entices Allure's clients is the peaceful atmosphere that Ishmael has sustained since the Spa opened in 1994.

When Allure opened it consisted of only the first floor of its 15 Quincy Ave. location. "When everything was on one level services were fast, which took away from the peacefulness," said Ishmael, who wanted to create something to differentiate her Spa from other spas.

In 1999, Ishmael and her husband purchased the second floor of the building and expanded Allure into a lavish two-story business, complete with a second-floor lounge that offers a place for clients to rejuvenate and relax after a service.

Allure prides itself on its luxurious second-story lounge. The lounge offers clients a quiet place to linger prior to and following a service. A large front window and multiple skylights invite the sunlight in, while a fireplace, set within an ornate stone wall, provides added warmth during those long winter months.

Furnished with oversized plush couches, the lounge offers clients a place to enjoy the complimentary refreshments of coffee, tea and delectable sweets, provided by the Spa.

A TWO-STORY sanctuary for the body and soul awaits patrons at Allure Spa, located at 15 Quincy Ave. in Quincy Center.
Quincy Sun Photo/Trish Bossart

Allure Spa offers a vast array of amenities, including everything from facials and massage therapy to salon services and gift packages. Allure recently took one step further with the addition of a Board Certified Facial Plastic Surgeon to their staff.

Dr. Der Sarkissian, who began client consultations at Allure on Monday, will be available at Allure bi-weekly on Mondays. Dr. Der Sarkissian is the Director of the Division of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery at Boston Medical Center and an Assistant Professor of Facial Plastic Surgery at Boston University School of Medicine.

Ishmael stated that prior to Dr. Der Sarkissian's first day at Allure, clients had already booked consultations with him. She added, "Allure's clients are excited about this new addition to the Spa."

Dr. Der Sarkissian will be available for services such as skin enhancement including Botox, collagen, laser resurfacing, and scar improvement; skin cancer treatment; and a multitude of other facial surgeries.

Because of all the Spa has to offer, Allure is often the place of choice for many wedding, birthday, and corporate parties. The spacious lounge can accommodate as many as 20 people at one time, if not more. Having such ample space to be able to cater to such groups sets Allure apart from many of its competitors.

"Giving the gift of spa services is a great way to say thank you to employees and friends," said Ishmael.

Services at Allure Spa are intended for anyone, at any age, who wishes to indulge in rejuvenating amenities while restoring balance to everyday life.

Nominations Open For Neat Neighbors Contest

Nominations are now open for the Quincy Park Department's annual Neat Neighbors Contest.

The contest recognizes residents that maintain their homes and properties in the spirit of a cleaner and greener Quincy.

Each year, the Park Department chooses 25 winners from throughout the city that keep their properties looking beautiful. Winners are given a lawn sign highlighting their designation as a Neat Neighbor and a gift certificate to a local garden center.

"Many of our residents spend countless hours keeping their properties looking great and we all benefit from the aesthetic impact of their world," said Mayor William Phelan. "Well-maintained properties make beautiful neighborhoods and beautiful neighborhoods make a beautiful city."

Residents can call the Park Department at 617-376-1254 to nominate a friend, relative or neighbor. Nominations will be accepted through Sept. 5. Winners will be announced in mid-September.

There is no competitive judging involved in the Neat Neighbors Contest. Winners will be chosen at random from all nominations that meet the minimum requirements of the contest.

"We are proud to recognize those Quincy residents that take pride in their properties and keep them looking nice," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments. "They set a great example for all of us to keep our city clean and beautiful."

Best Selling Author Appears At Marina Place

The residents of Marina Place, an assisted living community located in Marina Bay in North Quincy, were recently treated to a special appearance by best selling author Susanna Rowson.

The unusual twist is that Rowson's best-selling work, "Charlotte Temple," was published in 1791. In fact, actress/historian Jessa Piata dressed in period garb assumed the author's identity and told and interesting tale about the local novelist's life and achievements.

Marina Place residents and guests learned of Rowson's early struggles, her deportation to England from Hull during the Revolutionary War and her return to America seeking a career as a stage actress and ultimately as an educator.

They marveled at her ability to open and successfully operate The Academy for Young Ladies in Boston until her death in 1824. Jessa Piata, who has appeared as many historical characters at Marina Place, offered a program that was certainly well researched and very entertaining.

Residents are presently looking forward to The Fourth Annual Marina Place Dog Show, scheduled to take place Saturday, June 21, at 2 p.m. The event will benefit the Quincy Animal Shelter and is open to the public.

There are many unusual categories in which dogs will be judged. Heather Garre, owner and operator of Tail Wagging Dog Training, will be the judge.

Adams Biographer David McCullough To Visit Adams Historical Park July 2

David McCullough, noted historian and author of John Adams, will kick off this summer's "Preserve Our Heritage" campaign by visiting the Adams National Historical Park, 135 Adams St., on Wednesday, July 2 from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.

McCullough is expected to read a passage from the Declaration of Independence, and local children will sign a large copy of the document to signify its importance to the area.

The event is sponsored by Colombo Yogurt, a company with roots in Massachusetts since 1929. The company hopes to raise $100,000 for Adams National Historical Park, a part of the National Park Service, to preserve John Quincy Adams' commissioned proof copy of the Declaration of Independence.

DAVID McCULLOUGH

In 1823, John Quincy Adams identified that the original Declaration was deteriorating so he commissioned duplicates be made in the hope of preserving it for generations to come.

The park intends to use the remainder of the money to preserve other notable artifacts related to Massachusetts' role in "Independence."

Quincy native Jeffrey Clifford, an assistant district attorney for Suffolk County, was promoted to a position in the Gang Unit.

He will be responsible for indicting and prosecuting gang-involved defendants in Suffolk Superior Court.

Clifford is also a member of the Suffolk County Homicide Response Team, which responds to the scene of homicides and suspicious deaths in Suffolk County.

Clifford, a resident of Hanson, recently served as the Rapid Indictment Prosecutor in the Juvenile Unit where he indicted and prosecuted juvenile and adult offenders for violent crimes involving firearms in Juvenile and Superior Court.

JEFFREY CLIFFORD

Prior to coming to Suffolk County, he was assistant regional counsel for the Massachusetts Department of Social Services. He began his career as an assistant district attorney in Norfolk County, assigned to the Quincy District Court.

Atherton Hough PTO Presents Two Scholarships

Michael Quilty and Shawn P. Gibbons have won scholarships from the Atherton Hough School Parent Teachers Association as graduating high school seniors who attended the Houghs Neck school for at least three years.

Quilty was given the James "Red" Riley Award and Gibbons the Edward Baccari Award. Their names were drawn by lottery at the annual meeting of the Quincy Education Association.

Local Law Firm Partners With Beechwood Knoll School

Students at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School got more than a set of new bookshelves recently.

The Quincy students and administrators also formed a school/business partnership with the law firm of Graeber, Davis & Cantwell, P.C.

Partners from the firm were on hand at the library to see the sleek new shelves, which were built by Beechwood family member Brian McClausky with money for materials donated by Graeber, Davis & Cantwell and Colonial Federal Savings Bank.

Librarian Donna Dunbar said the school would not have been able to build the bookshelves without the help of Graeber, Davis & Cantwell, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, and Mr. McClausky.

"This was very exciting for us," Dunbar said. "They really went above and beyond."

Attorneys Jeff Graeber, Jay Davis and Jim Cantwell were also on hand to sign a partnership agreement with the school they expect will enrich the educational experiences of students. The firm will soon recreate a courtroom scene at the elementary school to help students better understand the law, as well as sponsor other supplementary educational activities.

"We are grateful for this opportunity to lend our support to the Quincy school system and look forward to having a long and productive relationship with students and staff at Beechwood Knoll," Jay Davis said. "It's our hope that we can work with the educators to teach children about the law while also fostering a positive image of the legal profession."

Opposes Ordinance

McCauley: Conduct Study Before Hiring Firefighters

Councillor Frank McCauley has reiterated his opposition to a council-approved ordinance that dramatically increases the number of firefighters in the city.

At last week's city council meeting, McCauley and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro voted against the adoption of an ordinance that establishes a minimum-manning standard in the fire department. Overall, the council approved the measure on a 7-2 vote.

FRANK McCAULEY

McCauley said he voted against the proposal because the issue is currently the subject of contract negotiations between the city and firefighters' union.

In addition, McCauley said the city should conduct a study of the fire department and its needs before implementing any major changes. The new ordinance would add approximately 43 firefighters to the payroll over a five-year period, he said.

Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick stated that the annual cost of plan would top $8.5 million at the conclusion of the phase-in period.

"Common sense would dictate that the study should be completed before any major change in the fire department operations are adopted," said McCauley. The council approved a fire study last week also.

McCauley said the firefighters' union sent letters to councillors asking them to appear before the union's Executive Board and explain their position on local issues. McCauley said the letter noted that the Executive Board "may choose to recommend the candidate to the membership for endorsement."

"It has been my policy in recent years not to seek political endorsements from either private sector or public sector unions in order to maintain impartiality to better serve the citizens of Quincy," said McCauley.

He expressed concern over the possibility that councillors may have been put in the position of supporting the ordinance in order to receive the union's endorsement.

McCauley said he has great respect for the Quincy Fire Department, having had members of his family who served many years in the department. He said he would consider any recommendations that come from the results of the fire study.

Michael Roberts Merrimack Graduate

Michael Roberts of Quincy graduated from Merrimack College in North Andover with a degree in political science.

QTA Urges Veto Of Firefighter Ordinance

The Quincy Taxpayers' Association (QTA) urged Mayor William Phelan to veto the controversial council-backed ordinance that seeks to increase the number of firefighters in the city.

In a letter to Phelan, QTA President Alan Cousin said the measure is too costly and would result in cuts to city services, the closing of fire stations or the removal of fire equipment from service. He estimated the costs of implementing the ordinance would approach $8.6 million over the first five years, and an additional $2.7 million each year thereafter.

Last week, the city council voted 7-2 in favor of establishing a minimum-manning standard in the fire department. The city would have to hire an additional 40 firefighters to satisfy the standard, as outlined by the National Fire Protection Association.

Cousin said supporters of the ordinance have not made the case for hiring more personnel.

"No one has shown that public or firefighter safety are compromised by current staffing levels," said Cousin.

In addition, he said no other community in Massachusetts has adopted such an ordinance.

"This gives us good reason to wonder why it's necessary," said Cousin. "We all support fire protection, and we all support our firefighters. But that doesn't mean we support having more than we really need."

Century 21 Annex Realty's Gus Confalone
Brokers Sale Of Unique 19th Century Property

Quincy's Only Functional Stable Sold

THE CITY'S ONLY functional stable, located at 629 Willard St., West Quincy, was recently sold for $600,000. Realtor Gus Confalone of Century 21 Annex Realty with owner Mary Beth McGee and Pat Edraos with two of the stable's 16 horses: Custer (left), an Appaloosa; and Bramble (right), a Quarterhorse. McGee and Edraos are co-owners of the Blue Hills Riding Center which operates from the stable.

Art Foley, owner/broker of Century 21 Annex Realty, announces Gus Confalone, a Realtor based in the company's Quincy office, recently brokered the $600,000 sale of Quincy's only functional stable.

Mary Beth McGee of Roslindale, who was the property's most recent tenant, purchased the three-quarter-acre site, located at 629 Willard St. in West Quincy. The stable is the site of the former St. Moritz Equestrian Center.

Confalone, a 14-year real estate sales veteran, said the listing presented a special challenge.

"There are no other properties like this, anywhere in the region," he said. "It is rare to see a stable in the city."

McGee is the General Manager of the property's new Blue Hills Riding Center, which she oversees with co-owner Pat Edraos. Both lifelong horseback riders, they maintain the daily operations of the stable, which currently houses 16 horses of varying breeds, including Appaloosa, Hackney, Shetland and Arabian. Some of the horses are privately owned, while others are used for their school's riding program, which offers individuals a chance to learn horsemanship and safety basics.

"We accommodate people of all ages, from kids who are first-time riders, to adults preparing for a horseback vacation," McGee said. " One of our students is learning how to rope horses."

McGee and Edraos are working to foster community relations and boost recognition for the riding center. They plan to host a social for their neighbors in the near future and are sponsoring a horse show for their student riders Sunday, June 29.

"The public's interest level in the riding center is constant," Edraos said. "During the huge blizzard last February, we got a phone call from someone who wanted to know if we were booking appointments!"

Foley said selling a property of this caliber takes knowledge and diligence. Confalone's experience allowed him to easily navigate the complexities of this one-of-a-kind listing.

"We congratulate Gus for his outstanding work as a broker on this sale," Foley said. "His commitment to superior customer service helped his client achieve the dream of ownership."

Expert Insider Tips To Help Sell Your Home

(NAPS) – Experienced real estate salespeople know that one easy way to make top dollar when selling a home is to improve the way it smells.

"The top two reasons people are immediately turned off when viewing a home are sight and smell," said Mark Seiden, a top agent who sold more than $47.5 worth of homes last year alone. "Believe it or not, many houses lose thousands of dollars because of bad smells, especially pet, smoking and cooking odors that tend to linger."

The way a home smells can have a direct impact on the prospective buyer's overall perception of a house, even before they've viewed the entire home. A pleasant fragrance makes a home warm and inviting, making prospective buyers feel more comfortable.

Seiden recommends the fresh, clean smell of lavender (which can help evoke feelings of calm and serenity) and anything "cheerful" and crisp (known to help lift spirits).

For example, the innovative Air Wick® Decosphere™, which last six weeks, come in such soothing fragrances as Lavender & Freesia, Jasmine & Kiwi, and Papaya & Mango.

"It's colorful and decorative, so it's nice to display," says Seiden. "I prefer using Air Wick products, because they can be found in any drug or grocery store and can be purchased for under $5, an inexpensive way to help sell your home for every penny that it's worth."

If unpleasant lingering smoking odors are a problem, try using a fragrance that neutralizes bad air instead of covering it up, such as Air Wick Tobacco Odor Neutralizer Scented Oil.

Doing so can increase the chances of impressing prospective buyers with the care you take of your home – thereby making them more likely to buy than just look.

When selling your home, knowledge is key, being prepared is a must, and remember a nose knows a good thing when it smells one. For more tips from a top expert, visit www.homeman.net.

REAL ESTATE

From Cabins To Condos:

Second Home Ownership At Historic Highs

(NAPS)—Whether it's a rustic cabin in the woods or a luxury poolside condo, the private getaway retreat is a hot commodity. Second home ownership is at historic highs, according to the National Association of Realtors (NAR) and the U.S. Census Bureau.

Low interest rates, recent tax reform benefits and recreation-minded Baby Boomers with healthy equity in their primary residences are all fueling the second home market. Financial analysts also say vacation real estate is an appealing, stable investment alternative. In fact, the number of buyers cashing out securities to acquire second homes more than doubled during the last two years, the NAR reports.

Nevertheless, most American buyers purchase a second home to use as a family retreat, not just as an investment. And, over half choose a vacation home within 200 miles of their primary residence, preferring an accessible home-away-from-home, rather than an exotic vacation spot.

"As Americans reassess their priorities and opt for more time with close friends and family, a second home provides fun and togetherness in a familiar, worry-free environment," says Mike Short, design director for Sauder, America's leading manufacturer of RTA furniture.

Short and his staff suggest these tips for creating a care-free, family-oriented getaway haven:

• Seek out low-maintenance decorating elements, advises Short. "The goal is to create a casual setting that requires minimum upkeep," he says. Bright, washable painted walls, sturdy slipcovers and flooring, and easy-care laminate furniture finishes make a hassle-free atmosphere.

• Select furnishings that reflect timeless pleasures and relaxation, such as country and cottage-style designs. Although over half of the nation's second homes are in rural areas, today's casual looks are at ease in any environment. Sauder's Harbor View collection, for example, offers nostalgic details, such as an antique white finish, bead board treatments, louvered doors and pewter-toned bin pulls.

• Don't sacrifice contemporary comforts. "People want privacy, not isolation, in their second homes," Short says. "So, technology needs to be gracefully accommodated." Cottage-styled entertainment and computer centers from Sauder are designed to house 21st-century electronics, including today's popular large-scale TV screens and computer components.

• Make life easy with designated storage for each major activity. Sauder's Harbor View Storage Cubby, for example, keeps items readily accessible with ample dividers, shelves and hooks for organizing fishing gear, gardening tools or picnic paraphernalia.

• Plan a central gathering spot, whether a cozy fireplace, a hearth-like home theater or a commodious table, to nurture togetherness. Short notes, "For family bonding across the generations, stock up on old-fashioned board games or jigsaw puzzles as well as classic videos and DVDs."

• Bring the outside in, with oversized windows and outdoor-themed upholstery that sports animal and landscape motifs.

Bringing The Outdoors In

(NAPS) – Many homeowners are discovering a way to enjoy a warmer winter, an earlier spring, an entire summer and an autumn that lingers a little longer. How? By building new sunroom additions or retrofitting their porches, decks and patios.

A well-designed patio room can offer year-round protection from the elements. Cold or wet weather, insects, dust and debris are kept out, while sunshine and the beauty of the outdoors are invited in.

For example, PGT ®Industries' custom-built line of NatureScape® Patio Rooms, which can feature Eze-Breeze® sliding panels, allow you to enjoy fresh air and an outdoor experience while staying inside.

You can have the pleasure of the sights and sounds of birds, butterflies, insects, thunderstorms, wind, rain and snow – but not the problems of biting winds or biting bugs.

Pets can appreciate a patio room too. The room lets "indoor" pets enjoy a little "outside" time in safety and comfort.

Do you need a quiet place to relax and enjoy the sunshine in comfort? A patio room offers an unobstructed view allowing sunshine to stream in. The natural lighting creates an outdoor setting in the cozy confines of the home.

For a free brochure about patio room living, call toll-free, 877-550-6006 or visit the Web site at www.pgtindustries.com for more information.

Keep Air Conditioning In Check

(NAPS) — The warmest days of summer have many of us turning down our thermostats in search of comfort. To keep cool this summer, without sending your utility bills soaring, follow these tips:

• Turn the thermostat up when you're going to be away from home for more than eight hours.

• Install a programmable thermostat to automatically raise the temperature when you're away from home and lower it before your return.

• Don't obstruct airflow. Keep plants and landscaping three feet away to ensure proper airflow.

• Clean or change air filters monthly, and more often if the air conditioner is in constant use, operates in dusty conditions, or you have pets. A dirty filter causes your air conditioner to work longer and harder, resulting in increased utility bills and more wear and tear on the unit.

• When the sweltering days subside, use fans to keep air circulating and cool your home.

• How old is your equipment? Older models may not be as energy efficient and you may save money by installing a more energy efficient model.

• Have your cooling system checked early in the year by a NATE-certified technician to insure optimum performance.

Jim Bottary Candidate For Ward 1 Council

JIM BOTTARY

Jim Bottary of Pawsey St., Houghs Neck officially announces his candidacy for the open Ward 1 city council seat.

"The fiscal realities of today and the declining city services along with my love for my community have influenced my decision to seek election as the new Ward 1 councillor," Bottary said.

Bottary, 39, is service manager for KAM, Inc. and past owner and operator of Guaranteed Appliance Repair, Inc.

He is a lifelong Quincy resident, educated in the Quincy public schools and is a graduate of Northeast Institute of Technology in Boston.

He and his wife, Karen, have three children, Jimmy, John and Amanda.

Active in the community, he is a member of the HOPE Playground committee, a volunteer with the Quincy High School and Center for Technical Education Police Academy, co-chairman and co-founder of the Houghs Neck July 3rd Family Day, group organizer for the Cleaner Greener Quincy project.

He is vice-president of the Quincy Gourmet Club and co-founder of the Peter Finley Educational Scholarship for aspiring chefs and a member of the Quincy Yacht Club.

He has catered dinner fundraisers for park improvements in Houghs Neck and Adams Shore. He recently volunteered to prepare a dinner for students at the Broad Meadows Middle School Awards Night.

Bottary has volunteered as a Cub Scout den leader, YMCA basketball coach, Houghs Neck Tee Ball coach and is a parent volunteer at Atherton Hough School.

Bottary said issues of public safety and quality of life are a top priority with him.

"Our police and fire departments do a fine job but their budgets do not allow for growth," he said. "With today's uncertainty, fundamentally, we need to be assured that our public safety cannot and will not be compromised under any circumstances."

He said the condition of the streets and sidewalks are issues he wants to address and is committed to having the matters resolved.

"My experience has shown a proven commitment to my community and to its residents," he said. "I would like to expand my dedication to the residents of Ward 1 by serving as the next Ward 1 councillor."

Council On Aging Board To Address Senior 'Safety Zones' Today

The Quincy Council on Aging Board will address the subject of senior citizen "safety zones," at its monthly meeting today (Thursday) at 2 p.m. in the Park and Recreation conference room, 1 Merrymount Parkway, adjacent to Adams Field.

Proposed by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the home rule petition establishing safety zones was recently approved by the city council. It moves to the state Legislature for consideration.

If enacted, the measure would set up safety zones near publicly or privately owned senior citizen facilities throughout the city. The proposal calls for changes in speed limits, signalization, signage and re-striping of the roadways near the facilities.

John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging, said the board supports the home rule petition.

"Such safety zone protection, as 20-mile per hour traffic control, blinking signalization and signage, is urgently needed for the protection of Quincy's seniors in these facilities," he said.

Noonan said during the seven-year period in which he served as a senior advocate on the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Quincy Center Concourse there were seven pedestrian fatalities within a one-mile radius of the location where the downtown connector roadway was to be built. Five of those killed were senior citizens, he said.

Meeting June 30 To Address Sewer, Water Project

There will be a neighborhood meeting to discuss the first phase of the Quincy Shore Drive Sewer & Water Main replacement Project on Monday, June 30 at 7 p.m. at the Beachwood Knoll School, 225 Fenno St.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and representatives from the Department of Public Works and Weston and Sampson Engineering will attend to present an overview and answer questions.

In 2002, the City of Quincy appropriated $5.8 million to replace old and leaking sewer lines along portions of Quincy Shore Drive and 11 neighboring streets between W. Elm Ave. and Bayfield Rd. The project seeks to alleviate sewage blockages and backups and improve water quality in the area.

Gutro said the meeting will address specific concerns, such as an overview of the project, work hours, contact information and subsequent road resurfacing and sidewalk replacement information.

Reception For Keener June 24

A reception for William Keener, candidate for Ward 6 city councillor, will be held Tuesday, June 24, from 6 to 9 p.m. on the VIP Deck at Water Works, Marina Bay.

Suggested donation is $50.

The reception is being hosted by Atty. Michael Riley and Atty. Peter Eleey.

The Healing Of Acupressure

By BARBARA BLANCHARD

Asian bodywork therapy, Acupuncture and Chinese herbs are the three major healing arts of Chinese medicine. Acupressure is a recognized style of Asian bodywork therapy certified by the national professional association, the American Organization for Bodywork Therapies of Asia (AOBTA).

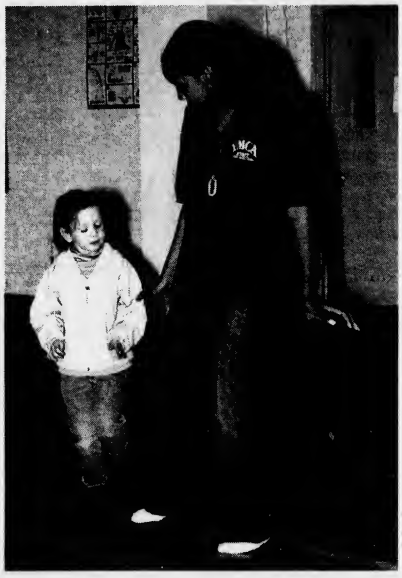
Acupressure is a healing modality that emphasizes balancing the energy body or energy system with the physical body, mind and spirit. An integral part of Chinese medicine, Acupressure is similar to Acupuncture that it used the hands rather than needles to adjust energy flow. Students of Acupressure learn the same meridians and acupoints that are used in Acupuncture as well as the Asian bodywork therapy known as Shiatsu (from the Japanese "shi" finger and "atsu" pressure).

Originally developed from the ancient Chinese massage technique Anmo, shiatsu evolved in the early 1900's in Japan. It is based on the concept of Qi:- the body's vital life force flowing through defined channels or meridians along the surface of the body. When the body's vital energy flow or Qi is normal harmonious, the body is balanced and healthy. Pressure pain at an acupoint can reflect an imbalance. Acupressure points are specific locations along the meridians where the flow of Qi gathers in vortices spiraling in inward and outward directions. Therefore, stimulation of these acupoints by rubbing, pressing, massaging, tapping, applying heat moxibustion, or magnetic therapy will encourage deep muscular relaxation, circulation of blood and Qi balancing. A person will experience varying sensitivity at these acupoints depending on his/her condition. Sensations of softness, hardness, soreness, ticklishness, pulsation, heat or cold reflect obstruction in the energy along the meridian pathway.

An Acupressure therapist develops the ability to "read" the points and understand the energetic condition of the individual reflected in the sensitivities of these points. Pressure pain at an acupoint can reflect an imbalance along the meridian on which it is located or a corresponding area or an associated organ. Assessment of a person's condition also includes traditional parameters of pulse, tongue, observation, interrogation, and especially palpation of abdomen and back.

An Acupressure Shiatsu treatment traditionally is done on a special shiatsu futon mat with the recipient wearing loose cotton clothing. Gentle yet firm pressure is applied along the meridians of the arms, legs, back, neck and head to open the pathways to Qi flow. Specific acupressure points are chosen and held in combinations to further balance the Qi. Oftentimes, the rhythm of shiatsu technique and the acupressure to the point sequences form a dance-like movement that lulls the recipient into a deep state of relaxation.

Acupressure Shiatsu can address common problems such as low back pain, PMS, headaches, weak immune systems, digestive problems and more. Trained Acupressure practitioners spend years refining their ability to assess and treat energy imbalances associated with illness and pain. The practitioner must develop a finely tuned sense of touch to find the acupoints indicated for best treatment. The recipient will often respond when the therapist gets right "on the point." There is usually a pleasure-pain sensation, the point may feel sore but it will feel good to have the pressure applied. The sensitivity at the point changes as the muscles relax, the body's circulation opens, and the Qi is balanced. Both the client and practitioner often work on a deep energetic state of calm and quiet, the mind blending with the heart in a meditative awareness of inner self and Qi flow.



Barbara Blanchard Lic. Ac., Dipl. Ac., Dipl. ABT. A certified instructor of the AOBTA and teacher for more than 20, she is the founding director of the Acupressure Therapy Institute in Quincy. For more information call 617-697-1477.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

While dentists may use dental exams to focus on the health of teeth and gums, the scope of dental exams has changed in recent years to look for signs of serious health problems. For instance, middle-aged patients may complain of a burning or sour taste in their mouths, which may lead the dentist to find signs of gastrointestinal reflux disease (GERD), in which stomach acid splashes back up into the throat and mouth. If so, the dentist may refer the patient to a doctor for treatment. Other signs of disease in the mouth include bad breath, bleeding gums that can be a symptom of onset diabetes, and red spots on the tongue that may be indicative of immune-related disorders.

This column is brought to you in the interest of better dental health. You can expect us to give you gentle, comforting care, using the most up-to-date dental techniques and equipment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer almost any type of dental treatment you might need, including the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. A dental x-ray may alert the dentist to signs of bone loss due to osteoporosis, in which case a bone density test would be in order.

Morrisette Defeats Stoughton, Canton

By CHRIS POISSON

Good times at the end of last week for the Morrisette American Legion baseball team.

Not only did it secure its first two wins of the season, it also had one of its players, Brian O'Hanley, chosen in the 2003 NHL Entry Draft.

The party, though, simmered down Monday night when Morrisette dropped another close contest this season with a 6-5 loss at West Roxbury.

"It was a good game," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "We just couldn't get the big hit. We had the bases loaded a couple of times. And we made a couple of errors that cost us."

"We're doing all right," he added. "We're in every game. We just have to get on a roll. We need to play a full week of baseball."

Morrisette (2-3-1), which traveled to Stoughton yesterday (Wednesday), will host Weymouth Friday at 5:45 and Quincy Sunday at 2 p.m., both games Kincaide Park.

Morrisette took a 1-0 lead in a wild first inning. The West Roxbury pitcher walked the bases loaded and after a fielder's choice for the second out, he walked Tom Hughes to bring home Don Cook.

After West Roxbury answered with a pair of runs in the bottom half, Morrisette struck three times in the second. Neal Gavin stroked an RBI single that scored Cook. Joe Priscella walked and Hughes sacrificed both runners with a bunt. Ray Marchand lined a two-run single for a 4-2 advantage.

West Roxbury scored a run in the bottom half. In the fifth it scored three runs for a 6-5 lead, capitalizing on several Morrisette errors. Morrisette added its final run in the seventh on Priscella's RBI groundout.

Anthony Boyle allowed six runs, only three earned, on seven hits in five innings. Hughes cam on in relief to finish the game.

Last Saturday, Morrisette rode the arm of John Folino to a 2-1 victory over Stoughton. Folino went the distance, allowing only two hits and no earned runs while striking out 10.

Trailing 1-0, Morrisette scored both runs in the sixth inning. Steve Priscella led off with a single, Pat Bregoli singled and Cook walked to load the bases. O'Hanley — adding to his memorable day — delivered the game-winning two-run single.

Last Friday, Morrisette rallied from a 6-0 deficit to pull out a 12-7 win over Canton.

John O'Connell pitched 5 1/3 innings for the win and Boyle finished the game for the save, yielding only a hit.

Down 6-3 in the fifth inning, Morrisette pushed across six runs to go ahead for good. Gavin laced an RBI triple that scored O'Hanley (single) and he scored on a wild pitch.

Hughes walked, Marchand singled and pinch-hitter Steve Sullivan ripped an RBI double to score Hughes. Marchand scored on a wild pitch. After Bregoli was hit by a pitch, Steve Priscella reached on a throwing error in which Sullivan and Bregoli scored.

Quincy Legion Off To 2-1 Start

Despite all the rainy weather the American Legion baseball season is underway and Quincy Post 95 is off to its best start in recent years with a 2-1 record.

Quincy, which was scheduled to play Milton Monday and Weymouth Wednesday, will travel to Braintree today (Thursday) and Canton Friday. It will battle rival Morrisette Sunday afternoon at 2 at Kincaide Park.

Quincy opened the season with a heartbreaking 4-3 loss to Milton. Three errors led to four unearned runs and three mental mistakes on the basepaths cut short other scoring opportunities.

Dean Sandonato shook off some early wildness to pitch a strong game. He took a 3-2 lead into the sixth inning only

Quarry Street Soccer Fields Dedicated In Memory Of Michael Therrien

An unannounced, unpublicized event recently drew a large crowd at the soccer fields on Quarry Street by word of mouth.

Approximately 60 to 70 people paid tribute to the late Michael Therrien, a longtime Quincy Youth Soccer coach and volunteer, when the city of Quincy dedicated a field in his memory.

Therrien, who coached for 10 years and served on the league's board of directors for four years, died in 1999 at age 40 after a six-month battle with cancer.

"The coaches and officials for our youth sports leagues in Quincy give immeasurable time and effort to providing our kids opportunities to have fun and keep off the streets," said Mayor William Phelan.

"As someone who grew up playing sports in Quincy, I understand the importance that coaches play in the lives of young people. I want to thank the Park and Recreation Board for recognizing the commitment that Michael Therrien made to the children of our city."

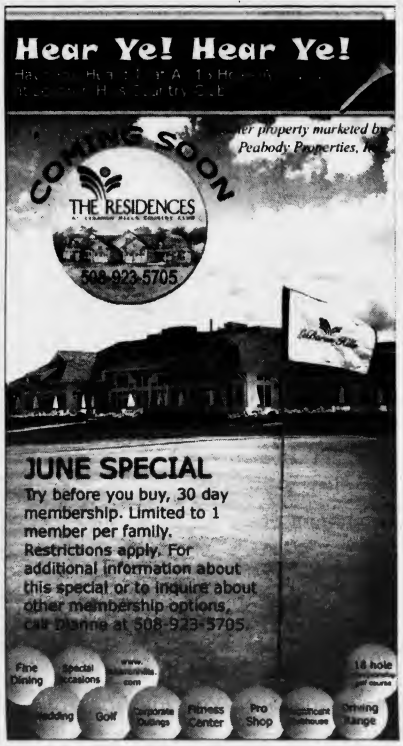
After the Quincy Parks Department completed construction of the soccer complex on Quarry Street, a group of girls Therrien coached suggested naming the fields after him. And 13 of the original 16 girls attended the dedication — even a former player who has since moved from the city.

The Quarry Street Soccer Complex— once the site of a former construction landfill — is home to two soccer fields. The "lower" field, a full-size soccer field, was dedicated in Therrien's honor with a sign and new flagpole.

"Mike always wanted to know, 'What are the kids getting out of it?,'" said Malcolm MacNeil, president of Quincy Youth Soccer. "The kids now have a beautiful new soccer field with Mike's name on it. I think he would be proud of this honor."

Therrien brought the Quincy Youth Soccer program into the 21st century with his computer savvy. The program was able to keep costs low for Quincy families and increase the number and amount of scholarships, in which two are now dedicated in his name.

"His passion was in coaching his teams," said his wife, Marie. "He loved to see the progression and the spirit of those he coached. Michael's legacy lives on at the field and his dedication to community service lives on in his children who all help where they can."



ATTENDING THE DEDICATION of the soccer fields at Quarry Street in Michael Therrien's memory were, from the left, Tom Koch, executive director of the Park, recreation and cemetery departments; Suzanne Therrien-Johnson, Malcolm MacNeil, president of Quincy Youth Soccer; wife Marie Therrien; children Kevin, Brendan, Breanne and Megan; Councillor Frank McCauley; and David Murphy, executive assistant to Mayor William Phelan.

First Nine Holes Open In Milton

Granite Links Golf Club Swings Into Action

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hill — once considered a "million dollar gamble" by its developers — is now the area's newest golf course touting tees, greens and fairways "second to none" in New England.

Nine of the course's eventual 27 holes opened last Friday in Milton with a ribbon cutting on the first tee box. The next nine holes in Quincy will be playable next spring and officials hope the remaining nine holes, also in Quincy, will be golf ready in the spring of 2005.

Friday's opening was viewed by municipal leaders from Quincy and Milton as well as Quarry Hills officials as a milestone for the 10-year project which developed one square mile — much of it the site of two former landfills — with dirt from Boston's Central Artery "Big Dig" construction project. On the Quincy side, two quarries, Granite Rail and Swingle's, are being filled and converted to golf terrain.

Peter O'Connell, one of the general partners of Quarry Hills Associates, Inc., the course developer, said the project has evolved from a "million dollar gamble" into an environmental jewel, that, when fully developed, will host a championship golf course with scenic views of the Blue Hills, Boston skyline and harbor. The spacious $8 million clubhouse will feature a restaurant and grill room, corporate meeting rooms, banquet facilities and patio seating as well as members' locker rooms and other amenities. Granite Links will also feature a full practice range, state-of-the-art training academy and short-game practice area.

Asked what has been the biggest challenge during the course development, O'Connell replied, "The thing that was most troubling is that it was extremely expensive to just even stay in the game. It was a million dollar gamble several years ago at a time when resources were precious, and they still are, but they were more precious then, and we never knew if we would get the Big Dig dirt. Getting the contract was a liberating moment."

Thirteen million tons of Big Dig dirt — hauled by truck from Boston to Quincy and Milton — were used to fill, cover and contour the site. That's enough dirt, O'Connell said, to fill trucks lined end-to-end from Quincy to California — and back.

"It's been a long and difficult technical job," O'Connell said as sunshine peered through early morning clouds on opening day. "The engineering costs have gone from a budgeted $1.5 million to $9 million, and that really sums it up. It's a very, very complex, technical job when you handle that much material, and have to get it in place, tested, compacted. It's a job that has taken far longer than any of us would like, but the Big Dig schedule really dictated that and I think we're comfortable that in a couple of years from now, we did what we wanted to do and that was to change a big piece of the landscape of Quincy and Milton.

"That's what it's all about and that's why I got involved," he added.

Making the course unique, course officials said, is the topography which rises to 300 feet above sea level, distant views and close proximity — less than seven miles — to downtown Boston.

"It was built with high quality standards," O'Connell said. "It's not a typical golf course. It's such an exciting topography: We have quarries, we have hills, we have water features, we have all kinds of things.

"It's a challenging course. It's not for someone who really doesn't really enjoy a challenge. And the views are spectacular, looking down on the City of Boston, the ocean, the Blue Hills. Being so close to Boston and being able to develop over a square mile is really a great opportunity.

"This is one of the jewels that will survive long after we're gone," he added.

Stan Abrams of Senior Tour Players, Inc., the course manager, called Quarry Links a "beautiful, beautiful course" with tees, greens and fairways "second to none" in New England. "It's one of the best designed," said Abrams, who has been involved in golf course management since 1982.

Abrams noted Quarry Links has received rave reviews, including one glowing endorsement from television golf analyst Johnny Miller, former U.S. Open and British Open champion, who recently toured the course.

"(Miller) was really awestruck by the course. He said No. 9 is exactly how he would have designed it." That hole is a long Par 4 protected by water and a well-bunkered green.

Abrams said Miller also "loved all the other holes, the views, and the proximity to a major city.

"He was overwhelmed by it. He doesn't give praise too easily."

Avid golfer Ron Affsa of Quincy, a member of the course advisory committee and first member of the semi-private course, was equally enthusiastic about Granite Links.

"I love it. I've golfed up there five times already, including Sunday before the rain came," he told The Sun Tuesday before heading to the golf course again.

Abrams said he expects many golfers to return to the course again and again.

"I will bet that every player who plays here today will play it again in the next couple of weeks. They will want to come back. It's sensational."

Mayor William Phelan called the opening a "good beginning" moments before hitting the first drive at Granite Links.

"I think it's positive. I think what it shows is the light at the end of the tunnel in terms of the completion of the golf course. It's also more importantly the beginning of the revenues coming into the city for this project. A lot of revenues have gone out of this city to build this — we want to see some of them come back into the city coffers," the mayor said, adding the development strides have been remarkable this year.

Under the city's lease agreement with the course, Quincy will receive 10 percent of all golf income annually over the next 50 years.

"(The opening) is an indication I think to everybody who didn't think it was going to be completed that there will be a finished 18 to 27 hole golf course within the next year and half or so," Phelan said.

"The progress has been remarkable in the last six months, they've been really working hard making a whole lot of progress. We have the ball fields pretty much all seeded on Quincy side and it's just a good day," the mayor added.

Others attending the opening ceremony included two other general partners of the golf course development company, Bill O'Connell and Chick Geilich; former Mayor Walter Hannon and his son, Walter Hannon, III, both limited partners; golf course professional Chris Sleeper, golf course superintendent Dan Bastille and a gallery of local media.

While the course may remind some of links in Scotland because of the hilly terrain and deep rough along the fairways, the unmistakable feature is granite outcroppings left in strategic areas.

"The use of the granite that we've left in a lot of areas make it fantastic," Abrams said pointing to one such outcropping on the ninth fairway. "I've seen golf courses in Palm Springs where they've used people from Disney to create rocks and things like that artificially and it costs a fortune. We have that here naturally. The trees that are here on certain holes, just the terrain, the up and down, that make it very, very spectacular."

The course, designed by course architect John Stanford, mandates the use of golf carts because of the hills.

Granite Links is currently offering a limited number of memberships. To date, the club has sold out Phase I and is now offering a Phase II level of membership.

The golf course offers Quincy residents discounted green and cart fees Monday through Thursdays: $33 for 9 holes and $51 for 18 holes. Friday, Saturday and Sunday rates are $50 for 9 holes and $75 for 18 holes for all golfers. Twilight rates (after 3 p.m.) are lower weekdays and weekends for all golfers.

The temporary entrance to Granite Links Golf Club is located on Route 28 North/Randolph Ave. in Milton, 2.8 miles off Route 128, Exit 5B. For information about tee times, outings and membership, call 617-296-7600.

Abrams said Senior Tours Players hopes to attract an LPGA, Champions (formerly Senior PGA) and a golf exhibition featuring some of the world's greatest golfers. For instance, two Thanksgivings ago, Senior Tours Players, Inc. produced for television a Hall of Fame Classic pairing 10 Hall of Fame men and 10 Hall of Fame women golfers. "That's the kind of event we'd like to get — an unofficial PGA event. We also have a chance to get a Champions Tour and an LPGA Tour event."

For now, Abrams said, "everybody who comes up here loves it. Part of it is they don't have any kind of particular expectation because they don't know what's here. Then they get up on the hill and they are blown away. It's very exciting. I've been in the business since 1982 representing pros like Sam Snead, Chi Chi Rodriguez, and doing things with Johnny Miller, but there's never been a location that comes close to this — not even close."

Quincy-Morrisette Sunday

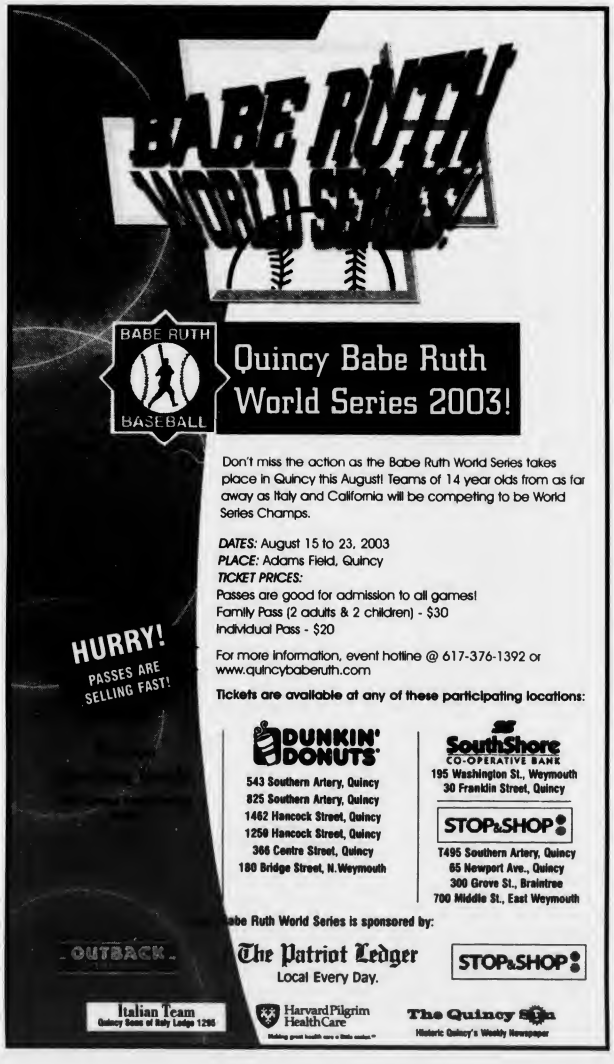
to see Milton tie the game on a two-out infield error. Another wild throw with two outs in the seventh gave Milton the victory.

Tri-captain Dennis Thomson provided all of Quincy's runs with a three-run homer over the left field fence in the fourth inning. Tri-captain Mike Feetham smacked two doubles, tri-captain Pat Jaehnig had two singles, and Dom Delgardo and John Fitzgerald each hit safely. Kevin Richardson did a solid job filling in behind the plate.

Quincy upset preseason favorite Weymouth, 2-1, in an exciting late-inning victory. John Santon tossed five innings of one-hit ball before a blister forced him out of the game in the sixth. Sandonato picked up the victory in relief.

Quincy struck first in the third inning when Jaehnig crushed a double and scored on Brendan McDonald's single.

Weymouth tied the game in the sixth and could've had more runs. Fitzgerald, though, made a heads-up play at second base. With the bases loaded he charged a slow hit grounder, tagged the runner heading to second and threw to first for one of three double plays turned by the defense. Steve Williams also gunned down three runners from behind the plate.



In the seventh, Thomson started things off with a hustling infield single as he dove head first into the base to avoid a tag. With two strikes, David Jaehnig laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt. After an intentional walk to Pat Jaehnig loaded the bases, McDonald hit a rubber toward third base and Thomson scored in a cloud of dust to set off the celebration.

Quincy made it two straight as it edged Cohasset, 2-1. Feetham, who looked a little rusty with his control, picked up the win by scattering four hits and striking out seven.

Quincy scored first in the third inning when Thomson (2 hits) singled, reached second on a poor throw and scored on David Jaehnig's single. Quincy added two more runs in the fourth on an RBI single by Williams, who reached third on Delgardo's single and scored on a wild pitch.

Other members of this year's team are: Sean Sullivan, Andrew Loud, Paul Capson, Scott Flaherty, Matt Jaehnig and Matthew Tobin

Mark Jaehnig returns for his second season as manager and is looking to improve upon last year's 5-15 campaign. Lenny Seitz will serve as coach, Charlie Jaehnig, scorekeeper; and Andrew Jaehnig, bat boy.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said, "It takes a great man to make a good listener."

Good listeners are hard to find. Why is this so? Probably because we all love to talk. Listening requires patience, attention, concentration and energy. It is something to be cultivated and the best place to start is with ourselves. Not only do we learn while we listen, but, by listening we pay a high compliment to the person speaking. Few experiences give an individual more reassurance than to find someone who will listen sympathetically and intelligently to his problems.

The Roman philosopher Seneca once said, "Year after year anguished souls cry out... For who listens to us in all the world, whether he be friend or teacher, brother, father, mother, sister, or neighbor, husband or wife ... Those who are dearest to us? ... To whom can a man say, here I am... Listen to me... for a moment... Lest I expire in my terrible wilderness, my lonely silence... O, God, is there no one to listen?"

Today you may be the one who can best answer that desperate and lonely cry from your someone in your home, in your neighborhood, among your friends, at your work or in your school ...

Wollaston Beach Volleyball July 19

The fifth annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge will be held on the southern end of Wollaston Beach Saturday, July 19, beginning at 10 a.m.

Interested teams and individuals are encouraged to sign up now. Up to 16 co-ed adult teams can compete in the event. Teams must consist of three men and three women. One male and one female alternate on each team are permissible.

Registration costs $100 per team. Interested teams should sign up by calling 617-376-1355 or visiting Tony's Clam Shop. Proceeds will go to the Wollaston Beach Clean-Up Fund designed to promote educational and recreation events along Wollaston Beach.

"It's hard to believe that we are already celebrating the fifth year of this tournament," said Doug Gutro, Ward 5 councillor and co-organizer of the tournament.

In the past, businesses, political candidates, city departments, civic groups and individuals have sponsored teams.

"Although teams sponsored by local businesses have fared better overall, you just can't beat the excitement of watching political candidates square off on the volleyball court," Gutro said. "And with the growing field of political candidates this year, we should have some pretty spirited competition."

Karen Djerf, co-owner of Tony's Clam Shop and tournament co-organizer, said: "Now more than ever, we want people to continue to come back to Wollaston Beach. We've been a proud sponsor of this event since the beginning and it really does generate excitement for Wollaston Beach."

Jim Rendle, North Quincy High School girls' volleyball coach, volunteers his time as the head official. There will be three nets with constant play in this double-elimination tournament. Local sponsors contribute to provide free volleyball T-shirts to the first 100 players registered and prizes for the winners and runners-up.

Sheets: Did Nothing Wrong

hard drives containing more than 5,000 erased files that were restored by forensic techniques were also delivered to the Feds.

Sheets explained his role in the confusion over the files to The Quincy Sun:

"I asked the city solicitor what to do with my personal notes. He said, 'They're personal. Take them off the computer and keep them.' I told my staff to do the same.

"As mayor, I created three private non-profit corporations — the Naval Shipbuilding Museum (the USS Salem), the Elderly Housing Corp. (Squantum Gardens) and Quincy 2000.

"I had a drawer and a half of Salem material. I'm still chairman of the corporation. The same for the Elderly Housing Corp.

"There were a few documents regarding the founding of Quincy 2000. I intend to write something on it later on.

"All the rest exists in other parts of City Hall. If I have them, I'd be glad to turn them over to Phelan or anyone else who wants them."

Mayor Phelan declined to comment on the report.

"The report speaks for itself," he said. "This administration is moving forward, not backward."

Inspector General Sullivan's office conducted extensive interviews of Sheets, particularly involving a "chronicle" or personal notes that the former mayor kept during his tenure in office from 1990 to 2002.

Sheets told investigators that, when he first took office, he asked the city solicitor about ownership of the 'chronicle' and McGrath assured him it would be his personal property.

"He stated that at the time he left office, his 'chronicle' contained 12 years of notes as former mayor, which consisted of synopses of every meeting, personal comments and private conversations," said the report.

"Former Mayor Sheets stated that he was concerned about sharing his 'chronicle' because of confidentiality agreements he made with certain unnamed individuals.

"The 'chronicle' included private conversations, references to projects between unions and the former mayor's office and his own personal comments about people that he met."

In addition to the Shipbuilding Museum, Squantum Gardens and Quincy 2000 material, the files in his possession included those involving:

The Southeastern Massachusetts Atlantic Canadian Mayors Association, the National Boating Safety Advisory Council, speeches, travel receipts and a tax classification booklet.

Personal property included: Scrapbooks dating back to his days on the City Council, 32 photo albums with 7,000 pictures of him performing his official duties as mayor (paid for by the Committee to Elect Jim Sheets), a printed copy on his 'chronicle,' and six boxes of college lectures.

Sheets said he met with Phelan four times after the November, 2001, election but, since then, Phelan has never requested his assistance.

"He (Sheets) said that his staff had no one to communicate with regarding transitional issues because of the late appointment of Mayor Phelan's staff," said the report.

"Former Mayor Sheets stated that no one from the present administration has asked or called about files, computers, etc. and that he 'would assist them tomorrow if asked.'"

Sheets told investigators he had no records in his possession pertaining to the Quarry Hill Golf Course project or the High Point Housing project or the Faxon Park High School project..

The Inspector General's report recommended that in the future, the city solicitor and the city clerk "should ensure strict adherence to the requirements of state law."

The law in question reads:

"Whoever has custody of any public records shall, upon expiration of his term of office, employment or authority deliver over the his successor all such records which he is not authorized by law to retain, and shall make oath that he has so delivered them, accordingly as they are the records of the commonwealth or of a county, city or town, before the state secretary, the clerk of the county commissioners or the city or town clerk, who shall, respectively, make a record of such oath."

Sullivan further recommended that "the city solicitor and the city clerk should jointly schedule periodic training to ensure that all city employees are fully apprised of their obligations under the Public Records Law."

And that they should "create and disseminate to all employees an appropriate computer user responsibility policy including but not limited to defining:

"• Acceptable and unacceptable uses.

"• That there is no expectation of privacy with respect to information stored in these computers; and

"• Use of the computer system is consent to the policy."

Coyote Attack

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Another Landsdowne Street resident, former School Committee member Mary Collins, had a coyote shadow her on the street until police drove the animal away.

Morrissey said he had his staff investigate to determine if coyotes could be removed from the endangered species list and found that it wasn't on the list to begin with.

"There's even a hunting season for coyotes, Jan. 1 through Feb. 28," he said. "If they threaten you, you're free to destroy them.

"It doesn't do much good to catch and relocate them. They've been known to travel 50 miles in a night. They tagged one in Quincy a while back and he turned up as far away as Revere."

The best defense against coyotes, said Morrissey, is not to leave food out and take your pets in the house after dark.

"They only stay in an area if there is food," he said. "If there is nothing to eat after two days, they're gone. Make sure you lock up your trash and get animals inside at night."

Morrissey figures that the Squantum coyotes originated in Marina Bay and were driven out by the development activity and set up housekeeping in the marshes and hummocks surrounding the Squantum peninsula.
